Parade Sets Gay Theme For May In Marin

Brisk Winds Add Spirit To March; 1st In 8 Years

Horses prancing to the beat of military bands, smart-stepping soldiers and sailors and Old Glory flapping in a hard, fresh breeze invaded San Rafael today in the city's first major parade in eight years.

About 2,000 spectators braved the cold, north wind to see the colorful show. The carnival atmosphere set the stage for May in Marin, a month-long series of cultural and entertainment events coordinated by the Marin Visitor's Bureau.

7 PRINCESSES

Seven of Marin's 10 cities entered princesses in the march. Each rode in an open car, waving to admirers.

Also strongly in evidence were elected officials. County supervisors rode in five separate cars near the front of the column. At the very front was San Rafael Police Chief Charles J. Chiesa, playing the siren of his patrol car frequently to warn pedestrians to the curb.

Marin's Marin Corps Reserve's marching unit was followed by a command car spewing clouds of pink and yellow smoke screen that quickly spread down the street on the gusty wind.

LAST PARADE

The last major parade in San Rafael was in the fall of 1956, marking the opening of the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

Today's show had scores of mounted units, many colorful floats and 10 marching bands.

Rain, predicted for today, held off during the parade, and the brisk wind added spirit to the march.

The Weather Bureau predicted showers tonight, but said there would be clear skies tomorrow.

Other May in Marin events include a concert by the Sweet Adelines at 8 p.m. today at San Rafael High School, the Stinson Beach Annual Wild Flower Show from noon to 5 p.m. tomorrow, the Veterans of Foreign Wars Loyalty Day Parade in Novato at 1 p.m. tomorrow and wine tasting at the San Rafael Elks Club from 3:30 to 6 p.m. tomorrow.

Carrier Partially Refloated; U. S. Probes Explosion

SAIGON (AP)—The USS Card, World War II aircraft carrier credited with seven Nazi U-boat kills, was sunk by an explosion today. But she was partially refloated by the high tide in Saigon harbor.

Divers who inspected the gaping hole in the baby flattop said they could not determine yet whether the blast that sent her down in the Saigon River was external or internal.

American authorities were investigating three possible causes: A Communist bomb attached to the outside; sabotage committeed by one of the all-civilian crew or a malfunction in the engine room.

All 73 crewmen escaped injury when the predawn explosion tore a hole in the vessel and settled her on the bottom of the 48-foot-deep river.

Only the Card's flight deck and superstructure showed above water for several hours after the blast at low tide. But with the incoming tide at midday, the Card's keel broke free of the muddy bottom and she was partially refloated although still riding low in the water.

Makeshift patching of the hole had slowed the inflow of water, U.S. authorities said, and pumps were working furiously in the flooded engine room in the hope the Card could be kept from going to the bottom again.

The keel's breaking free with the tide indicated there was still enough boyancy in the ship to keep her afloat if the pumps could win the race with the incoming water.

U.S. authorities first assumed that Communist Viet Cong terrorists swam or crawled under the wharf where the Card was docked, attached an explosive and detonated it electrically.

However, after divers could not determine whether the explosion was shipboard or from without, attention was also turned to the possibilities of sabotage by one of the all-civilian crew or a mechanical

Compromise Is Reached For Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—Neutralist Premier Souvanna Phouma said today the right-wing of Laos' coalition government has agreed to place its military forces under his command. He said he would fly to Communist headquarters tomorrow to seek a similar agreement.

Approval by the Communits Pathet Lao could solve the crisis created on April 19 when rebellious right-wing generals seized control in a military coup.

Souvanna, in his first news conference since the coup, said he reached a compromise with right-wing leaders Gen. Phoumi Nosavan and Prince Boun Oum in which they agreed to dissolve their separate military command and place troops under the defense ministry.

Although the premier did not mention what concessions were given the right-wing, reliable sources said they included greater representation on the cabinet.

Bomb Blast Wounds Eight GIs In Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — A bomb blast tonight wounded eight Americans — five officers and three enlisted men — on a Saigon boulevard in sight of a U.S. aircraft ferry crippled and temporarily sunk by a predawn explosion.

Security officers blamed the incident on the Communist Viet Cong, considering them studied attacks of the May Day weekend.

Identification of the casualties of the bomb attack was temporarily withheld. Four of them were hospitalized. The others were treated at an American dispensary and dismissed.

One Vietnamese also was wounded by a fragment.

High tide at noon and laboring pumps freed the Card from the bottom muck of the river.

A man either in a car or on a bicycle—witnesses disagreed — hurled the grenade into a street running alongside the riverfront in the downtown area.

The full blast hit one man in the back. Fragments injured the others. American and Vietnamese security officers rushed to the scene, about 200 yards from the U.S. embassy. Ambulances carried the wounded to a hospital.

Brothers Put Out Home Fire

Two Lagunitas brothers used a garden hose yesterday to put out a fire which broke out when they were making french fries at the Center Avenue home of Samuel LeCount, a counselor at College of Marin.

Damage to the kitchen and its contents was estimated by LeCount at $750.

Marin County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom praised the quick action of George King, 20, and Paul King, 18, but took the occasion to urge householders not to fight fires without calling the fire department.

"They did a fine job," Bloom said, "but it could have been serious. They could have lost that home."

LeCount who was not home at the time of the fire, notified the county fire department at 7:13 p.m. that the incident had occurred at approximately 6 p.m.

The King brothers have lived at LeCount's home for two months, Bloom said.

WINDSOR, England (UPI) — Prince Edward Antony Richard Louis, infant son of Queen Elizabeth II, was christened today in an Anglican church ceremony.

The seven-week old prince gave a little cry when sprinkled with water from the River Jordan in the Holy Land at the baptismal font in the queen's private chapel.

Some Seashore Facilities Due By Fall, Clausen Told On Tour

By WAT TAKESHITA

About 50 picnic sites and parking for 200 cars should be completed by August or September at Point Reyes Beach just north of the lighthouse, national park officials revealed during a tour of the Point Reyes National Seashore yesterday afternoon.

During next year, permanent comfort stations will be installed at Drake's Beach, and the Limantour Beach area will have some parking spaces and comfort stations.

These disclosures were made by George B. Hartzog Jr., director of the National Park Service, and Fred W. Binnewies, director of the Point Reyes Seashore. (See also page 2.)

Rep. Don H. Clausen (R-Crescent City) brought Hartzog from Washington to inspect the new national park, especially the badly needed access road.

Other officials on the inspection tour included:

E. A. Hummel of San Rafael, regional director of the National Park Service; Supervisors William Gnoss and George H. Ludy; County Planning Commissioner H. C. Hankins; Raymond E. Paschke, Clausen's field representative; and Carney Campion, Redwood Empire Assn. general manager.

Binnewies stressed repeatedly, "We are not encouraging people to come here yet because the access road and facilities are not yet ready."

Hartzog said the primary aim now is to build the access road, from Bear Valley Road, over the ridge, and down to Limantour spit.

An appropriation of $750,000 has been authorized for initial construction, but Hertzog said he does not know whether this will be enough for the access road. Park officials are now making an engineering study of the access route.

Clausen reported that of the 14 million dollars authorized for land acquisition at the Seashore 7 million dollars has been allocated and he is now in the process of pushing the second 7 million dollars through Congress.

Corwin Mocine and Barbara Eastman, representatives of the Inverness Park Improvement Assn., met the touring party at the Seashore headquarters. They asked that the main entrance road be given top priority because the road through Inverness is already overloaded.

Mrs. Eastman said Balboa Road is not the logical en-

Churchgoers In Protest On Gradual Integration

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Hundreds of Methodist churchgoers from throughout the country staged a dramatic protest in downtown Pittsburgh today against their church's stand for voluntary, gradual integration, saying it was inadequate.

They poured into the city last night by bus, plane, train and car from as far away as Chicago, Detroit, Birmingham, Atlanta and Jackson, Miss.

An estimated, 1,300 persons, white and Negro, many of them teen-agers, filled two downtown churches for an all-night vigil of prayers, sermons and hymn singing.

They started arriving just hours after the church's General Conference, meeting in its quadriennial session, adopted a voluntary plan to remove racial barriers.

The plan calls for transfer over the next four years of the church's Central jurisdiction, which represents some 375,000 Negroes, into the five other jurisdictions which are drawn on geographical lines. No enforcement mechanism was provided.

The plan passed by an overwhelming standing vote. But many of the 900 delegates feel it does not go far enough or fast enough.

One minister called it "very definitely a Southern victory."

Ralph Roy, a layman from New York City, said the pilgrimage had been planned for several months.

"We are not so much protesting what they did," he said. "We are protesting the mood of the conference which was unwilling to move forthrightly for integration of the Methodist Church."

Immediately after yesterday's vote some integrationists said they would push for a stronger program before the conference ends next Friday.

$1,000 In Golf Clubs Stolen

More than $1,000 worth of golfing equipment was taken from three cars in the parking lot at Marin Golf and County Club in Novato yesterday.

The victims, Robert William Martin and Henry James Thatcher of San Jose and Harold L. Carpenter of Cupertino, Santa Clara County, reported the thefts to Novato police at 6:30 p.m. yesterday.

Each man lost golf bag and a set of golf clubs, Thatcher's wallet containing $400 and credit cards and Martin's 35-milimeter camera with leather case also were reported missing. The thefts occured between 3:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Building Collapses —At Least 10 Die

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—At least 10 persons were killed and 20 others seriously injured today as part of a four-story building under repair work collapsed in a slum area here.

About 200 policemen and fire fighters searched the debris for other possible victims. Most of the victims were residents of several adjacent shacks.

Cyprus Calm Lingers On

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The calm that has settled over Cyprus lingered on today with only a few shots reported round the island during the night.

Greek Cypriots, who spent up to seven hours in church on the Greek Orthodox Good Friday, began celebrating Easter weekend this morning and their newspapers closed down for a four-day holiday.

During the night scattered shots were reported by the United Nations in Nicosia in the Kyrenia range and at Ambelikou and near Xeros, both west of Nicosia. There were no reports of casualties.

A City Built 1,500 Years Before Christ Unearthed

BERKELEY (AP) — A city built 1,500 years before Christ, where some of the most ancient artifacts in Jewish history are being unearthed in Israel, was described by an archeologist yesterday.

The disclosures were made at a news conference of the Institute for Mediterranean Studies, conducted by its director, Richard A. Mitchell.

The excavation, he said, is situated on the northern edge of the Negev Desert across hillsides where men of the time of Abraham and Isaac grazed their flocks.

Mitchell said pottery, tombs, homes, animal bones and grain have been dug from the city's layers of rocks and compacted sand. They were imbedded there up to 3,500 years ago, he said.

In the ruins, Mitchell said, the Arabs of the middle ages left a caravan station. Jews from the Iron Age, from the 10th to the 17th centuries B.C., left a village. An Indo-European people called Hyksos left a wealthy, fortified city there in the 18th and 17th centuries B.C. Even further back, he said, Bronze Age people lived there.

The excavation is on a stony foothill called Tell Nagilla.

Gold Miners Trapped

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—Seven African gold miners were reported trapped underground today in the Geduld mine in Orange Free State. Little hope was held for their survival.

Weather Hampers Air Search For Downed Plane

A ground and air search, hampered by rain, snow and poor visibility, continued today in the snowbound Sierras for a missing Air National Guard plane with two men aboard.

The plane has been missing since Thursday when it left Stockton enroute to an airport at the south end of Lake Tahoe.

Air Rescue at Hamilton Air Force Base reported that 24 planes, mostly from Air National Guard units at Stockton and Sacramento, are searching relays today.

Lt. Col Robert L. Stimson, 45, of the 49th Aviation Battalion at Mather AFB, and the pilot, William J. Becker, 41, of the 49th were aboard the light plane. Both live in Stockton.

Trains Sideswipe; At Least 10 hurt

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn (UPI) — Two Great Northern trains traveling in opposite directions sideswiped today, injuring at least 10 persons.

A railroad spokesman said 23 cars were knocked off the tracks. Only the rear two cars of the Western Star, a mail-passenger train, remained on the tracks, he said.

An employee of an ambulance company said 10 injured persons had been taken to Methodist Hospital.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Truman Says Go Easy On Campaign

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP)—Harry Truman, who never gave or asked quarter in his own political campaigns, wants this year's presidential candidates to use "discretion in their oratory."

Truman

The former president, who won the 1948 presidential election with a blistering campaign that brought on one of the biggest upsets of the century, was feted yesterday in one of three scheduled birthday celebrations. He will be 80 May 8.

The 700 persons who attended the "farmers' tribute" to the still vigorous ex-president were a little surprised when he told them: "As we approach the heat of the contest, I hope that the candidates and their spokesmen use discretion in their campaign oratory, that they not sacrifice our national interest for the sake of narrow partisan political advantage."

Married Man To Become Priest

ROME (AP)—Ernest A. Beck, former Lutheran minister, has been granted a special dispensation by Pope Paul VI to become a Roman Catholic priest.

Beck

Beck, a native of Detroit, Mich., is married and has two children, Michael, 13, and Monica, 9.

Beck, 39, has served as pastor of Lutheran churches in Texas and New Jersey. He was converted to Catholicism in 1954 and will be ordained for the Mainz, Germany, diocese.

He is the first American to receive Papal dispensation to become a full priest while retaining all the rights of marriage. Five Protestant ministers of other nationalities have received similar dispensations.

Texans To Polls In Bitter Primary

AUSTIN (UPI)—An expected 1.5 million Texans were to vote today in Democratic and Republican primaries enlivened by campaign charges that convicted fertilizer king Billie Sol Estes gave U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough $50,000 in 1960.

Yarborough

Yarborough, running for the Democratic nomination against Gordon McLendon, a Dallas radio station executive, charged that it was a "$50,000 lie." Yarborough announced yesterday that one of two purported witnesses had confessed to the FBI that he lied.

The bitter two-man Senate contest on the Democratic ballot and a presidential preference poll on the Republican ballot drew major interest in the primary.

Even opponents of U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) conceded that he will win the GOP preferential primary against New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith and Harold E. Stassen.

Lady Astor Succumbs At 84

LONDON (AP)—Nancy, Lady Astor, the Virginia belle who despised liquor, but loved politics so much she became the first woman to sit in Britain's Parliament, died today. She would have been 85 on May 19.

The woman whose acid wit riled countless Britons and delighted countless others during her quarter of a century in Parliament died at Grimsthorpe Castle, the Lincolnshire home of her daughter, Lady Ancaster, northeast of London.

The exact nature of her illness was not disclosed, but a member of her household said: "This is not a sudden thing. It is just old age."

Yiddish Writer Dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Aaron Nissenson, 66, Yiddish poet, novelist and essayist, died yesterday after a two-month illness. Nisseson, who wrote eight volumes of poetry and dramatic verse, was born in Russia and came to the United States in 1911. His first major work in English, "Song of Man," a novel about Socialist leader Eugene V. Debs, was published this spring.

Man, Nature Share Marin May Spotlight

Works of man and works of nature shared the spotlight at yesterday's kickoff luncheon for the first "May in Marin" celebration.

George B. Hartzog Jr., director of the National Park Service, described the probable impact of the Point Reyes National Seashore, predicting that neighboring property may increase 50 to 100 times in value, based on conservation developments such as Cape Hatteras.

"A couple of dozen tourists spending a day at the seashore would add as much to local economy as a $100,000-a-year industry," Hartzog said.

Land values already are climbing in the Point Reyes area, he reported; he has already told Congress that more than the originally approved 14 million dollars will be needed to complete the planned 27,000-acre conservation project.

The Marin seashore, Padres Island, Tex., and the Cape Cod seashore mark a turning point in federal conservation efforts, Hartzog explained. It is the first time the government has bought private lands to preserve natural areas, rather than "carving them out of public domain."

The government has already earmarked seven million dollars for the Point Reyes project and Congress is being asked to appropriate another seven million for land purchase.

As for the immediate future, Hartzog revealed that he has approved a survey for the main access road, and set aside $750,000 for its construction. This fiscal year, $200,000 will be spent to develop picnic areas, campsites, sheltered overlooks and other features of the park, which already has attracted thousands of visitors — and aroused neighbors' ire—before it is officially open.

Fiscal 1965 will see his office asking Congress for another $750,000 in development funds, the official said.

The National Park Service is working on a master plan for the seashore which will tie in with the county's West Marin master plan, Hartzog assured. "We're your neighbors and your partners," in the area's future, he said.

Congress is also being asked to help by providing matching-basis funds for state planning on recreation areas, as "a means of acquiring them ahead of the bulldozers."

The National Park Service is using a National Geographic Society grant to study preservation of the coastal redwood areas, and also is planning for the future of California's channel islands and the Whiskeytown and Shasta nature and historical areas, the official added.

"Unless we plan wisely, act promptly, our opportunities to preserve America's great natural, scientific and historical heritage may disappear. There can be an end to the beauties we inherited," Hartzog warned.

The park official's keynote speech for the May in Marin luncheon was preceded by a thoroughgoing review of the cultural events highlighting the month-long celebration, beginning with a concert at Peacock Gap Country Club today and tomorrow's San Rafael parade. Contributions from cultural and civic groups in every Marin community were previewed.

Master of ceremonies Allen L. Oddie, Marin Visitors Bureau official, introduced spokesmen who described each event for the more than 400 persons who attended the kickoff luncheon at Dominic's.

Others who spoke briefly included Rep. Don H. Clausen, Point Reyes seashore director Fred W. Binnewies, Board of Supervisors Chairman William A. Gnoss, San Rafael Mayor John F. McInnis, and Marin Visitors Bureau President Charles D. Helbig.

Mrs. Esther M. Dearth, chairman of the visitors bureau board of directors, was presented with a special award honoring her efforts in sparking the first "May in Marin."

Fears Dispelled

PACIFIC PALISADES (AP) — Fears that persons in cars may have been buried in a landslide were dispelled yesterday when crews dug through dirt and stones and found nothing but highway.

The landslide yesterday afternoon sent about 2,500 cubic yards of earth over both northbound lanes of Pacific Coast Highway.

The debris, in some places eight feet deep, was cleared away by early morning today and traffic returned to normal.

Successful Season

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service said today the ski season just drawing to a close was the most successful ever in California's national forests. A total of 1,183,000 visitor days were recorded at the 40 developed ski resort areas.

Hepatitis 'Aids' Sewer District Plan

A case of infectuous Hepatitis may have given the county the lever it needs to force an assessment district for sewers in Tamalpais Woods subdivision.

Willian L. Desmond, head of the sanitation division of the health department, has requested that the board of supervisors allow him to refuse all new septic tank permits in the area, thus cutting off new construction, until an adequate petition for the sewer assessment district had been signed.

Last Tuesday, the board said the Tamalpais Sanitary District could force an assessment district, regardless of the number of names on the petition. Desmond said he doubted the district would go along with the idea.

In a meeting that evening with sanitary district directors, Desmond said, the board sidestepped the issue for the time being.

Desmond has complained that several existing septic tanks in the area of Spring Road have failed and that raw sewage is running down Spring Road. Now, Desmond reports, a child has been found to have infectuous hepatitis.

The owners of the failing septic tank believed responsible have been ordered to start pumping out their septic tank, daily if necessary, to keep raw sewage off the street. Owners of other failing septic tanks in the area can expect to receive similar orders too.

But Desmond said yesterday he now has the authority to order the sanitary district to take steps to install a sewer as soon as possible. The directors have set up a meeting with their engineer to see if sewer facilities could be installed in the area where there is now an adequate petition.

Kennedy Bonds

BOSTON (UPI)—An uncle of the late President John F. Kennedy was among the first persons to buy a $75 U.S. savings bond bearing the picture of the assassinated president. Thomas A. Fitzgerald of Dorchester was the first person to buy the new issue at a Dorchester branch bank. Fitzgerald is the brother of Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy.

Stassen Renews Bid For Primary

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Harold Stassen renewed his bid for a place in California's June 2 presidential primary yesterday by challenging Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater's right to appear on the Republican primary ballot.

Stassen's Philadelphia law partner, Roger Johnsen, filed a petition in U.S. District Court which, in effect, demanded that Stassen's name be added to the ballot or Goldwater's removed.

The petition charged that California Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan, a strong Goldwater supporter, had accepted signatures on the Arizona senator's nomination papers with the same technical deficiencies for which many of Stassen's signatures were rejected.

U. S. District Judge Alfonso J. Zirpoli set Friday for a hearing on the Stassen petition. Johnsen said he would ask Monday for a temporary restraining order halting election preparations until the issue is resolved.

Engle's Health

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The office of Sen. Clair Engle said today the ailing California Democrat should be able to leave the hospital by the end of next week if he continues to improve as expected.

Fairfax School Board Approves Pay Raises

The Fairfax School District board last night approved pay raises for school principals averaging 7 per cent.

The salary schedule for principals now ranges from $9,825 to $11,575, reported Supt. Homer Sisk.

With the raises the budget for principals will increase from $30,600 to $32,975, Sisk said.

Thomas Kelly, principal at Fairfax Central School, will receive an $875 raise to $10,325; Bruce McDonald, principal at Deer Park School, will receive an $875 raise to $11,575; and Kenneth Lucas, principal at Manor School, will receive a $625 raise to $11,075.

Sisk reported that the tentative 1964-65 operating budget is at $427,050, as compared to $365,977 for the current year.

The new figure includes salaries for five new teachers, plus the hiring of a psychologist and school nurse, he said.

The board previously granted teachers a pay increase of 3 to 4 per cent, and granted non-teaching employees a 3 per cent pay increase.

The board will meet again May 19.

Three Cars In Chain-Reaction Auto Collisions

Three cars were involved in chain-reaction collisions at 1:10 p.m. yesterday after the first driver reportedly slowed down because of three peacocks crossing Highway 101, a quarter-of-a-mile south of the Marinwood overpass.

Frank J. Hainze, 68, of 317 Laurel Place, San Rafael, told the California Highway Patrol he was driving north when he slowed down because the car in front of him had slowed for the peacocks.

Cars driven by John E. Eyler, 22, of 1166 Center Road, Novato, and John Harry Dray, 21, of Petaluma collided behind the Hainze car, according to the CHP.

Hainze, who suffered a shoulder bruise, was taken to San Rafael General Hospital for observation and sent home. Eyler, who suffered a scraped right knee, refused treatment, the CHP reported.

Driver Is Fined

trance. She is also opposed to the transfer of Drake's and McClure's Beaches to the National Park Service until a new access can be provided to take the pressure off Inverness Road (Sir Francis Drake Boulevard).

Hartzog revealed that a study of a possible Redwoods National Park in the Redwood Empire is underway and a report is expected this summer. However, he had no details until after the study is completed.

Clausen explained that Congress is faced with a myriad requests for funds, and Redwoods National Park, if approved, would be another source of competition. "However, my personal priority will be on the Point Reyes Seashore because that is where the population pressures now exist," said Clausen.

Park officials see Limantour Bay as the logical center of recreation at the Seashore because of its long stretch of sandy beach. Long range plans there include an amphitheater, a dredged interior swimming beach that would be warm and safe, and a food and refreshment concession. But these are several years away, Binnewies emphasized.

Registration Set For Kindergarten

Despite the fact there may be no kindergarten classes in the Larkspur School District next fall, registration for kindergarten children will be held at the four schools in the district Wednesday and Thursday.

Registration hours are 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m.

The school district board has discussed cutting out kindergarten because of a shortage of funds, according to Supt. Milton S. Cohen. A $375,000 bond and 60-cent tax increase election will be held in the district on June 2.

CARRIER

reason.

Her days of glory past and dwarfed by giant carriers, the Card was assigned to the U.S. Military Sea Transportation Service and classified by the Navy as an aircraft ferry. Though a naval vessel, she is manned by civilians.

In World War II, the Card won a Presidential Unit Citation for sinking seven U-boats in the Atlantic in 1943. She acted in concert with the destroyers Borie, Goff and Barry and together they were believed to have sent a dozen or more submarines to the bottom, the most in naval history.

The four-vessel team escorted troop convoys and freighters across the submarine-infested Atlantic, the Card often acting as a decoy to trap U-boats in a web of depth charges laid by the destroyers. Planes from the Card protected the convoys.

The Card, which weighs 15,700 tons loaded and measures 496 feet long, is less than half as long and only one-fifth as heavy as the huge nuclear-powered attack carrier Enterprise, the world's largest. She resembles a regular aircraft carrier, only smaller.

Immediately after the predawn explosion tore a hole in the engine-room bulkhead, the Card began settling to the muddy river bottom. She normally draws 26 feet when loaded, and the amount of sinkage was reported to be about 22 feet.

Statement of Policy

Regarding Political Advertising

The Independent-Journal does not aggressively solicit or render copy writing service for political advertisements that are argumentative in content. Political advertisements are construed to be all assertions subject to public controversy, whether or not a public election is involved.

Any political advertisement that is not clearly the personal appeal of the elective candidate or candidates involved must show the name of the sponsoring group together with the name or names of one or more persons officiating for such group and their address.

Political advertisements must be submitted in complete and explicit form, ready for the printers, and clearly marked as to size and date of appearance. All political advertisements are payable in advance. Charges are figured at the regular rate.

Advertising deadlines are 4 p.m., two days preceding publication. As example: Tuesday advertisements must be in Friday at 4 p.m.; Monday advertisements must be in the preceding Friday morning. Any intervening holiday advances the deadline by a day.

No responsibility to show printer's proof is assumed under the above schedule.

If a proof is desired, advertisement must be submitted substantially in advance. Corrections, if any, must be ordered by 4 p.m., two working days preceding publication. Any changes from original copy will be charged for on basis of printing work involved.

On the last publication day before an election no political advertisement other than a simple statement of advocacy will be printed. As example: "Vote yes on proposition three," or "Elect John Jones," together with facts as to nature and time of election and, if desired, candidate's party affiliation or occupational identity.

Nearing a public election, no advertisement introducing a new controversial subject will be accepted to run later than the fourth publication day preceding the election. If any new statement or issue should be introduced on the fourth publication day preceding the election, attacking the opposing candidate or issue involved, the newspaper may, at its discretion, make allowance under this rule for the opposing side to answer.

Necessity for the newspaper's disinterested handling of political advertisements is readily apparent. These terms and conditions are adhered to in spirit of fairness to all.

SEW SIMPLE

Make A Professional Belt By Cutting Wider Than Belting

By EUNICE FARMER

"Can I make a thong belt out of satin seam binding and finish the ends with Japanese knots? Can fabric also be used?" Mrs. S.W.

DEAR MRS. S. W.:

It is possible to make a narrow cord belt with satin bias binding. Usually these are made from fabric of most any type, but you would have to cut your own bias strips of fabric. These cannot be made by using the straight grain of your fabric, but must be made on the bias.

For full information about making finished cording and also the Chinese ball buttons, please send 10 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Sew Simple, in care of the Independent-Journal.

"Knit Notes for Beginners: In case you haven't heard, use two balls of yarn and cast on both sleeves at once. Makes sleeves quicker and no guess work about getting them exactly even!"

"Make a truly professional looking belt for your summer cottons! Cut a strip of dress fabric ½ inch wider on all sides than the belting material. Be sure to trim one end into a neat point. As you press the ½-inch fabric allowance over the belting material, spray lightly with spray starch. The fabric will stay nice and flat and crease sharply around the belting.

"Remove the belting and lay it over the fabric, hiding the turned raw edges. Machine stitch in place, stitching from the belting material side for a more even stitching." (This does work beautifully and turns out perfect every time. E. F.)

This helpful suggestion won a Tailor Trix pressing board for Mrs. W. K. Sumner, Pouray, Calif.

"I don't know how my sewing would turn out if it weren't for your great column, I have learned so much. One problem that has stumped me completely is the front of the waistline of all my dresses.

"I carefully mark the waistline with chalk and string as you suggest, and when I finish the dress, the bodice drops below the belt. Please help me and tell me what I am doing wrong." MRS. R.M.R.

DEAR MRS. R.M.R.:

I imagine you are doing just exactly what I find most of my pupils doing, and that is standing too erect when you are marking the waistline. This is a common thing for most of us to do when we are being fitted (guess we want to think "thin").

Try to relax and stand in a normal position. If your posture is naturally stooped a little, this is the way you will have to stand when marking your dress. I am sure that if you try this again, you will have better luck.

"There is a new shift this year which is called a playtime shift. It is about 1½ inches above the knee. What is worn underneath? Slips and pettipants are too long. Please answer as I have made eight of these shifts already!" MRS. E.S.

DEAR MRS. E. S.:

Since I am a little too old for these playtime shifts, I had to call on my two teen-age girls to help me out with an answer for you.

They both claim that pettipants should normally be 3 inches above the knees and should work out perfectly. Perhaps you are shorter than average, in which case I would suggest you sew in a fold of fabric above the lace of your petti-pants to shorten them.

This is the best I can do for you. Hope it works!

Many thanks for all the letters telling us about your sewing areas. It's not tooo late to send in more pictures of your own sewing area. Rember, you may win a Tailor Trix Pressing Board for the best planned sewing space

WARD OFF ATTACK

Wedding Bands A Necessity?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Long ago, many of the contemporary wedding customs were observed not out of tradition but out of necessity — and self-preservation.

Take the matter of "standing up" for the bride. This now traditional practice had its beginnings at a time when primitive man used to select his wife by capturing her in a raid on an enemy tribe.

Following the swain's return —wife- to-be dragged behind— his friends would "stand up" around him. The purpose: to ward off attack from rescue parties of the girl's kinfolk or tribe.

Other traditional wedding practices, according to Encyclopedia Americana, also are based on necessities encountered by ancient peoples when they married.

The original wedding band, for example, was simply a large band used to tie up the restive damsel after she had been captured.

To insure her continuous presence, the girl's spouse placed a restraining band about her ankle, above her knee, around her neck — or through her nose, depending on tribal custom.

The "giving away" of the bride in ancient times took place after the prospective bridegroom agreed to pay a particular price to his father-in-law-to-be. This was during a period in history when the acquisition of a bride was an undisguisedly commercial transaction.

The manner and type of payment varied from place to place. And by today's standards, the purchase price for a wife was not very flattering.

A seemingly favorite form of payment, for example, was one cow!

Art Consultant To Give Program For Gallinas P-TA

Brue Pinegar, art consultant for the San Rafael school district, will conduct the program for the Gallinas Parent-Teacher Assn. meeting on Thursday. "Art in a Growing Age" will be the topic for this afternoon meeting which will conclude this year's theme, "The Many Ages of Education."

Refreshments will be served from 2:30-3 p.m. in the library under the direction of Mrs. Carl Pharis, hospitality chairman, followed by the program in the kindergarten room.

Mrs. Bryce Anderson, president of the San Rafael P-TA Council, recently installed the following officers for Gallinas: Mesdames Leo Berne, president; Morris Hill, first vice president; A. D. Fields, secretary, and William Kitchin, treasurer. Virgil Birdsall, who becomes principal of Gallinas next fall, was installed as second vice president of the P-TA.

Here's Check List For Cool Fabrics

When buying fabrics for spring and summer wear, here's a one minute check list that will save you money, time and potential problems: 1) Is it colorfast? Colorfast fabrics retain their colors for the washing life cycle and require no special handling in the laundering process. 2) Is it colorfast to sunlight? If so, no need to worry about over exposure to sunlight or fading for the normal wear-life of the fabric. 3) Is it preshrunk? Your clothes won't become tight after the first washing if you can check "yes" on this question.

Like A Tent

The coat that looks like a tent is being booked by designers for fall and winter. The coats leaving plenty of room, even when over a bulky suit, are being stitched in fur as well as fabric.

Cosmetics Please 'Other Women'—

A skin specialist told several thousand physicians recently that women use cosmetics mainly because they want to look good in the eyes of other women, not men.

Dr. John R. Haserick, of Cleveland, O., also said that women who use greasy cosmetics on their faces are inviting acne.

"Some women think they shouldn't wash their faces and that they must use greasy preparations for good skin health," Dr. Haserick said.

"The fact is, there are more oil glands per square inch on their faces than there are oil wells in Texas."

He added:

"If women knew what men think about the greasy faces they have to get close to they wouldn't wear greasy makeup at all."

Engle Withdrawal Is Sad; Race 'Charity' Questioned

CLAIR ENGLE'S DECISION to quit campaigning for reelection as U.S. senator was a heavy blow to his personal acquaintances and admirers.

Although he isn't very much past 50, he has spent nearly 30 years in public service to Californians, first as Tehama County district attorney, then as state legislator followed by many years in the U.S. House of Representatives and, finally, as senator representing 18 million Californians in the highest law-making chamber of our nation.

WHEN DOES A POLITICIAN deserve to be recognized as a statesman?

One index is when the politician wins the respect and admiration of those who disagree with him.

By this measure, Clair Engle has been a statesman for a long, long time. He got that way early in his career because he himself early displayed the capacity to admire and respect those with whom he disagreed.

He has been a brave and courageous man.

His departure from the political scene is saddening; it is a great loss.

The Senator's successor, whoever he may be, will have to work a long, long time before he can hope to rise to the heights occupied by Clair Engle.

TWO WOMEN IN Washington have performed valiantly when great personal tragedy struck.

Everybody saw Mrs. Kennedy on TV. Her courage and strength in the face of adversity is well known.

Mrs. Engle's is less well-known. Her personal tragedy may have been an even heavier burden than Mrs. Kennedy's, if that is possible.

Mrs. Kennedy had the unanimous sympathy of the nation.

Mrs. Engle has had the antagonism of some political big-wigs who hoped to achieve personal political gain from her husband's disability. She had to fight off political pressures for Clair Engle's resignation. And she had to sustain her ailing husband's courage by reassuring him that "everything is going to be all right" when at the very least she must have deep within her feared the very worst.

Like her husband, she has displayed indomitable courage and resoluteness in the face of adversity.

All who are acquainted with the Engles are hoping and praying for the senator's recovery and that they may yet have a long, happy life together.

"ALL NET PROCEEDS realized from racing at Golden Gate Fields April 27, 28 and 29 will be distributed to various charity and welfare organizations in the San Francisco Bay Area.

"The management of Golden Gate Fields urges your attendance at the races on these charity days, so that you may not only enjoy the finest in this great American sport but also have the opportunity to participate in a program of such merited good."

Thus read the final two paragraphs of a paid advertisement in a San Francisco newspaper this week.

This pious declaration raises anew some old questions.

Where is the charity money going? Does the Hamilton Air Force Officers' Wives Club still get a share of horse race "charity" funds? Do a substantial portion of the so-called "charity" funds still go to San Francisco newspapers to underwrite such promotions as tennis and swimming meets, sponsored by those newspapers?

Was the advertisement paid for out of charity funds?

Some years ago before he retired from the legislature, Assemblyman Ralph M. Brown conducted quite an eye-opening investigation of such questions.

The answers he uncovered never seemed to get the complete news coverage that they appeared to deserve.

One of these days some enterprising legislator will re-open the subject. It will be interesting to see if newspapers still receive "charity" funds and whether the disclosures are still ignored in the big-city press.

JESUS' PARTING WORDS

Never in all their experience with the Master did the Apostles hang so intently on His words as they did at the Last Supper. The air was charged with a sense of impending tragedy and an indefinable spirit of fraternal love buoying up each of them that would be unforgettable.

Jesus' words, as set down in the Gospel of John, carried many lessons. Here are a few of them, which were intended not only for the disciples but also for all who, as He put it, "through their word are to believe in Me." (John 17-20)

He told them to serve, not dominate: "If, therefore, I the Lord and Master have washed your feet, you also ought to wash the feet of another." (13-14)

He gave them the mark of the disciple: "By this will all men know that you are My disciples, if you have love for one another." (13:35)

He gave them a new title: "No longer do I call you servants . . . but I have called you friends." (15:15)

He assured them of victory: "But take courge, I have overcome the world." (16:33)

He prayed to the Father for unity: " . . . that they may be one even as we are one." (17:22)

Help me, O Holy Spirit, to work tirelessly for the unity of all men according to the divine Will.

Great Men All Kind To Animals

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Kindness to Animals Week is May 3 to 9.

Christ called Himself the Good Shepherd. No true disciple of His can be cruel. Great teachers of all times have been humanitarians. St. Francis, whose memory is beloved by all, showed the utmost devotion toward man's lowlier fellow creatures.

Luther, Wesley, and the outstanding churchmen of all generations visualized and bespoke humane excellence among the virtues of religion. Does not the preacher who fails to give this theme a place in his seasonal meditations with his people and fails to take time to analyze the problem, fall short in following the leadership of the great teachers who thus used so great a channel for the enrichment of human ideals?

Karen Invited To Swim Club

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In reply to Karen Fedorchak's letter, I feel it is only fair to let her know, if she is as interested in sports as she claims and is willing to give up an hour or so after school, to come down to the San Rafael High School swim pool.

The San Rafael Swim Club is an organized group of boys and girls participating under National AAU rules.

You will get special attention from coach Larry Lack and coach Mori Arbine, and you will learn the four basic strokes.

Swimming is not just a boys' sport, but a sport to be enjoyed by everyone from the ages of 8 through 17, and you will find very often that the girls turn out to be better swimmers than the boys.

So if it is trophies and enormous ribbons you want, or just something to brag about, come down to the San Rafael pool and try it out, because what San Rafael Swim Club needs is more swimmers with an attitude like yours.

Hazards Found In Letter Writing

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Veteran reader-writer Sam Hanzel, M.D., and you, as Editor, well illustrated on April 24 one of the many hazards inherent in conducting dialogues on controversial issues through letters to the editor.

Dr. Hanzel, by negligently failing to clearly and narrowly draw his point of view, allowed or caused you to unfairly or wrongly construe literally a subordinate thought, "The disease of discrimination is a disease of whites, not Negroes."

Your questionable question, probably to many, effectively discredited a generally valid position and injected one more preposterous irrelevancy into the nearly full, boiling cauldron.

(It could also be said that Dr. Hanzel's unfounded assertion quoted above tended to undermine the point he was attempting to make. — Editor)

But Reader Knows How Editor Stands

Editor, Independent-Journal:

"Brickbats" to Editor Jack Craemer and his Saturday (April 25) editorial, "Radical Right Is Threat To GOP In California."

The headline itself is a disgrace to responsible journalism.

In singling out the Patrick Henry group and its smear campaign against Governor Rockefeller, the kind of action we all deplore, he overlooks other radical groups that are circulating literature branding Senator Goldwater as a "Jew" and part of a world Zionist movement.

Then Editor Craemer goes on to smear Senator Goldwater as best he can.

I-J readers should know his source material was taken from Rockefeller campaign literature, including the "Kuchel Report"—Senator Kuchel being Rockefeller's state campaign manager.

I'm sure an equally persuasive set of figures can be presented by former Senator Knowland using 25 issues of his choosing.

As for changing the GOP's state leadership, maybe this is what the GOP needs in California. Twenty years ago, Republicans dominated both state legislative houses and the state elective offices.

Today where does the party stand?—perhaps it's time for a change.

Feels Dr. Hanzell Made A Point

Editor, Independent-Journal:

It would seem that Dr. Hanzell (April 24, "What Our Readers Say") has made a very perceptive point. I can not agree with him more heartily! I am not so sure about your reaction to his letter, i.e., the editorial comment found in the same column. Perhaps Dr. Hanzell hit a bit too close to home in criticizing those who have condemned the civil rights demonstrations in S. F. and in N. Y. Is this what lies behind the insinuation in your question? If I understand it right, you would divert our attention from the issues raised in the letter. I, for one, would much appreciate being able to read more of the thoughts which prompted your comment. Maybe an editorial based on the question you raised in relation to the letter would clarify your views. The innuendo opens no ground for criticism, other than to say that you missed the point completely. . . .

Kennedy, Johnson Styles Differ —But Purpose Is Very Close

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Lyndon B. Johnson has now talked enough to provide a reasonable comparison with President John F. Kennedy, and not only as a talker.

Kennedy was distinguished from the beginning of his presidency—in fact, from his inaugural address—by idealism about the possibilities of American life. The same is true of Johnson.

But there is an acute difference in the expression of that idealism.

KENNEDY HAD a better aesthetic sense, as his use of language showed. It appealed not only to intellectuals and young people but to literate people of all ages, for the phrases were memorable, sometimes elegant.

In return he got a sort of national gratitude — judging from the increasingly warm response when he was alive and since then the pilgrimages to his grave—for an eloquence unmatched in the presidency since Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He expressed what many felt but could not say and in words better than perhaps most could have commanded. His speeches showed a lot of homework, sometimes too much.

FOR SOMETIMES they were too literary, too worked over, too self-conscious, as if in trying to make his sentences bleed he had drained the red corpuscles out of them, leaving more shine than substance.

He worked one literary habit to death: the use of contrasts. Used carefully and sparingly, the effect can be brilliant, as it was in, "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country."

It is not an easy technique to use since it gets monotonous when overdone and sounds like wheels spinning.

IN GENERAL what he said was much better than how he said it. There was too much monotone, not enough range, not enough inflection. And his gesturing while emphatic was unimaginative: the right hand endlessly poking the air.

Johnson's whole performance is different. He is anything but the literary man, as he would probably be the first to admit, since he seems to pride himself on his earthiness.

With a prepared talk he's not in Kennedy's class. He is far better off the cuff. In the first place, he has made a fetish of short sentences, letting each in turn stand as a paragraph. It makes for easy speaking but has its drawbacks.

It prevents a rounded flow and development of ideas by forcing abrupt sentence stops every few words. It certainly shuts the door on the kind of contrasts Kennedy liked so much.

MUCH MORE than Kennedy, Johnson tries for inflection. But the result is seldom good. As he goes along in a prepared speech he will drop his voice, almost to a whisper, in such an obvious effort toward solemnity that the result is disturbing.

But Johnson is far more down to earth than Kennedy ever was. He has some humor, mostly in the form of homely and even corny anecdotes, although none of Kennedy's wit.

Yet, there was always a slight barrier between Kennedy and his audience, perhaps an intellectual and aristocratic aloofness. There is not a shred of that in Johnson. He mingles. And deliberately spends his time trying to.

Read almost anything he says. It's close up, in the common language, like this phrase recently: "This is one country, one society, and one people."

With all this said the most important point — the common bond between the two men — remains: the attempt by both of them to provide inspirational leadership in insisting upon the promise of American life.

It is extraordinary that this should occur in two presidents in succession. It hasn't happened before in this century.

Perhaps because foreign anguish and anxieties have diminished a bit, the two men could think more about home.

ONE OF THE TRAGEDIES of Cyprus is that Greek and Turkish Cypriots are dying in a struggle which should be settled by the ballot box.

Unfortunately, in what now can be called a full-scale civil war, differences have gone far beyond any such logical solution.

And, whether the 1960 constitution giving Greek and Turkish Cypriots the right of veto over one another ever was a workable one also is a matter now of unimportance. So deep have gone the hatreds that certainly it will not work now. The only workable solutions seem the extreme ones.

A WAR THAT NEITHER wants remains a possibility between Greece and Turkey, with NATO, already torn by disagreement, a further possible victim.

In the middle, in a not unfamiliar situation, is the United Nations.

It would take an optimist indeed to believe that the U. N. can in any way meet the three-month target date it originally gave itself to find a compromise solution.

On the one side is the Greek Cypriot majority of more than 400,000 led by President Archbishop Makarios. Makarios demands revision of the constitution to eliminate the Turkish veto.

And on the other is the Turkish minority of less than 100,000, fearful of losing its minority protection and demanding partition of the island.

SO FAR THE GREAT tragedy of Cyprus is its mounting number of dead, its thousands of refugees and its wrecked towns and villages.

But a conflict which should remain a local one already goes far beyond its island boundaries.

Thousands of Soviet-built weapons find their way to the hands of Greek Cypriots through the United Arab Republic of President Gamal Abdel Nasser, not so much for Nasser's love of Makarios but for his hatred of Turkey.

The U. S. embassy is bombed and Americans are threatened.

British troops, accepted by Makarios in the role of peacemakers, find themselves the targets of snipers' bullets.

United Nations forces, their own role imprecise, find themselves accused of favoritism on both sides.

Racial Problems Exist In Marin

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Reference is made to your front-page article in last evening's paper (April 28) concerning the loss of an eye in a restaurant fight early last Saturday morning. I want to commend you on your excellent job of keeping the public well informed. Nothing was said of the fact that the injured party, Mr. Louis Molles Jr., had his back to the attacker at the time. Nothing was said of the fact that Mr. Molles did nothing to aggravate this assault. AND nothing was said of the fact that the attacker was a Negro accompanied by five or six other Negroes. But what can be expected from a little country newspaper.

How much longer are you going to keep quiet on the subject that Marin County actually does have racial problems? Perhaps the loss of an eye by a 27-year-old gentleman was not enough upon your altar for you to acknowledge our problems. Maybe this day will not arrive until a life has been lost. Maybe yours.

Is 'Editor' Scared Of Racial Violence?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I see you're at it again. The I-J "editor" has a magnificent ability to pettifog an intelligent, well-stated criticism of his own "gross misinterpretation of reality." I refer to Sam Hanzel's letter and your snide riposte published on April 24.

As for your questioning reply of whether or not Dr. Hanzel "has never observed racial discrimination by Negroes, as against Orientals"—of course, any idiot who has his eyes halfway open and has lived at least 12 years has observed racial discrimination by every race against every other race, and if he can read beyond the fifth-grade level, he will discover that this primitive phenomenon has been going on for several thousand years.

The point—and I think you ... well know it (and probably are scared to death at the mere thought of it)—is that the U. S. has been, and likely will be for some time, verging on violent revolution as the result of 200 years of bodily servitude plus 100 years of economic servitude imposed by whites on blacks. Your piddling, defensive, smoke-screened rationalization of "discrimination by Negroes" is, I suppose, a mask for your own fear of facing reality.

By the way, who is "editor"? All the columnists and readers gave a name, if only fictitious—for example, "Lois Hanford." I've heard all about that "editorial 'we'" jazz, but confess I don't understand the subtle vagaries of journalism. I am left only with the assumption that all "editors" find it necessary to hide behind a faceless mask of imperious pomposity. But even the Pope has a name—like Paul or John.

Negro Like Child In Adult World

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I heartily approve the last paragraph in Thursday's editorial (April 23). These demonstrators don't want jobs; they want publicity and exhibitionism. I wish you would editorialize the case of 56 Negro women upon whom $100,000 will be spent for six months of clerical training. The classes at Marin Junior College arouse no disapproval, but the fact that these girls will be paid $43 a week to go to school really burns me! These students will spend not one cent of their own money, and I think the white parents who are supporting their kids in school should scream their heads off, because they pay taxes to provide privileges for "suffering" Marinites which their own children do not receive.

Most of these women won't get jobs, and probably all of them will marry. If the $100,000 were put in a revolving fund to help all students, some good would ensue.

Newspapers and television stations present only one side of this raging controversy, and I think white readers are fairly treated. Most whites realize that Negroes want domination, not equality, and they want supremacy handed to them as a constitutional right. This country fought British oppression in the only possible way: by becoming superior to the British. We realized our weaknesses and overcame them to achieve independence we had to earn. Why can't Negroes admit they need improvement they have taken no steps to produce? Negroes cannot think logically; even intelligent and educated Negroes express themselves in a spate of high-plain words that say nothing. A Negro cannot follow a straight line of thought; his so-called reasoning is pure emotionalism, uncontrolled by intellect. They are children trying to barge in and rule in an adult world.

None of these demonstrations would be necessary if Negroes were truly qualified for the jobs they demand; they are not willing to go through the learning processes that white workers accept without quibble.

Most Negroes don't care a hoot about education. In 10 years of adult education teaching, I have had exactly one colored student, and I have reason to believe she was planted. She was accepted by the class and given very friendly treatment. So what happened? She interrupted my lectures every five minutes with moronic questions; she talked constantly to her neighbors; she did no class work; after being called out for 10 minutes, I returned to find her teaching the class, and that was it! She is the only student I ever kicked out, and the principal backed me up.

I am not prejudiced against Negroes except that I don't want to be forced to live with them. I do believe that honest analysis in the newspapers would start everybody to thinking more logically.

Bar Association Handles Complaints

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Mrs. J. M. Blair, in her letter published in the Thursday, April 23, issue of the Independent - Journal, said she could not understand "why there is no ... complaint board for unethical attorneys."

With regard to complaints of unethical conduct on the part of attorneys, we do have an administrative committee appointed by the State Bar Assn. which carefully screens and evaluates any claims made against members of the legal profession and which recommends disciplinary action, including disbarment, if appropriate. The Marin County Bar Assn. and the State Bar of California insist on maintaining the highest ethical standards of conduct on the part of the members of the legal profession, and this association does not in any way sanction any conduct which deviates from this norm to the detriment of the public.

As president of the Marin County Bar Assn., I can very safely represent that no attorney may steal from his client without facing disbarment as well as criminal prosecution.

To date we have found no record of any complaint made by Mrs. Blair to the Marin County Bar Assn. or to the State Bar of California.

Write-In Vote Is Wasted One

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Several people have been informed by the county clerk's office that write-in votes in the June primary would be counted and reported, though they would have no official significance. This was vital news to a lot of people.

Your column in your Saturday (April 25) editorial said that write-ins will not be counted and are therefore wasted.

You suggest, along with Mr. Rockefeller's campaign manager, that write-in voters rally behind Rockefeller, in order to put down the radical right.

Isn't a primary supposed to be a means of sounding out the wishes of the rank and file?

Wouldn't your idea give the Rockefeller camps the false impression that California is for him?

What we need is precise information from a reliable source, like you.

Will write-ins be counted and reported?

If they will be, where can write-ins be most effectively placed on the ballot?

Thank you for any light you choose to throw on the subject.

EDITH SARRAILLE
Greenbrae

(The purpose of the California presidential primary is simply to elect delegates to the national party conventions. Since the only two delegations on the Republican ballot will be those pledged to Governor Rockefeller and to Senator Goldwater, a write-in for another candidate would be wasted; no delegates pledged to other candidates have qualified for the ballot.—Editor)

Fair Coverage Given Praise

Editor, Independent-Journal:

After four years on the Sausalito City Council, I want to commend the Independent - Journal and most particularly reporter Bruce Coleman for the paper's scrupulously fair coverage of our community's affairs.

It has been an illuminating experience for me, as a newspaper reporter, to find myself on the receiving end for a change. I may have winced occasionally on seeing my words in print, but I never had occasion to consider myself misquoted or treated unjustly.

I would like to express my approval, too, of the Independent-Journal's continuing campaign to make sure that public business is conducted in open meetings of public agencies. We have found no need for secrecy in Sausalito, and I think the ability of the public to participate on a continuing basis in local affairs has proved of inestimable value to our community.

Not many people in Marin County realize what an important role editor Jack Craemer of the Independent-Journal played in the enactment of the Ralph M. Brown Anti-Secrecy Act. Equally important has been the paper's diligence in seeing that the law is observed. You are carrying on a proud tradition.

Paper Becomes Hysteria Victim

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your recent editorial on the "radical right" indicates that you have become a victime of the hysteria of defeat now affecting the opponents of Senator Goldwater.

The Goldwater campaign, unlike that of his only opponent in the California June primary, is not based upon attacking other Republicans. He has no party-wrecking "Smear Squad" trailing his opponent throughout the state. The Goldwater campaign is founded upon an affirmation of true Republican principles of constitutional government, individual freedom, and a strong nation as the best guaranty of peace.

The Goldwater delegation to the Republican National Convention will include such "backers" as William F. Knowland, who was selected by all Republican members of the United States Senate as their majority leader; Frank M. Jordan, long-time Secretary of State of California, and the only Republican now holding state-wide office; and Patrick J. Hillings, former congressman and Republican candidate for attorney general.

It is interesting to note that all of these Goldwater "backers" were publicly supported by the Independent-Journal in their respective campaigns for their own election.

The Goldwater delegation will also include Mrs. Ivy Priest Stevens, appointed Treasurer of the United States by President Eisenhower; Mrs. Marjorie Benedict, Republican national committeewoman; Mrs. Lucille Hosmer, who was president of the California Federation of Republican Women; Don Mulford, caucus chairman of Republican assemblymen; Sen. Jack Schrade, of San Diego, and John B. Vukasin Jr., recent chairman of the Bay Area Republican Alliance.

These are people typical of Senator Goldwater's "backers." All of them are dedicated Republicans who have in the past supported all of the nominees of the party, and who will in the future continue to do so. Yet, suddenly, according to you, they have become "right-wing radicals" because they support Senator Goldwater. The absurdity of your position is glaringly obvious.

The Marin Goldwater for President Committee invites you and all other voters of Marin to its campaign headquarters at 922 Irwin Street in San Rafael. There you may see for yourselves the total absence of "smear" material. You may also choose to read the official literature of the Goldwater campaign, so that you may discover the true position of our candidate on all of the vital issues of the day.

Land Speculators Given Tax Break

Editor, Independent-Journal:

So a few Bolinas residents think the increase in their property taxes is "completely unreasonable, arbitrary, and confiscatory" (I-J, April 28). The protests probably come from two groups: (1) Homeowners who have been paying more than their fair share of taxes all along, and (2) land speculators who have been paying much less than their fair share of taxes. And I'll bet the loudest protests are coming from the latter group—the land speculators—because I understand an effort is being made to raise the assessments on this class of property to a more equitable level as required by law.

It is vitally important that all homeowners and residents of Marin who have the best interests of the county at heart get a clear understanding of the conflicting interests of homeowners as opposed to land speculators. The property tax falls primarily on land and improvements. It is supposed to fall on each of these classes of property in proportion to its value. But for years land speculators have been favored at the expense of homeowners. The average holder of vacant and underimproved land has his property on the assessor's rolls at a much lower ratio to market value than does the average homeowner. The result is that land speculators pay less than their fair share of taxes — thus forcing homeowners to pay more than their fair share. Whatever is not paid by the land speculators has to be paid by the homeowners. And because the land speculators have been favored, the price of all land — including the land under our homes—has gone higher and higher — thus forcing homeowners to pay still higher taxes.

The way to break this vicious circle is to support our assessor, Bert Broemmel, when he raises his assessments of vacant and underimproved land to the same level as his assessments of our homes. Every time he does this, he is helping to discourage land speculation and to restore a more equitable tax relationship between homeowners and land speculators. All residents of Marin who favor tax equity ought to write Mr. Broemmel a note of thanks and encourage him to do what the State Constitution requires him to do. And we should also support any supervisor who indicates his understanding of this problem.

Drummond Gives Views On Letter

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I have read with interest the letter of Mrs. Edith M. Dailey, published in your columns, expressing the thought that the improvement of American schools ought to come ahead of any foreign-aid assistance, on a private basis, for schools.

I share this view to the extent that I would think that private citizen contributions to the Peace Corps school program would logically come from communities where the schools are already in good shape.

State Works On Angel Island Park

Editor, Independent-Journal:

It was with great interest that I read your editorial of March 11, which deals with our progress in providing for the public use of Angel Island as a state park. You are correct when you say that our only developments to date on the island are to be found at Hospital Cove, which was the first parcel of land which we acquired some 10 years ago. However, this is not the whole of the Angel Island story, and it would seem to be important for people who are interested in the project to understand our history there and to know something of our plans for the future. The first parcel of land on Angel Island was conveyed to the state for historic site purposes by a patent recorded on June 24, 1955. This patent covered a 36.82 acre parcel commonly known as Hospital Cove. Since that time, we have removed from the Hospital Coce area all extraneous and hazardous ruins and structures and have developed a fine boat access picnic area. In addition, we have made substantial improvements to the pier serving Hospital Cove, and have installed mooring facilities for the use of the visiting public.

This represented our entire holding on Angel Island until Aug. 26, 1959, when an additional 183.83 acres was conveyed to the state for historic site purposes. The final parcel, consisting of 517.24 acres, was conveyed by patent to the State on Aug. 12, 1963. Once again, this parcel was conveyed for historic site purposes. To date it has not been possible for us to extend the public use of the island beyond the original Hospital Cove parcel. The reasons for this situation are found in the conditions of extreme hazard which exist in virtually all parts of the island because of the ruins and dilapidated structures which exist and because of the extreme fire hazard which is typical of the island during the summer season. Before any extensive public use of the island beyond the Hospital Cove area can be enjoyed, it will be necessary to remove the existing hazards which dot the island and to provide adequate protection against the extreme fire hazard. We will begin work on this phase of our development program just as soon as funds for the purpose can be appropriated. The 1964 legislature is considering the governor's proposal for some $98,000 to be used for the first year of these major clean-up activities. This will be the beginning of a several years' program which will finally result in the establishment of conditions which will enable us to begin intensive public use of the area.

In addition to the funds for major clean-up activities, the governor has proposed, and the legislature is considering, two additional items for Angel Island State Park. One is an item of $155,000 for the improvement of the Hospital Cove entrance facilities, including a new comfort station, for the convenience of the public near the entrance area. The other is $10,000 to be used for a professional survey of the historic buildings and sites on the island for the purpose of determining the needs for a complete program of historic preservation and presentation.

Our currently active program on the island includes the expenditure of some $111,000 for repairs and improvements to the main docking and boat access facilities at Hospital Cove, together with $9,600 for the improvement of utilities service. . . .

A major feature of our development plans is the intensive development of the areas known as the North and East Garrisons. In the North Garrison, it is our proposal to develop camping facilities for both individual and group use. In the East Garrison we propose to center the main public use activities for the island. Here our plans envision a major access facility with extensive berthing facilities; and ashore it is proposed to provide overnight accommodations, a restaurant, a store and other facilities that will make it possible for the island visitor to fully enjoy his stay. It is in the East Garrison that we propose our main museum center where, through the use of photographs, dioramas, and other displays, the entire history of the island will be presented to the visitor. Smaller exhibits emphasizing local features of the island's history or of its natural endowments will be placed at key locations elsewhere on the island.

Transportation on the island poses our most interesting problem. We do not propose to provide for automobile transportation anywhere in the park; rather, we will rely on such transportation media as bicycles and "elephant trains," and are considering the possibility of a tramway from the East Garrison area to the top of Mount Livermore.

It must be understood that the preparation of Angel Island for public use is a task of major proportions. The island at the present time is dotted with several hundred badly deteriorating buildings, many of which represent actual public hazards because of their advanced state of deterioration. Vandalism has caused extensive damage on the island and has created hazards where deterioration has not already done so. All of these hazards must be eliminated before the public can be permitted to make general use of the island. It this phase of the work which we propose to attack in the initial effort shortly after July 1, 1964. I am asking Superintendent Kishbaugh, with headquarters in Santa Rosa, to keep you posted as to the progress of the work because of the primary interest which you and the readers of your paper must have in this project.

We recognize the feelings of disappointment which must be common to the many people who have been anticipating the recreational use of Angel Island for these many years. On the other hand, we seek an understanding of the problems which confront us here, and are hopeful that our many friends will be patient with us as we move as rapidly as possible toward the day when the Island will be fully available for public use and enjoyment.

As we embark upon the general clean-up program, it is our hope that we will be able to accomplish this work in geographical sequence, so that portions of the island can be opened to informal public use as rapidly as the various phases of the work can be completed. If there is additional information which you desire regarding our program for Angel Island, please contact me.

News Blackout Charged To I-J

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On two separate instances your paper received statements of vital interest to San Geronimo Valley. In both cases your paper has maintained a news blackout.

Giving as the reason for failure to print, that the first statement by Sam Lecount, chairman of the McBride campaign committee was not issued by Mr. McBride.

The statement subsequently made by Mr. McBride has also not been published.

What is the reason this time?

As a subscriber and voter in the San Geronimo Valley area I express concern at the failure of the paper to perform its function, namely to provide its readers with all information, that they might vote intelligently.

To be specific with regard to a challenge to Mr. McBride to a public debate, Mr. McBride stated he "would be happy to appear before any impartial group."

When a notice appeared in your paper that the San Geronimo Valley Assn. had designated itself as the "impartial group"—Mr. McBride and his committee felt it would serve neither his campaign nor the voters interest to play the role of victim in a kangaroo court.

As an active McBride committee member, I express these opinions due to the fact the association voted to support Mr. McBride's opponent and its president and most of its officers are out to defeat him, so this certainly should disqualify the association from playing an impartial role—in the eyes of most intelligent people that is.

Again the failure to publish statements by two people that I know exist after publishing Lois Hanford's, whose existence I very much doubt, gives me proper cause for concern. I await your reply with bated breath.

Where do you stand, sirs?

Rumford Housing Measure Backed

Editor, Independent-Journal:

For its statesmanlike editorials on equal rights in general and fair housing in particular, the Independent Journal and its editor deserve the plaudits of all Marinites and indeed, all Californians.

On May 1, as all of us celebrate another Law Day, U.S.A., we would profit greatly by reflection upon the application of the rule of law generally and the California Fair Housing Law (Rumford Act) particularly in the present social struggle in our state and nation.

The law seeks to guarantee to all people that their right to live in the home of their choice shall be unaffected by their national origin, race, or choice of religious creed. Accordingly, it provides that these three factors may not be determining criteria in the rental or sale of most real property. Other California laws have provided these basic rights for some years.

The principal added feature in the California Fair Housing Law is the provision for improved administrative procedures based upon the tried and tested Commission system in Fair Employment. Under this system, the investigation, administration and action upon complaints is conducted quietly by the Commission, without the notoriety, expense and loss of time to all parties incurred by court action. If a violation of the law is found, the Commission is empowered to take remedial action, including an order to cease violation or pay damages up to $500. Judicial approval, by a court of law, is required at the closing stage. No person can be put in jail or be made to pay a large fine under this law.

The proposed initiative against fair housing attempts to do far more than just repeal the Rumford Act. It would nullify every fair housing law, old and new, broad and narrow, now on the books of the State of California or any of its counties, cities or towns. More than that, it would take completely away from the people of California those asked to vote on this very measure, the power to enact through their popularly elected representatives any fair housing legislation of any kind, state or local. The voters are thus asked not only to repeal a recently adopted fair housing law, but also, by a bare majority vote, to command their representatives, both present and future, to refrain from considering any legislation in this area.

The adoption of the initiative would invert the legal norm, undo the gathering consensus, and reverse 100 years of historical trend against second class citizenship. More than that in its enormous breadth of reach, it will prevent such a norm consensus or trend from again developing. Supporting such an initiative is not a "conservative" thing to do. The true conservative seeks thus to strengthen and preserve those institutions of law and conscience which are already a part of the fabric of the society in which he lives. These laws are part of that fabric. Far more radical and dangerous is it to advocate the wholesale repeal of fair housing laws and to make a wholesale withdrawal of legislative power from the State and its counties, cities and towns. If the administration of the Act shows that it requires any adjustments, the Legislature will make them. The initiative would prevent any adjustments of any kind in this area.

The road to the vindication of the fair housing laws will not be easy. It will not beckon the faint of heart. Added to the misrepresentations and invective of the enemies of fair housing will be the occasional excesses of some of its friends. The real friends of fair housing must at the same time unmask the hyperbole of the initiative's proponents and discourage its opponents from taking steps in other areas of civil rights which will not only surely jeopardize the fair housing laws but also endanger that general public acquiescence without which the civil rights movement generally cannot continue to progress. Whatever may appear to be the intrinsic merit of any particular aim or demonstration, the movement of which it is a part cannot in the end continue to exist if it loses the approbation of the required majority of our society, a majority which is neither naturally nor inherently a part of that movement. That majority which has been so arduously cultivated must not now be lightly risked.

. . . Let us all work to see that equal justice, law and order prevail.

MAY DAY FOUND REDS SPLIT AROUND WORLD

Chinese-Soviet Rift Leaves Communist Movement Torn

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Correspondent

May Day, the international workingman's day which world Communists have tried for years to preempt as their own, was hailed this year in Red capitals with slogans that have a hollow sound.

The holiday for Communists always has been one on which to boast their world solidarity. But this May 1 found the movement torn apart.

In the confusion of the Chinese-Soviet quarrel, even those Communists supporting Premier Nikita Khrushchev cannot agree among themselves whether to summon a world meeting to thresh things out or to do nothing and hope, somehow, their vast problems will diminish.

The verbal war of the two Red giants has shaken the movement around the world. Communists have chosen up sides. It looks as if the only thing that could prevent the division from solidifying into two opposing Communist camps would be the end of the Khrushchev regime and its replacement by a Stalinist one.

Even should Khruschev disappear from the stage, however, emergence of a new Stalin in today's Soviet Union seems unlikely.

What goes on in the Communist world in the backwash of the dispute? Briefly, this is the picture:

ASIA

The movement has been rocked to its foundations. Communist regimes of North Korea and North Vietnam clearly have arrayed themselves with the Chinese. First, they are Asians. Second, the Chinese are close by and China's vastness is formidable. These regimes, therefore, stand for world revolution produced by unremitting violence, inspired and supported by established Red regimes.

The Indonesian Communist Party, largest and most powerful outside the Communist-ruled nations, recently went down the line for Peking's side of the argument. Russians lost a contest for influence there.

The Australian and New Zealand Communist Parties have been shattered. Pro-Chinese rebels, including many of the top leadership, have formed a party of their own. They denounce Moscow violently, accusing Khrushchev's supporters of repudiating revolution and helping the United States.

In India, a majority of a once - disciplined party of 250,000 supports the Russians because of the Red Chinese attacks on Inidan borders. But a noisy minority has broken away to join the Peking side of the quarrel. In Ceylon, too, a pro-Chinese wing is battling with the pro-Muscovites for control.

In Japan, the heavy weight of Communist Party support goes to the Peking side. A definite split has been developing for some time which likely, in the long run, will take the Japanese party all the way to the Chinese side.

MIDDLE EAST, AFRICA

In the Middle East, what Communists there are — the numbers are not great—are vastly confused. Arab Communists have tended in the past to lean toward the violent, or pro-Chinese, side of the squabble.

In numbers, Communist parties are negligible in Africa. The battle on the continent is for influence among newly emerged independent governments and nationalist movements.

The Chinese are making more progress now than the Russians, whom many Africans regard as much the same as any other white nation.

EUROPE

There are deep splits in the parties in Belgium and Scandinavia, with pro - Chinese threatening to break away. In France, the Chinese make inroads. They have financed a new publication called "revolution" and are sowing confusion and discord.

The Italian Communist Party is badgered by a small pro-Chinese wing. The Italian party tries to play down the quarrel, unhappy at the split and is pleading for compromise.

The party in West Germany stays with Moscow, as does the party in Red East Germany which is a creature of the Kremlin. But in the bloc of Red-ruled countries of East Europe, the impact of the quarrel has produced a tendency to reach for more independence of the Soviet Union in their own domestic affairs.

LATIN AMERICA

Cuba provides yeast for the Latin American ferment. Fidel Castro's "new" Communists—those who fought with him in the hills against the Batista dictatorship while the "old" pro-Moscow Communists took things easy in Havana—lean to the Chinese viewpoint. Cuban Communists see violent revolution as the bridge to power in Latin America.

There is a complication, though. Castro, heavily dependent upon Soviet economic and military support to keep his regime in power, must tread softly. Cuban Communists don't mention the dispute. They even profess to be too deeply involved in their own affairs to afford time for exporting revolution.

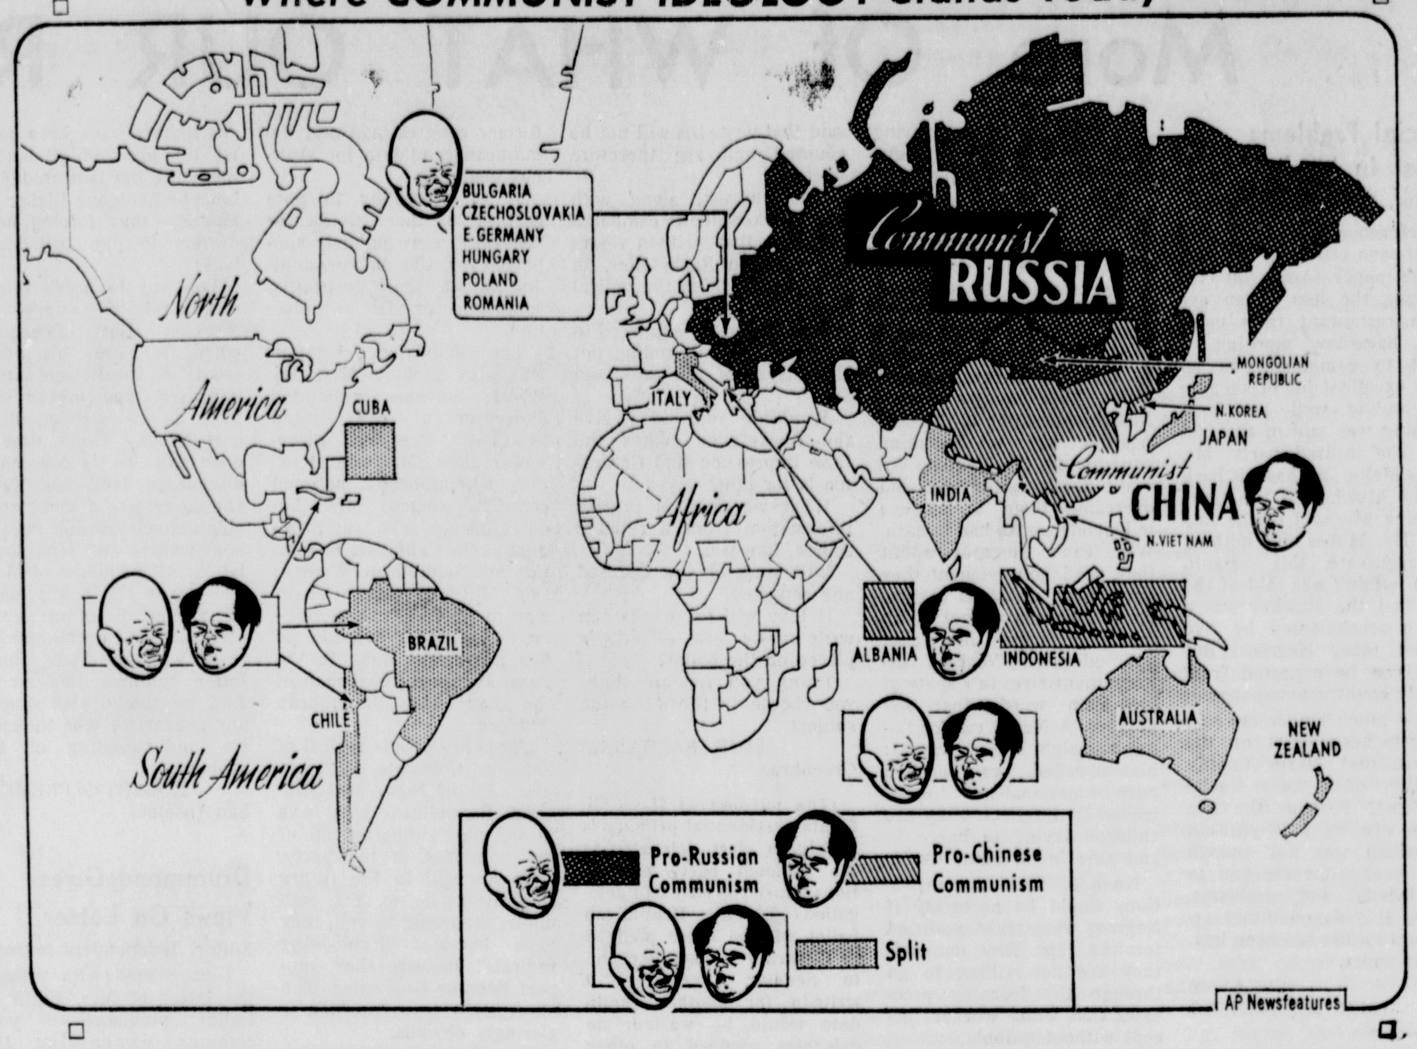

In Brazil there are now two Communist parties, one pro-Chinese, the other—a majority—pro - Russian. There are two Communist parties in Chile. The pro-Chinese wing broke away in January and denounced Khrushchevites as betrayers of Marxism-Leninism. It hailed the Chinese party as "true heir to the revolutionary organization which never should be abandoned."

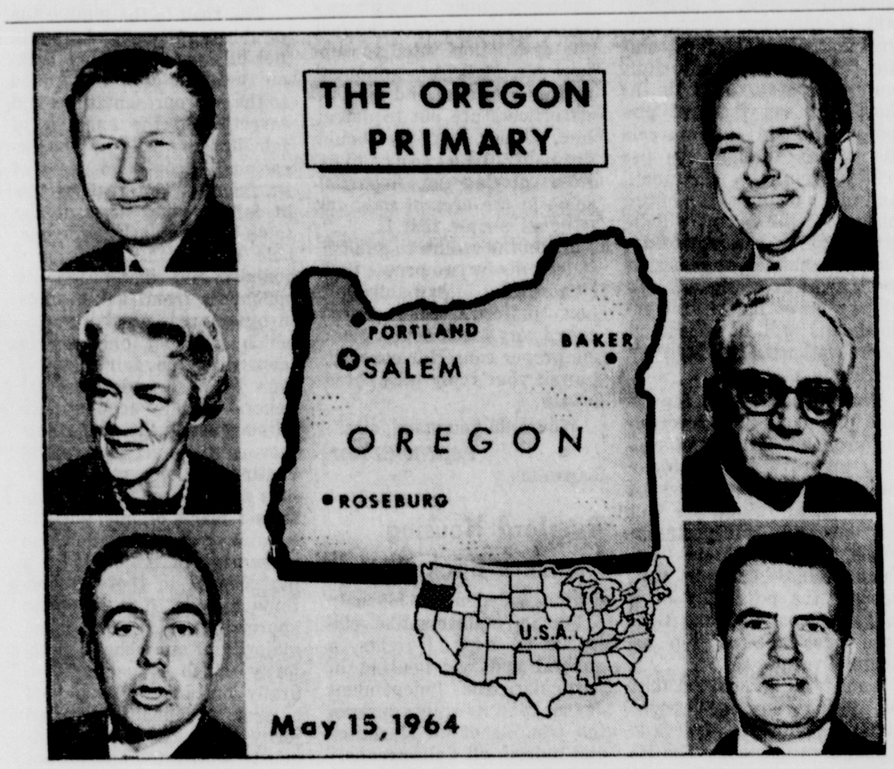

Small in numbers in other countries, though it has been active, the Communist Party is running into similar experiences, notably in Peru and Mexico.

UNITED STATES

The minsicule Communist Party—liberal estimates give it 8,000 members—has its own pro-Chinese wing. The Chinese consider it important enough to flood it with tons of propaganda.

Job Vacancy Boxscore Is Sought In U.S.

By MORTON A. REICHEK
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON—The Labor Department is trying to set up a national boxscore on job vacancies which would show numbers and types of jobs employers want to fill.

At a time when unemployment rates as the nation's primary domestic problem, reports frequently come into Washington about isolated shortages of workers or occupational skills in one community or another.

But there's no bureaucratic machinery to match the jobless with the jobs on a national basis. Washington does not know for sure what kinds of jobs are available where.

Leading economists have long proposed that the government collect statistics on job openings — something which has never been done — as a guide to national policy-making and as a means of aiding in the placement of persons who are unemployed.

Information on job vacancies, the experts say, would also place the unemployment figures — one of the nation's most widely publicized statistics — into clearer perspective.

Some of the experts believe that the jobless statistics, which show that about 4.3 million persons are now looking for work, tend to distort how the national economy stacks up.

Figures on joblessness show the available supply of workers. But what about the other side of the equation — the demand for workers?

Says Harold Goldstein, assistant commission of labor statistics, in charge of manpower and employment: "We don't really know very much about job vacancies. We have no idea how many openings there are."

Collecting statistics on job openings, however, will not be a simple task. For more than a year, a staff under Goldstein's direction, has been studying how to gather the figures. At this point, officials are still uncertain whether it can be done meaningfully.

Support For Larger Government Role For U.S. Grows In Congress

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — The idea that the Democratic Party favors a larger federal role in American life than the Republican Party holds up under analysis in Congress, but there are enough individual exceptions to make an interesting picture.

In a special study of roll-call votes where this issue was clear in 1963, it was found that House and Senate Democrats, on the average, favored a larger federal role 83 per cent of the time, while Republicans favored a larger federal role 51 per cent of the time.

This was a significant increase in the "let-the-federal-government-do-it" attitude in both parties over last year. In 1962, Democrats supported a larger role 74 per cent of the time and Republicans 35 per cent.

This year, Republicans supported a smaller federal role 46 per cent of the time and Democrats 14 per cent, according to the study. In 1962, Republicans felt stronger about this issue: They supported a smaller federal role 63 per cent of the time; the Democrats 23 per cent of the time.

To provide a useful yardstick to measure attitudes on the federal role, all 348 roll-call votes in Congress in 1963 and selected from the House and 10 from the Senate were examined as key tests.

Nine of the votes touched on controversies that found Democrats pitted against Republicans. But eight of them found majorities of the two parties in agreement — all in favor of a larger federal role.

Senate votes which found the two parties at odds involved mass transportation, youth employment, a National Service Corps, manpower training and vocational education.

Senate votes which split the two parties at odds involved mass transportation, youth employment, a National Service Corps, manpower training and vocational education.

House votes which split the parties concerned medical schools, cotton subsidies, air pollution control and a basic vocational education program.

Senate votes on which the majorities of the two parties agreed dealt with mental retardation, medical schools, water pollution control, college aid and library services.

House members also united on mental retardation, as well as college aid and removal of a large chunk of the vocational education program.

Significant in the study are the scores of individual members, showing the relative balance of attitudes on the federal role within each party in each chamber.

AFFAIRS OF STATE

Where Will Engle Support Go Now?

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—The announcement by the office of Sen. Clair Engle that he is withdrawing from the primary campaign came as no surprise to those partially in the "know" condition, on which speculation has run rife ever since his friends qualified him for the primary ballot.

It was no surprise to State Controller Alan Cranston, candidate for the party nomination in June. Cranston was one of the few persons permitted to visit the Senator in Washington.

And it no doubt was also no surprise to Pierre Salinger, ex-White House Press Virginia, who wormed his way into the California primary on a last-minute sortie. Salinger has been close to the Engle picture in Washington ever since the Californian was first stricken and operated on for a brain ailment.

Thus, the pulling and hauling over the Democratic nomination was all for naught, and Engle's withdrawal leaves the situation in about as much of a mess as it was before he decided to quit.

Engle's name is on the primary ballot, and according to state law, cannot be taken off. Undoubtedly, he will receive a large complimentary vote, despite the fact he is not in the race.

How much the majority of Engle's vote is divided between Cranston and Salinger is a matter of speculation.

Cranston has the endorsement of the politically powerful California Democratic Council. Whether people like the CDC or not, the potency of the organization has to be recognized in vote getting.

Then too, Cranston has the solid support of Gov. G. Edmund Brown, who, although he isn't actively running for anything, still has considerable to say concerning Democratic Party politics.

On the other hand, latest reports from the Salinger camp say that "the money is pouring in." Just where it's coming from, no one seems to know, specifically, but the supposition is that the Kennedy Democrats in the East are firming up the Salinger coffers.

Legislature Ends 10th Week With Many Partisan Debates

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—The legislature ended its 10th week in session yesterday, and in the Assembly, members engaged in a series of partisan debates.

At issue were two administration state income tax bills and a third bill to provide a 7-million-dollar loan to the state school building aid fund.

In that the loan was necessary because of Gov. Edmund G. Brown's insistence the bond issue for the school loans be delayed until November and that one of the income tax bills was to carry out a campaign promise of Brown, there was lots of room for sharpshooting by Republicans.

Despite lengthy arguments, a bill bringing the state income tax into general conformity with the new federal income tax law passed 60-0; the bill eliminating low bracket income tax payments ($5 or below for single taxpayers and $10 or below for married couples filing joint returns) passed 63-2; and the loan for the school building aid program cleared 56-7.

In the middle of it, Assemblyman Don Mulford (R-Piedmont), chairman of the Republican caucus, rose to ask why Governor Brown wasn't in Sacramento.

The income tax bills were authorized by Assemblyman Nicholas Petris (D-Oakland) and similar bills already have been approved by the Senate.

Petris said about 25 provisions of the new federal law were not included in his bill as they were for situations which are not comparable in California.

The other measure would eliminate filing returns for taxpayers in the lowest brackets and would cost some 2.5 million dollars a year in lost taxes.

Education Board Due Special Budget

The Marin County Board of Education Monday will receive the proposed budget for the special education activities of the county schools office.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Marindale School, 1051 Las Ovejas Avenue, Terra Linda.

Final figures for the program, which includes education and training of the mentally retarded, blind, deaf, and orthopedically handicapped, prisoners at San Quentin and detainees at Juvenile hall, are not expected to be ready until shortly before the meeting.

Even these will be tentative, because of questions about the amount of money the state will provide for some programs and the amount the county will provide for others. For many of the programs, the county schools office supplies the service on contract with school districts.

The board will also receive the resignations of three teachers, Mrs. Grace Fearing of Marindale School; Ethel Thalmer, teacher of the educable mentally retarded at Manzanita School, Marin City, and Robert Corbertt of Loma Alta School at Juvenile Hall.

Supt. Virgil S. Hollis has asked for approval by the board of four new positions in the county schools office next year, if funds are available.

These are a half-time intermediate stenographer account clerk for business services, an intermediate clerk-typist, a clerk for repair and maintenance of audio-visual equipment, and a publications technician.

The board will also be asked to approve plans for summer session classes in the special education program, including, for the first time, kindergarten for the mentally retarded. This last class depends on county supervisors budget approval.

The board will be host to members of the Sonoma County Board of Education. Before the regular meeting starts, the boards will watch a presentation by pupils at Marindale School.

Catholic Population Is Growing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Roman Catholic population of the United States now stands at a record high of 44,874,000 and is growing three times as fast as the Protestant population.

Figures on the membership and growth rate of the Catholic Church were disclosed this week by the official Catholic Directory for 1964, published by P. J. Kenedy and Sons.

It showed an increase in Catholic population over the past year of 1,026,000, or 2.3 per cent.

The 1964 Yearbook of American Churches, published four months ago by the National Council of Churches, reported that Protestant bodies had a total membership of 64,930,000. Protestant gains over the previous year figured out to slightly less than .8 per cent.

The Jewish population of the United States, as recorded in the American Jewish Yearbook, has held steady for the past five years at about 5,500,000.

Thus the Catholic Church is the only major religious communitiy whose growth rate still exceeds that of the over-all U.S. population (about 1.6 per cent).

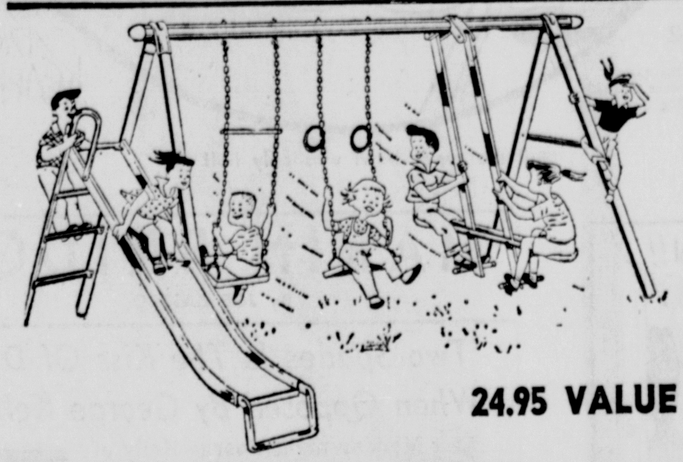

Luncheon Planned

The San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce yesterday discussed plans for the chamber's May 14 luncheon at Marin Art and Garden Club, in cooperation with service clubs. Drake High's band will play and a speaker will review San Anselmo's history.

Today is Saturday, May 2, the 123rd day of 1964 with 243 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1865, President Andrew Johnson offered a reward of $100,000 to anyone capturing Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy.

In 1933, Adolf Hitler abolished labor unions throughout Germany and created a so-called "labor front" to control all German workers.

In 1945, the Allies announced the unconditional surrender of Nazi troops in Italy and southern and western Austria.

In 1963, police in Birmingham, Ala., arrested 500 Negroes in civil rights demonstrations.

A thought for the day — St. Thomas Aquinas once said: "Three things are necessary for the salvation of man. To know what he ought to believe; to know what he ought to desire, and to know what he ought to do."

TIME AND TIDE

Department of Commerce, United States Coast Geodetic Survey. Western District headquarters. Times and heights of tides at San Francisco (Golden Gate):

The depths are always additive to the chart depths unless preceded by a minus sign (-), when the numbers are subtracted from the depth given in the chart. Lightface type indicates a.m. times; bold-face type indicates p.m. times.

'Two Spades Is The Kiss Of Death' When Opposed By George Kelly

CASTRO

Last Monday night George Kelly of Mill Valley made the remark, "Two spades is the kiss of death." My partner, Ralph Lawler of San Anselmo, and I bid the two spades so I thought he meant the kiss of death was for his team but it turned out to be for us.

What George meant was that in duplicate whenever a team contracts for two spades they are in the garden spot and the defending team is going to receive a low average, at best, the majority of the time. In a 12 table tournament the scoring will usually look something like this: two teams in four spades down two, one team in three no trump down, two teams in three spades down, and the remainder in two spades making two. Now if you are the defending team and your opponents pass out the bidding at two spades you would receive three points out of a possible 11 and this is what George meant when he mumbled, "The kiss of death" and then bid three hearts on the following hand:

NORTH
(Dick Buschman)
♥ Q 10 7
♦ A 10 8 5 4
♣ 9 6 5

WEST (me)	EAST (Ralph)
♠ K Q 9 5	♠ J 10 8 4
♥ A 4 3	♥ 9 8 5
♦ K 3 2	♦ 9 6
♣ J 10 3	♣ A K 4 2

SOUTH
(George Kelly)
♠ A 7 3
♥ K J 6 2
♦ Q J 7
♣ Q 8 7

W	N	E	S
1C	P	1S	P
2S	P	P	3H!
P	P Double	all pass

By bidding three hearts he transferred the kiss of death to use for the position is now reversed.

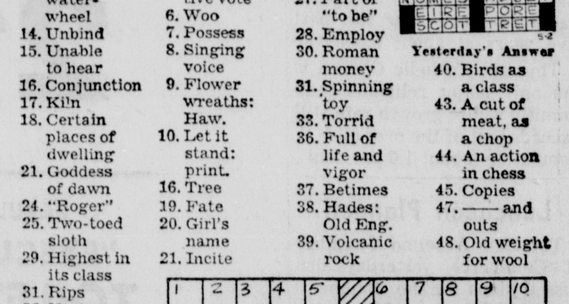

IF TWO SPADES is makeable then we are losing 110 points, if it isn't then we will go down one more than the other teams so to protect ourselves as much as possible my partner made a very fine cooperative double which I felt justified in leaving in—in this case.

After George bid three hearts I passed. This is a forcing pass due to the fact my partner and I had agreed upon a suit; Ralph now doubled and this is a perfect description of his hand. This double states the following: We have the balance of high card power and my hand is fairly square, I do not like my spade suit and most of my points are outside of spades, I have three hearts or two to an honor, partner you do not have to leave this double in, I am merely describing my hand.

GEORGE PLAYED the hand all out. He pulled trumps and we made him trump a spade finally and then he finessed the diamond king and made his contract for a top. If the damond king was in my partners hand and I had the club king George would have had a zero. George's bid needs only to be right one out of four times and he is ahead. If you are going to win at duplicate then you have to learn to make these bids as the mathematics of duplicate make them odds-on-favorites to win.

No one hates to receive a zero more than I do but when done like this with logic, inspiration, and a gamblers spirit then I congratulate my formidable opponent and say, "Wait 'til next time, George ole boy."

Fusselman Gives Talk To Eighth Grade Class

County Supervisor William D. Fusselman, who rarely makes public speeches prior to elections, yesterday handed out some facts about county government to eighth grade students at Henry C. Hall School in Kentfield.

Politics was ruled out of the classroom lecture when the supervisor, up for re-election in the Second District June 2, made this opening announcement:

"I understand an Independent-Journal reporter is present expecting some political pronouncements. I will not answer any political questions."

The closest Fusselman came to politics was in answering a question by Mrs. Gloria Lee, whose eighth grade class is studying different levels of government and has already heard officials on other levels explain their operations.

Mrs. Lee asked, "I don't deem this to be a political question, but what do you consider the qualifications to be for a supervisor?"

Fusselman smiled for a moment, and then plunged in.

"A supervisor has to be open minded, have training in business, be intelligent, and know about planning and road maintenance. He has to be able to judge the qualifications of personnel and have some legal knowledge."

Fusselman added, "Something from every part of life comes across a supervisor's desk."

The supervisor, reading from figures jotted down on paper, recited the mileage of county roads and the amount of money needed to maintain them.

From roads, Fusselman went on to an explanation of the county budget, tax sources, assessment methods, and a minutely accurate description of the boundaries of "my district, or district 2 rather."

Negro Author To Talk At College

Negro author Louis Lomax will speak at College of Marin on May 22 as part of the college's spring concert and lecture series.

Catholic High Girl Wins Maritime Essay Contest

Sally Nelson, a senior at Marin Catholic High School, has won a regional first prize in a national essay contest sponsored by the Propeller Club of the United States as part of the observance of National Maritime Day, May 22.

Coast Guard Capt. Donald V. Reardon, chairman of the Bay Area competition, said Miss Nelson's essay would also be considered for a national award.

The Harold Harding Memorial Essay Contest is an annual event open to all students of public and private high schools. This year's subject was "Why the United States needs an American Merchant Marine for her Foreign and Domestic Commerce."

As part of her prize, Miss Nelson and her teacher or parent will be guests of the Propeller Club on a two-day tour during which they will attend a Giants-Philadelphia baseball game at Candlestick Park, and a shipboard party board the States Line flagship, the C. E. Dant, after a tour of the bay. They will also be guests at a special dinner at the Hunters Point Naval Officers Club.

A sea voyage aboard an American vessel will also be awarded to Miss Nelson at special ceremonies during a civic luncheon at the San Francisco Commercial Club on National Maritime Day.

She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond T. Nelson Jr. of 55 Edward Avenue, San Rafael. She has already won a scholarship to College of the Holy Names in Oakland, where she plans to study education next fall.

Sanitary Directors Discuss Fee Hikes

Alto Sanitary District directors discussed the possible raising of sewer connection fees at their Thursday night meeting but took no action. Present fees are $60.

They received an application from K. Paul Stecher of 118 Lomita Drive, an engineer with Kaiser Aluminum, San Francisco, for the position of director being vacated Monday by Chairman Sidney L. Chapin. The board will hold its regular meeting Monday.

Piano Methods Workshop Set

The class will be offered from 10:15 a.m. to noon and will include lectures and demonstrations based on the Oxford piano course by Amelia Faustini, member of the college's faculty.

Other summer courses in music to be offered by the college include history of music in America to be given July 13-31 from 10:15 a.m. to noon and classes in harmony and music history. Individual lessons in piano, organ and voice also will be offered.

Koufax Could Be Ready For The Giants Tomorrow

Independent-Journal Sports

12 Saturday, May 2, 1964

LOS NAGELES (AP) — On a night when Willie Mays played first base for the first time in his career and the Giants and Dodgers drew the largest crowd of the season, the most significant news may have been made by a guy who pitched batting practice.

And by a doctor who walked into the Dodger dugout before the game.

The pitcher was Sandy Koufax, the doctor was team physician Robert Kerlan and the news was that the doctor said the pitcher has recovered.

NOT DEAD YET

Which means that the Dodgers — whose role this season seemed to be that of the prominent figure who is found dead in the first act—may also have a chance of recovery.

Without Koufax, they probably would have had less chance of coming back than the League of Nations.

Koufax, a 25-game winner last year, pitched batting practice 20 minutes last night before the Dodgers defeated the Giants 7-1 before a crowd of 52,773.

Koufax, out since he strained the muscles in his left forearm pitching at St. Louis April 22, told Dr. Kerlan he felt fine. And Kerlan told Dodger Manager Walter Alston:

"He's all yours now. So far as I'm concerned, he can pitch any time."

Alston said Koufax may start Monday against the Chicago Cubs but there's just a chance he'll start Sunday in the final game of the Giant series.

BIG DON SHARP

Righ-hander Don Drysdale, the only one of the top four Dodger pitchers who hasn't been injured this spring, stopped the Giants on five hits last night. He struck out nine, walked only two and picked up his second victory in three decisions.

Mays had to play with a charley horse he developed in his right leg at Chicago Wednesday. But he still made two hits — accounting for the only San Francisco run with his eighth homer of the season — and raised his batting ayerage one point to .489.

Willie was moved to first base in the second inning to ease the strain on his leg. He made six putouts and an assist and handled a couple of difficult chances without an error.

NEW TO HIM

It was only the second time in his major league career Mays played anywhere but the outfield. He spent an inning at shortstop last season.

Outfielder Tommy Davis, just getting over a sore shoulder and making his first start in nearly a week, drove in four runs for Los Angeles. He brought in one when he grounded out in the first inning, a second when he singled in the sixth and the other two when he singled in the seventh.

Willie Davis made three of the 12 Dodger hits and scored three runs. He also stole two bases. So did Dodger shortstop Maury Wills.

A BAD SIXTH

The Dodgers, leading 2-1 after 5½ innings, pulled away with a three-run rally in the sixth. Tommy Davis and John Roseboro each batted in a run in the inning and another scored on a wild pickoff throw by pitcher Billy Pierce, who had just replaced starter Jack Sanford.

Sanford was charged with nine hits and five runs, three unearned. He suffered his second loss in four decisions.

The Giants will start Bob Hendley (1-1) tonight against Joe Moeller (1-1).

LATER, MAURY—Maury Wills of the Dodgers is stopped at the plate when he tried to score from first on a bunt single by Willie Davis in the first inning last night against the San Francisco Giants at Los Angeles. Catcher Tom Haller made the tag. Wills went to second on the bunt, but tried to go all the way when the Giants threw the ball into the outfield in making a play on Davis. The Dodgers later came up with seven runs to clobber San Francisco, 7-1, behind Don Drysdale's five-hit pitching. (AP Wirephoto)

Even Yankee Foes Wish Mantle Well; He's Money In The Bank

NEW YORK (AP) — American League players, on all fronts away from New York, wish the Yankees nothing but a bad year. But they draw the line when it comes to Mickey Mantle.

They wish him a healthy year.

A member of the Washington Senators said yesterday he even mentions the switch-hitting Yankee star in his prayers.

"Please, Lord," he whispers, "See the Mantle doesn't get hurt."

HE MEANS MONEY

It isn't that the player is secretely rooting for the Yankees. Far from being a traitor, he is looking out for the welfare of his own club as well as for his own good. From a monetary sense, of course.

"I know just what's in this fellow's mind," said Don Lock, Washington's center fielder. "I feel the way he does. And I think practically all the guys in the American League feel the same way.

WORTH 5,000

"Let's face it. Mantle is the league's No. 1 attraction. Nobody else approaches him when it comes to fan appeal. I would guess that his presence in a game adds from 5,000 to as many as 15,000 people to a game."

Mantle, who fractured a foot chasing a fly ball in Baltimore last June, appeared in only 65 games in 1963. It is significant that the Yankees had their lowest home attendance in 18 years.

"That's what I mean," said Lock. "It's not only the Yankees who suffered. Every club in the league was hurt. Lots of people just wouldn't come out to the park knowing Mantle wasn't playing.

THEY ALL HURT

"Yes sir, Mickey's pain was felt by everybody — in the pocketbook."

A lot of hearts skipped beats in the fifth inning of last night's game against the Senators when Mantle pulled a muscle in his right leg while chasing a fly ball hit by Chuck Cottier. The star outfielder left the game after batting in the bottom of the fifth but the injury was diagnosed as minor.

First Just Isn't Right For Willie

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Willie Mays played first base for the first time in his 12-year major league career last night when the San Francisco Giants lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1, but he does not like the position.

"I'm a centerfielder," Mays said glumly in the dressing room after the game. "I'm not a first baseman. It would take me a while to learn the position."

Mays started in his normal centerfield position but was switched to first base in the second inning by Manager Alvin Dark. Dark said that he noticed that Mays "was not running well" because of a charley horse in his left leg. The Giant manager said he sent Mays to first because he would not have to move around so much there.

Mays handled his glove well, making six putouts and one assist. He took part in double play when Ron Fairly, Dodger first baseman, hit a grounder to second baseman Chuck Hiller. Hiller flipped the ball to Mays for the putout on Fairly and Mays threw to shortstop Jose Pagan to get Frank Howard going into second base. Howard had singled to open the inning.

TWO GAMES ON VIDEO

San Francisco Giant-Los Angeles Dodger baseball games will be televised by KTVU-TV (Channel 2) from Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles tonight and tomorrow.

Tonight's pre-game shows will begin at 7:30 o'clock with the game starting at 7:55.

The afternoon game tomorrow will begin at 12:55 p.m., preceded at 12:30 by warm-up shows.

The Coach Approves Of Hurling

By UPI INTERNATIONAL

Pitcher Whitey Ford earned the approval today of coach Whitey Ford.

"Real good," was coach Ford's professional appraisal of pitcher Ford's 1-0 two-hit victory last night over the Washington Senators which marked his second shutout of the season and the New York Yankees' fourth straight triumph.

"My equipment was excellent," said the 35-year-old pitcher-coach, brushing an icicle off his left elbow. "The slider and the curve were doing fine."

Ford shivered recalling the blustery, 48-degree weather in which he achieved the 36th shutout and 201st win of his major league career in tidy 1:55 time.

"I walked three but my control was such I was putting the ball where I wanted it," he pointed out.

"The cold bothered me in the eighth inning," he said. "So I called in Bobby Richardson from second base. I just wanted an excuse to stand with my hands in my armpits for a few minutes so my left hand would warm up enough to grip the ball."

Monterey Races Are On; Tiff With Drivers Settled

MONTEREY (AP)—Sports car racing is on as scheduled this weekend at laguna Seca — but only after sponsors agreed to pay $300 - per - car appearance money to the leading entries.

A settlement was reached last night between dissident drivers and the Sports Car Racing Assn. of the Monterey Peninsula after the racers threatened to boycott tomorrow's $10,000 program.

But now the big names will be in the 100-mile Grand Touring cars and 150-mile driver's championship races of the U.S. road racing series.

Ken Miles of North Hollywood led the drivers' battle for an appearance money arrangement similar to that used in Europe.

Both sides agreed the settlement was fair.

The top drivers agreed to pay the $50 entry fee. The settlement did not include a guarantee sought by the drivers for the association's richer Pacific Grand Prix here in Otcober.

The men who will get the money are Miles, Dave MacDonald and Bob Holbert of the Shelby Ford-Cobra team, Roger Penske and Jim Hall of the Chaparral-Chevy team, John Cannon, lone driver of a Mecom Special, and Skip Hudson, driver for Nickey Chevrolet.

Fur Ruffled, Irate 'Kitten' Turns Vicious

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Stanley (Kitten) Hayward was knocked down for the first time in his boxing career last night. It made him mad.

"The knockdown even made me vicious," the welterweight contender recalled after rallying from the second-round knockdown to score a technical knockout upset victory over Curtis Cokes, of Dallas, Tex.

"I said to myself," explained Hayward, " 'I've never been knocked down before even in a gym,' And it really made me angry."

Hayward, weighing 150¾ and 10th ranked by the World Boxing Assn., floored the sixth-ranked Cokes, 147, three times in the fourth round with combination punches.

Referee Zack Clayton halted the fight at 2:45 of the round after the third knockdown. A fight must be stopped after three knockdowns in one round under Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission rules.

Up until that point, Hayward had trailed on all three scorecards in the nationally televised bout at the Blue Horizon Arena which had been scheduled for 10 rounds.

Marin Softballers To Open Season

Sohner Tree Service will open its 1964 season Monday night with a softball doubleheader in Santa Rosa against perenially-strong Valley Furniture.

The Treemen will make their first Marin appearance next Thursday when they host the Santa Rosa Athletic Club in an 8 p.m. twin-bill at San Rafael's Albert Park.

Sohner manager Jess Munyon announced yesterday that righthander Jay Leatherwood would hurl Monday's first game, while either Earl Loew or Dave Shallenberger will pitch the nightcap.

Mighty Mite Chi Chi Defies The Elements At Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—More wind—hopefully not as severe as yesterday's—was promised golfers today as Chi Chi Rodriguez, the mighty mite from Puerto Rico, led the way into the third round of the $65,000 Tournament of Champions.

The 120-pound, 5-foot-7½ Chi Chi marched courageously through the wind and sand to take the lead at the midway mark yesterday with a 2-under par 70 and a 36-hole total of 139.

NICKLAUS NEXT

Hanging two strokes back was Jack Nicklaus, who had a 73 for 141 and this observation on the weather as he wiped reddened eyes:

"The conditions were as tough as they'll ever be. It was not so much the wind, but the sand in the wind."

Gary Player of South Africa, who had a 71 and is tied in third place with Doug Ford and George Knudson at 142, said, "It was the worst weather I've ever played golf in."

ARNIE'S COMMENT

Arnold Palmer, who is five strokes off the front end with a pair of 72s, added that he'd just as soon try to play golf in a wind tunnel.

The site of this 12th annual event is the 7,073-yard par 36-36-72 Desert Inn Country Club course.

Ford, the first round leader with a 67, settled for a 75.

Only four players were able to break par Friday — Rodriguez, Knudson, Player and Paul Harney. The latter's 71 left him at 143.

'JUST ROUTINE'

Rodriguez went into the ninth hole three shots under par, then hit out of bounds and took a triple bogey 7. Unshaken, the 28-year-old Chi Chi holed birdie putts of 20 and 50 feet on the 10th and 11th holes.

Said Chi Chi, a man who loves to kid, "These were routine putts."

Rodriguez, despite his slight weight, prides himself on his ability to belt the ball a long way. He and Nicklaus were partners in the second round and Chi Chi outdrove the powerful Nicklaus on many holes.

FREE ADMISSIONS

Giants To Play Host To Youngsters Again

The San Francisco Giants will conduct their fifth annual Invitational Program for Children at Candlestick Park during the summer vacation period, program director Walter Mails has announced.

Since moving into Candlestick, the Giants have given free admissions to sponsored youth groups totalling upwards of 100,000 youngsters annually.

The program is open to boys and girls in the 9 to 14 year age bracket, who must be organized in properly sponsored and chaperoned groups.

The free admissions will be granted on an invitational basis, extended only in response to written application, and given only on specifically assigned dates throughout the vacation period.

Invitations may be obtained by following these procedures:

1. The sponsoring group, or its representative, must apply for the invitation by letter to Walter Mails at Candlestick Park.

2. Each request must specify the number of youngsters in the group.

3. Each group must be accompanied by adult chaperones, in the ratio of one adult to ten youngsters. The adult chaperones, in accepting the invitation, agree to remain with the youngsters throughout the game in the interest of discipline and good order.

4. Each group must accept the date assigned to it, and obey the regulations governing their attendance.

5. Grandstand seats will be assigned to each group, but each group must agree to occupy only those seats assigned to it.

6. The Giants will honor as many requests as they can, and will fill them in the order of their receipt.

7. Sponsorship will be limited to organized youth and welfare groups, i.e.—Churches, fraternal groups, Little League, CYO, YMCA, Police Athletic League, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and groups in that category.

Semi-Pro Ball Set Tomorrow

Billings Hutchison Builders of Marin will meet Milens Jewelers of San Francisco in semi-pro baseball at 1 p.m. tomorrow at Albert Field, San Rafael.

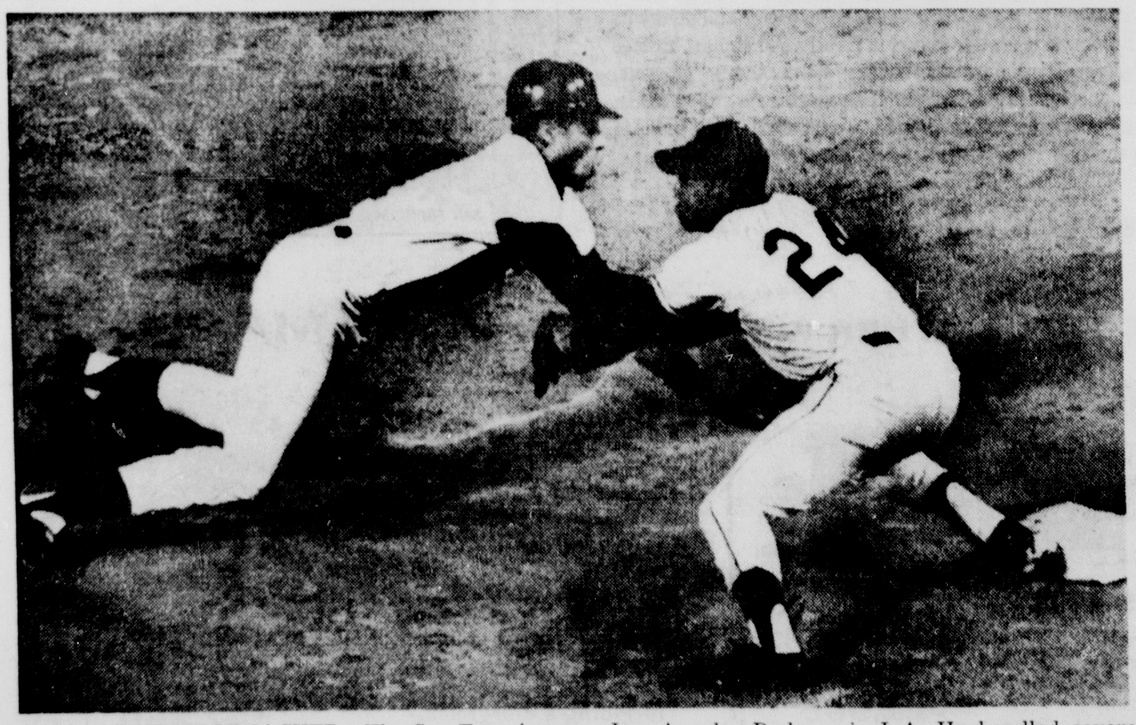

The game is the tenth between the two teams, with the Marinites still winless in the series. However, seven of their nine losses to the jewelers have been by one run, and the fact that tomorrow's game will be the first meeting of the clubs on the Builders' home field is expected to result in a tight contest.

The Builders will use either star southpaw Bob DeRosa or newly-acquired righthander Skip Rush on the mound, with the jewelers expected to pitch their ace righthander Joe Dorsey.

Sulger Stars In Cadet Win At Petaluma

Jim Sulger was the whole show yesterday as the San Rafael Military Academy baseball nine trimmed St. Vincent's at Petaluma 11-4.

Not content with pitching a four-hitter and fanning 12, Sulger also collected four hits in four times at bat—and drove in four runs.

Randy Townsend chimed in with two hits including a home run and also drove in four runs. Dick Allen had two for four and two RBIs.

The Cadets remained tied for first place in the Bay Counties League and have a three win-six loss season's record.

Bulldog Jayvee Club Wins 1-0

San Rafael High School's varsity baseballers could do well to watch some of their jayvee team's games.

Yesterday, while the varsity was being shut out, the 1-0, by Marin Catholic, the Bulldog junior varsity put the clamps on the Wildcats, 15-0.

Shutting out the Marin Catholic jayvees was San Rafael pitcher Dave Cooley, helped out by some pounding hits by his teammates.

The San Rafael frosh also won, 16-1, over the St. Vincents' freshmen.

Dave Beswick's Hurling Humbles Unbeaten Foes

What does Jack-the-giant-killer have in common with the Marin Catholic High School baseball team?

Both thrive on the toughest competition — Jack is great against assorted ogres of fiction, and the Wildcat nine is dynamite against leaders in the Marin Athletic League.

Marin Catholic tipped previously unbeaten San Rafael yesterday, 1-0. This win came right on the heels of their Wednesday trouncing of the Terra Linda team, who had also been unbeaten in MAL play.

Hero for the winners, as he was in the game against the Trojans, was hurler Dave Beswick. Beswick pitched the entire contest Wednesday, and came in for three perfect innings of relief yesterday.

Another big man on the Marin squad was sophomore first sacker George King. King has now knocked in seven of the 13 runs batted in by the entire Wildcat team this season, and he came up with the key hit against San Rafael to provide the game's only tally.

Marin Catholic scored its run in the sixth. Beswick led off with a double and Bill Shine came in to run for him. When right fielder Bob Lombardi smashed another two-bagger, Shine took off for home. He never made it.

The pinchrunner fell while rounding third, and had to scramble back to avoid being tagged out on the throw-in from Lombardi's hit. Then along came King to save the day, and Shine. The powerful batter drove a long fly to deep center, and Shine trotted carefully home with the winning run.

Novato Bats Explode Against Hapless Tam

Novato High School batsmen exploded to a 9-6 Marin Athletic League baseball victory over Tamalpais High yesterday.

Pounding out eight hits and capitalizing on seven Indian errors, the Hornets found their second league victory at the hands of the cellar-dwelling Tamalpais nine.

Nick Willard swung the big bat for Novato, driving in two runs in the first with a triple. Willard came home on Charles Larsen's single and another single by centerfielder George Scherba brought Larsen around for 4-0.

Tamalpais took the lead in the bottom of the opening inning. With two on, Indian first sacker Robin Porsch drove a big triple to the outfield. Then, Gary Stephens, the Tam catcher, got a base-on-balls, followed by a run-producing single by shortstop Cedric Collett. After Larry Gray hit into a fielder's choice, the Novato pitchers gave up four more walks for the tieing and go-ahead runs.

By the sixth inning, both teams had managed a total of six runs apiece, but it was Novato who came up with the winning runs in that frame.

Hornet catcher Ron Rowell got on base via a fielder's choice, and went to third on a single by Tom Miller. Willard hit a ball to the second baseman and, after three errors, Novato had three runs and the ball game.

Drake Soph Baffles Redwood In Shutout

Sophomore Charles Locati of Drake High School baffled even the seniors yesterday.

Locati owned the arm which hurled the Pirate baseball team to a 3-0 shutout win over Redwood High in a Marin Athletic League contest. The young ace whiffed ten and walked just two men in his seven innings of work.

Drake batters, unlike their Redwood counterparts who haven't scored a run in two games, came up with timely and profusive hitting to give Locati all he needed to notch the victory.

After Larry Gerughty, Pirate second baseman, doubled home a run in the first inning, there was no scoring until the Green and White came up to bat in the bottom of the fifth. After three singles, a sacrifice hit by Don Humphrey brought home one Pirate tally. Then, Russ Damos, Drake right fielder, grounded to shortstop with one away. Damos was out at first, but Terry Tadlock scored the final run of the game on the play.

Three Records Fall As Redwood Tops Marin Track Trials

County prep varsity track stars cracked three Marin Athletic League records and tied another in the MAL Class A track and Class Band C field trials held at Drake High School yesterday.

Leading the standard-smashers was Tom Strathairn of Redwood High, who set a mark in the 120 high hurdles with a time of 14.6, and then came back to top his own standard in the 180 lows by a tenth of a second, running that event in 19.8.

Sigurd Hope of Tamalpais won the qualifying round of the two mile race in 10:14.2, and, since that event is being run for the first time in the league this year, Hope automatically set the MAL record.

Sophomore gridiron specialist Dean Lazzarini of Drake proved he is far from being in a one-sport rut by dashing off a 9.9 mark in the century to tie Bob Olson's record. Olson, of San Rafael High, also finished well enough to qualify for the May 9 league finals to be held on the Bulldog track.

Once again, the MAL dual meet champion Redwood team ran away with spots in the qualifying heats, placing 21 men, in addition to Thursday's 12 in the field events. The Giants, with 33 competitors in the finals, are followed, if distantly, by Drake, who will bring 16 boys to San Rafael and the MAL finals next Saturday.

Surprising Terra Linda made a strong showing yesterday to gain nine spots, going with six more the Trojans managed in field events on the first day of the trials. Terra Linda is followed by, Tamalpais (14 men in finals), San Rafael (13), Marin Catholic (8), and Novato (8).

The list of qualifiers for the MAL finals next Saturday includes the times of only the top finisher in each event. Since the other qualifiers' times were not available, there is no order to the ranking of the qualifiers, but rather they are listed at random.

Varsity qualifiers:

440 yds.—Rick Edwards (T.L.), 52.6; Dick Whitlock (N), Larry Stein (D), Jack Lindahl (R), Adams (M.C.), Tom Windrick (D), John Kaufman (R), Clint Hickle (N).

Two mile—Sigurd Hope (T), 10:14.2 (MAL record; first year two mile has been an event in MAL); Dave Barni (S.R.), Rich Vacha (D), Boots Ferguson (R), Burton Lyons (T.L.), Dan O'Brien (T), Jim Miner (N), Mike Stevens (N).

THE SEASON IS UNDER WAY

It's official. The 1964 California trout fishing season opened this morning. And among the lucky "early birds" was 5-year-old Jimmy Bartunek, who admires his catch at Marin's Lake Lagunitas. But catching fish is no new experience for young Jimmy. He recently landed a 15-pound bass while fishing in the Bay with his father. (Independent-Journal photo by Al Sims)

Outlook Good For The Trout Seekers

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A record number of anglers was expected to jam California's lakes and streams today for the opening of the statewide trout season.

Except for snow flurries along the eastern slope of the Sierra, the weather outlook was for cool temperatures and breezes, but little if any rain.

Water conditions generally were the best in years for an opening day. Streams in the northern part of the state were unusually low and clear, while Southern California waters had been helped by late rains.

Much of Southern California was to merely switch from a winter daily limit of five to the statewide limit of 10. But in the north, trout fishing was to kick-off for the first time this year in all counties except Del Norte, Humboldt and portions of Trinity, Mendocino and Lake where anglers will have to wait until May 30.

TARS PULL SURPRISE IN TRACK

Despite rain and hail, College of Marin's track and field performers turned in their best effort of the year to take second spot in the Golden Valley Conference meet at Rocklin yesterday.

Rich Brown in the 880 (1:58.2), Dennis Nickel in the discus (135-0), and Don Stone in the triple jump (42-4) all took individual first place honors in their events. Nickel, who had done 127 feet in practice, flipped the discus eight feet further in his best-of-life toss to lead a Tar one-two finish in that event. Darryl Bonds collected eight points for his second place.

Brown and teammate Jim Duff also finished one-two in the half-mile, unexpectedly bringing home another 18 big points for the surprising Tars.

College of Marin's mile relay team, with the best time in the GVC this season, in a previous meet turned in a time (3:33.7) which was seven seconds slower than their usual fine mark, and still garnered first place.

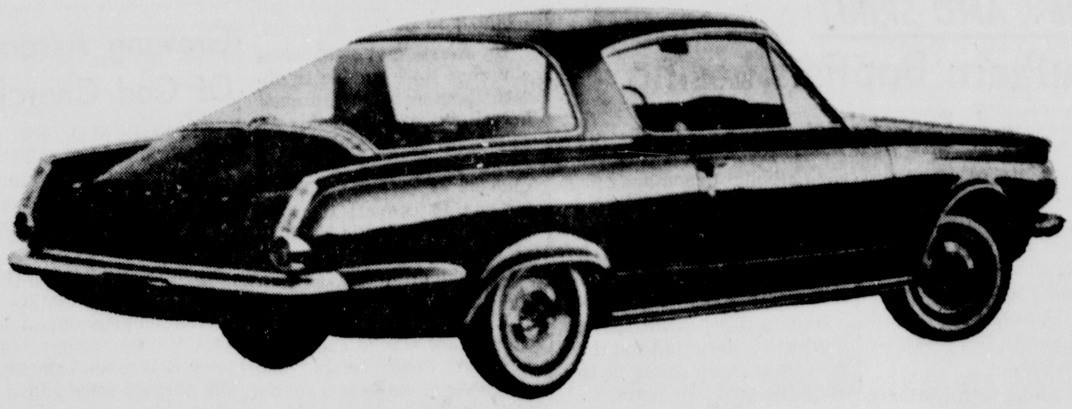

In addition to the seconds collected by Bonds and Duff, Tar cindermen added three more in other events. Bill Gillingham, rated a possible winner in the 440 and the 220, was beaten in both events, but nevertheless took second in the quarter-mile and managed a fourth in the 220. Don Stone added a second in the broad jump to his triple jump victory, and Bruce Ketron finished right behind the Santa Rosa runner for eight points in the two mile race.

Other Tar points came from Rich Brady, who was third in the shot put; Ketron, third in the mile; and Bob Daughtery, who followed Nickel and Bonds in the discus with a fourth place. Carl Jensen also wrapped up fifth spot in the two mile for two points.

The GVC teams and their point total were, Sierra, 182; Marin, 106; Santa Rosa, 80; Yuba, 58; Napa, 28; Shasta, 12; and Siskiyou, 8.

NEW UNIT—From the south, this is the way the $221,448 unit of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Marin will appear. It will be the first of several buildings on the hill top north of the Civic Center. Construction will start at the end of this month.

Unitarians To Start Building In May

Construction of the first phase of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Marin's new development on the first hill north of the Civil Center is due to begin the end of next month, Rev. Karel F. Botermans, minister, announced today.

A $221,448 bid for the project has already been received from Herrero Brothers of San Francisco. Botermans said the firm was the lowest bidder.

The building will include a multipurpose room with seating for 285, offices, a kitchen, classroom and facilities for a weekday cooperative nursery. The multipurpose room will serve at first for church services.

This is the first of several buildings that San Francisco Architect Stephen Heller has designed for the hill-top site.

A special building fund campaign was launched this week under G. William Bauer, chairman of the church board; Irving Baker, director of income; and Scott Nicoll, general chairman of the campaign. Dr. John C. Siemens is chairman of the building committee.

The church meets now in the Tamalpais Women's Center, Kentfield.

Schwenkfelders Small But Thriving

By GEORGE ESPER

PENNSBURG, Pa. (AP) — In the 1730s, the remaining members—less than 200—of a religious group known as the Schwenkfelders fled to Pennsylvania from Germany looking for the religious freedom promised by William Penn.

Today, they number about 2,500, living mainly in southeastern Pennsylvania. This small, quiet country town is their headquarters. They observe Sept. 24 as a day of rememberance and thanksgiving —Gedaechtnisz Tag—for their safe arrival in the New World.

The once distinctive dress—similar to the Amish and Mennonites — has disappeared. They are readily accepted in the community. One member, Richard S. Schweiker, is a U. S. congressman from this district. Another, Dr. J. Maurice Hohfeld, is dean of the Hartford Theological Seminary.

The church, a member of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, describes itself as a Protestant, evangelical, ecumenical denomination.

Schwenkfelder churches — there are five of them with nine ministers—teach the right, privilege and obligation in all matters of faith and work. The emphasis is on the spirit rather than the letter.

The group is the spiritual descendant of a Silesian nobleman, Caspar Schwenkfeld von Ossig, who was a contemporary of Martin Luther and John Calvin. Schwenkfeld—1489-1561—did not seek a following, formulated no creed, and did not attempt to organize a church based on his beliefs, according to Andrew S. Berky, a Schwenkfelder who is assistant headmaster of the group's preparatory school here.

Schwenkfeld sought a reformation of life; liberty of religious belief—a fellowship of all believers, and one united, Christian Church, the Ecumenical church.

Cobelievers numbered many thousands by the middle of the century.

They promoted their beliefs in secret meetings, using Schwenkfeld's literature for the conduct of worship services. These assemblies, or conventicles, says Berky, were particularly strong in south Germany and Silesia.

"In South Germany," says Berky, "the last groups of the movement were lost in the Thirty Years' War. In Silesia, through persecution and assimilation their number finally dwindled to a few thousand."

He asserts that established churches were unable to absorb them as an unchurched heretical people, and this resulted in the issuance of a royal decree in 1719 by Charles VI, creating a Jesuit mission to convert them to the Roman Catholic Faith.

Berky says fines, imprisonments and other persecutions imposed became unbearable by 1721. They fled to Saxony as a temporary refuge and eventually to Pennsylvania. The main body of emigrants set out from Saxony in April 1734.

"We have been associated with the Friends, Brethren and Mennonite," says the Rev. Jack R. Rothenberger, former minister at the Lansdale Schwenkfelder church and now chaplain at the Perkiomen School.

Today says Rothenberger, "the church government is very similar to the Congregational Christian Church, now a part of the United Church of Christ.

Growing Assembly Of God Church

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — Church Membership of the Assemblies of God has increased more than 5 per cent over 1962, according to the organization's headquarters here.

Increasing by more than 28,000, the denomination has a current membership of 543,000. This is the largest increase since 1957 when more than 50,000 persons were added to the church. The Assemblies of God is the largest Pentecostal denomination in the world.

Fun For Dad, Family

A special evening for fathers and sons and daughters will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. tomorrow in the patio of Temple Rodef Sholom in Santa Venetia. In addition to food, there will be a magic act, folk dancing and a hootenanny.

MONEY AND SPIRIT

Southern Baptists Losing Ground Despite Big Size

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Southern Baptists, comprising the nation's largest Protestant denomination, are facing a dilemma of growing financial rescources and declining spiritual interest.

Baptist churches are collecting more money but there are fewer converts.

Since it broke with Northern Baptists over slavery in 1845, the loosely organized Southern Baptist Convention has grown from its original 351,951 members to nearly 10.5 million. Its Northern counterpart, the American Baptist Convention, has not experienced such a rate of growth. Its membership is 1.5 million.

Southern Baptist, conservative and fundamentalist, has spread into the 50 states and 54 foreign countries. It operates six seminaries, 45 hospitals, and numerous children's homes.

Last year, Southern Baptist counted 10,395,940 members to become officially the biggest non-Catholic denomination in the United States.

Its contributions ran to more than 556 million dollars last year; its property was valued at a record 2.75 billion dollars.

Despite these gains, the rate of growth is declining and there have been sharp drops in baptisms the past two years.

Baptisms dropped from 416,867 to 355,325 in an eight-year period starting in 1955. Last year the decline was 6.9 per cent.

Baptist leaders disagree over the reasons but many attribute the decline to a national trend away from organized religion. Others cite growing urbanization and failure of the church to provide needed direction or inspiration.

The 'Sub-Human' Outrage

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A few weeks ago, in a quiet residential neighborhood of New York, 38 people watched a killer stalk a defenseless woman.

It took him half an hour—and three separate attacks—to complete the brutal business of stabbing her to death. During that time, any one of the onlookers might have saved her life simply by picking up the telephone and calling the police. Not one of them lifted a finger to help her. As they explained later to police, "they didn't want to get involved."

On April 13, nearly 3,000 people gathered in the streets around the Dewitt Clinton Hotel in Albany, N. Y., to watch an emotionally distraught 19-year-old boy pace back and forth along a narrow ledge on the 11th floor.

"Go ahead and jump," somebody yelled. "Don't be chicken, jump," shouted another spectator.

"Jump, jump, jump," chanted a crowd of boys in unison.

When police finally pulled the boy to safety, members of the crowd made no secret of their disappointment. "They really wanted to see him die," said a fireman, shaking his head in disbelief.

What do these episodes reveal about the mental and spiritual health of our urban society? What do they say about the state of religion in America?

UPI sought answers to these questions from a famous psychiatrist, a Protestant editor, a Roman Catholic bishop, and a Jewish rabbi.

Dr. Robert H. Felix, director of the National Institute of Mental Health and past president of the American Psychiatric Assn., said both incidents demonstrate the "dehumanizing" effects of life in an urban environment where relationships tend to become increasingly impersonal.

"One of the marks of a fully civilized human being is a capocity for sympathy and compassion towards others," he said. "People who stand by and watch a helpless woman be murdered, or exhort a boy to commit suicide to provide them with a 'thrill,' are acting in a way that can only be described as sub-human."

Dr. Frank E. Gaebelein, editor of Christianity Today magazine, said the incidents are symptomatic of the "callousness" which is wide spread in contemporary society.

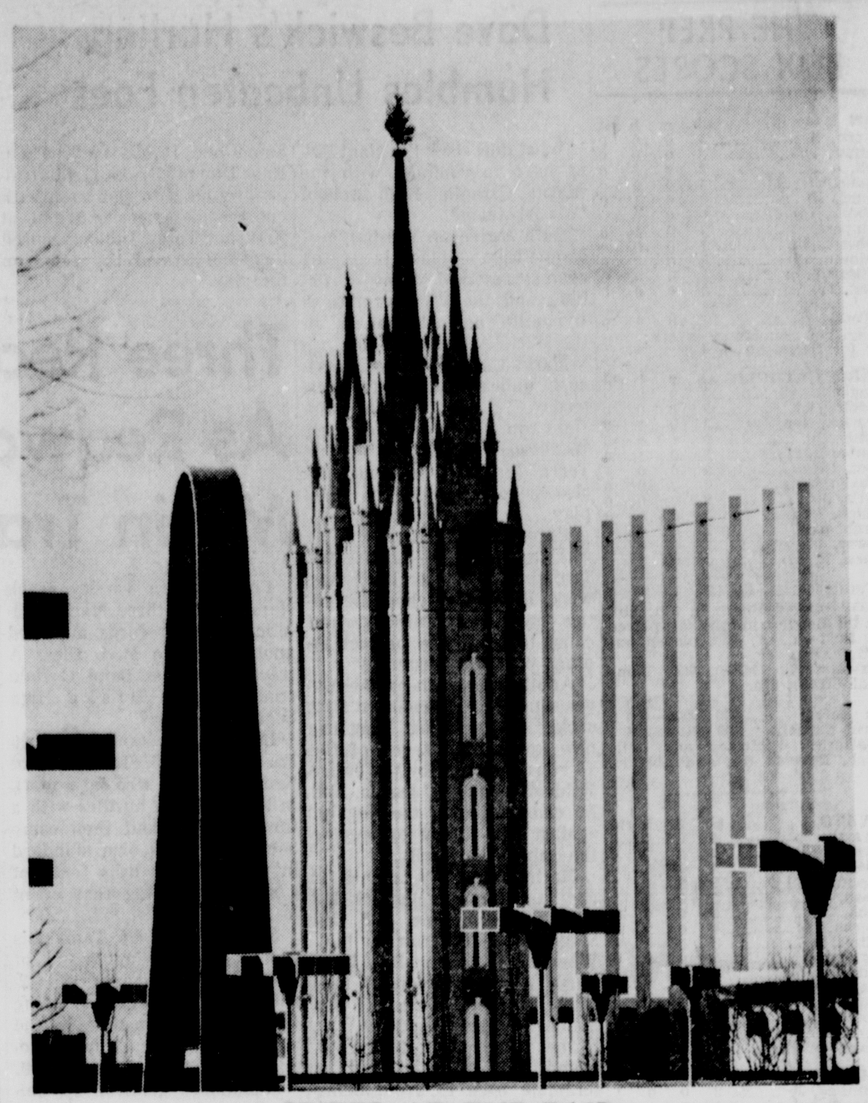

"We have become hardened — perhaps even addicted — to violence," he said. "The dreadful wars we have been through seem to have cheapened the value we place on a human life."

The Most Rev. Philip M. Hannan, auxiliary Catholic bishop of Washington, D. C., said the incidents show that the Judeo-Christian concept of brotherly love is a practical necessity for decent community life.

Without it, he said, "Our attitudes toward one another quickly degenerate into a kind of neutralism, in which we think of our neighbor only as a potential nuisance."

Rabbi Richard G. Hirsch, director of the Social Action Center of Reform Judaism in Washington, said that "unwillingness to 'get involved' in the troubles of others is becoming characteristic of many people in our society."

"It shows up not only in relation to personal problems, but in an indifferent attitude toward social problems such as poverty and racial injustice," he said.

SPIRES AT THE FAIR

The Mormon Church's building at the New York World's Fair spires high in the skyline. Inside is a mural 50 yards long depicting the history of the church of Latter-Day Saints. A replica of Bertel Thorvaldsen's 12-foot "The Christus" stands in one wing.

Catholic Bishop's Life Different In Stockholm

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Most Rev. John E. Taylor, a native of East St. Louis, Ill., may have been the first Roman Catholic priest to be elevated to bishop in a city hall instead of a church

But being the first is nothing new for Bishop Taylor, who last September became the first native-born American bishop of Stockholm, Sweden.

Bishop Taylor, a member of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate, was the first rector of his order's seminary in Pass Christian, Miss. (from 1953-58).

He was the first Catholic Bishop of Stockholm and the first Catholic bishop consecrated in Scandinavia in the 400 years since the Protestant Reformation.

He is back in the United States for a visit, his first since leaving for Stockholm.

Bishop Taylor, 44, was consecrated by Bishop Fulton J. Sheen in the Stockholm City Hall, because there were no churches large enough to accommodate the crowd. His reception was held in the American embassy.

He is probably one of the very few clergymen to live in an apartment house rather than a rectory, surrounded by the citizens of Stockholm.

The bishops supervises about 700 priests who minister to 28,000 Roman Catholics spread over the 170,000 square miles of Sweden.

ROSS CURATE ADDS FAIRFAX TO DUTIES

Rev. Charles Gompertz, curate at St. John's Episcopal Church, Ross, took on an extra duty yesterday when he was appointed vicar of St. Augustine's Episcopal Church, Fairfax.

Gompertz, who has been at St. John's two years, will continue his duties there, taking extra time for work in Fairfax. St. Augustine's Mission has had a spotty history with several part-time vicars since it was organized about five years ago.

It was officially closed by the Diocese of California in December, but members wanted to keep going and hired a priest at their own expense.

The Watusi tribe in Africa believes its members were sent from heaven to rule — not work.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Physicians More Sympathetic If They've Been Operated On

VAN DELLEN

A reader recently asked if I ever had been ill and had surgery. I don't know why she wanted this information, and said so. But I firmly believe physicians are more sympathetic after they have been ill, and so my reply included all the details.

A woman wrote: "In a reply a short time ago you expressed puzzlement upon being asked whether you ever had been ill or operated upon. What kind of person would ask such a question? After mulling this over, I came to this conclusion: Because of necessity, your answers must be brief, and, as a result, sound curt. People are emotionally involved with their aches and pains and are easily hurt.

"MY UNHAPPIEST moments were spent in the offices of doctors who never smiled. Relating your troubles to these fellows was like inserting symptoms into a Univac. The machine clicked and groaned and you got a terse diagnosis tailored to your age, sex, and weight.

"Medicine doled out via a newspaper column falls into the same unhappy category. The patient can't see your smile or feel your warm interest. The woman who wrote you may have been reacting in her own way to the image of cold humanity you often present."

I was about to throw in the towel at this point but there was one more sentence on the next page. "However, since you often print adverse criticism of your column, this proves to my satisfaction that you are not an authoritarian meanie but a nice guy." Bless you, dear.

A 74-YEAR-OLD man who cured himself of snoring by sleeping without a pillow, writes: "I am sending this information along for what it is worth. It seems to me a person gets more air and breathes easier without a pillow."

We were happy to hear that one person has cured himself of snoring. This method is easy and costs nothing.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

INFLAMED DIVERTICULAS

W. C. R. writes: Can chronic diverticulitis be cured by medicine or is surgery needed?

REPLY

Most attacks of diverticulitis respond to rest, heat, antibiotics, relaxants, and a bland diet. The involved part of the colon is removed only when the condition becomes disabling. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on diverticulosis.

CARE AFTER SURGERY

K. B. writes: After a hernia operation, what is the post-operative care?

REPLY

Following herniotomy, gradual resumption of activity is encouraged without subjecting the individual to undue strain. Detailed orders include a painkiller, a sedative, and a light diet until nausea subsides.

MEN AND WOMEN TOPERS

O. P. writes: Are there as many women alcoholics as men alcoholics?

REPLY

No. In the United States, the ratio is 7 to 1 and in England 2 to 1. Of course this does not take into account the secret nippers.

CRACKPOT IDEA

Mrs. G. writes: Is it true that people with high blood pressure or diabetes cannot drink fluoridated water?

REPLY

No. This statement not only is false but a malicious lie.

AFFECTS CELL GROWTH

S. H. writes: What does mustard gas do for cancer?

REPLY

Nitrogen mustard inhibits the growth of cancer cells.

Today's Health Hint — The bedridden should exercise by moving fingers and toes, arms and legs.

Two Drivers Injured In Car-Van Crash

Two drivers suffered minor injuries in a car-van collision at Tiburon Boulevard and Lyford Drive, Tiburon, at 11:55 a.m. yesterday.

Margaret Hagopian, 32, of San Francisco, driver of the car, suffered a cut lower lip. She was treated at Marin General Hospital and sent home.

Dan G. Malone, 32, of Petaluma, driver of a two-door van, suffered a sore neck. He was examined at Marin General Hospital and sent home.

The California Highway Patrol said the Hagopian car collided with the rear of Malone's van when he slowed on Tiburon Boulevard to make a left turn.

San Rafael Girl Struck By Auto

A 5-year-old San Rafael girl suffered a skull fracture and a deep facial gash when she was struck by an auto at Fourth and G streets, San Rafael, at 4:12 p.m. yesterday.

Laurie Aileen Witt of 35 Maywood Way was taken to Kaiser Hospital in San Francisco. Her mother, Mrs. Herbert J. Witt, said Laurie's condition was not serious, and the skull fracture was considered slight.

Driver of the 1955 sedan which hit the child was August Thomas Pilacelli, 48, of 841 Estencia Way, according to San Rafael police.

Hub Police Chief Has Anniversary

Today was not just another day for Asst. Chief Sam Serio of San Anselmo Police Department. This was an anniversary.

He began police work on May 2, 1930, just 34 years ago. That was when he reported for duty at the Fairfax Police Department where he worked for eight years as a police officer.

He then transferred to San Anselmo where he worked up to his present post in 26 years.

Assistant Chief Serio has established a state-wide reputation for his perseverance in investigating bad check cases. San Anselmo is a bad place to pass a bad check.

Finicky Poodle Just Likes Money

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI)— Nicki, a toy poodle, is a finicky eater. He just likes money.

Mrs. Evelyn DeLoach, his owner bought a variety of dog foods but none interested Nicki one bite's worth. She even fed him vitamins.

When her son left a $5 bill and four ones on a living room table, the dog ate half of the $5 before Mrs. DeLoach could get the money. "He could have at least started on the ones first," she moaned.

Enters Guilty Plea To Amended Complaint

Luis Richard de Olazarra, 21, Novato, entered a plea of guilty to an amended complaint charging contributing to delinquency of a minor yesterday in Marin Municipal Court and was placed on six months probation.

De Olazarra, of 920 Calle Paseo, originally was charged with statutory rape involving a 17-year-old girl on April 13.

Angry Goldwater

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater shoved away a newsman's microphone upon his arrival at an airport here last night, and said "Get that damn thing out of here."

He hold the newsmen he didn't want the microphone stuck in his face. He spoke earlier at Columbus, Ga.

Then he told the crowd of several hundred who greeted him at an airport in nearby Dekalb County that he was sorry, and a little tired. He said he had not expected so many to greet him.

Civil Rights Plan

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People may call a national one-day work stoppage and prayer vigil if Congress fails to pass a civil rights bill in reasonable time, says one of its officials.

Alfred Baker Lewis, NAACP treasurer and member of its 52-man board of directors, said yesterday the timing will be up to Roy Wilkins, the organization's executive secretary.

Lewis said demonstrations would be set up on a community basis.

$200 MILLION

New Missile System Waste Is Charged

By WILLIAM E. HOWARD
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators have accused Navy researchers of wasting 200 million dollars on a new missile system that got so far out of hand it couldn't fit aboard ship.

The missile is the Typhon — an advanced weapon designed to shoot down both aircraft and submarine-launched enemy missiles. The program was cancelled in January after years of virtually fruitless effort.

Responsibility for the failure was laid to both the Navy and its contractors in newly released and censored testimony before the House defense appropriations subcommittee during a hearing March 16. Moreover, investigators called it a setback in preparing for the "threat of the 1970s."

"Failure of the Typhon program," said Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes (D-Fla.), a committee member, "not only cost the taxpayers of the United States more than 200 million of their dollars needlessly, but the failure of the program means that the Navy still does not have a first-class air defense system with which to cope with modern aircraft."

The Typhon was to be an outgrowth of a family of shipboard air defense missiles which the Navy calls the "Three T's." They are the Tartar, Terrier and Talos. All three are now deployed aboard ships, but all have run into technical problems which have seriously hampered their usefulness. Last year, the Navy initiated a 250-million-dollar "improvement" program to try to whip the "Three T's" into shape so that sailors could handle them in combat.

When Typhon was dropped in January, Sikes said committee investigators found that the radar needed by the missile was so large that it required a ship displacing at least 12,000 tons —the size of a frigate.

"It was also found," Sikes said, "that the Typhon weapon system in its present configuration could not be installed in any of the 50 missile ships which have been built and commissioned. How could the Navy do such a poor job of planning a program as to let it get so far out of hand that the missile could not possibly be installed in naval ships for which it was intended?"

Dr. James H. Wakelin, assistant Navy secretary for research and development, replied that the Navy had planned to put Typhon aboard a 12,000-ton frigate initially and then "adapt" it to smaller missile destroyers.

At one point, however, the Navy optimistically had hoped to install Typhon aboard fast-moving hydrofoils weighing a few hundred tons so that it could hunt down missile-carrying submarines. Deployment aboard bigger, slow-moving ships which could easily be outrun by submarines negated one of Typhon's main missions. Wakelin did not comment on this.

Sikes severely questioned the Navy for continuing with the Applied Physics Laboratory, a division of Johns Hopkins University, as the principal developer of Typhon.

"The Applied Physics Laboratory had performed a similar function in the Three T's program," Sikes said. "Certainly in November, 1955, when APL was selected for the Typhon program, nobody could call the Three T's a great success. Yet the Navy gave them an important and even a controlling role in the development of Typhon. Why did the Navy not at least make a serious attempt to find another contractor?"

To this, Rear Adm. E. T. Reich, Navy surface missile director, said the Three T's had been "maligned." He said, "Actually at that time the performance of Terrier was considered good and is still considered good against the threat for which that system was designed."

Reich further contended that the 200 million dollars spent on Typhon was not a complete loss. In a statement submitted to the subcommittee he said that 50 million to 100 million dollars' worth of Typhon research could be utilized in advanced air defense missile research now under way.

The Navy is asking for 55 million dollars in the fiscal 1965 budget to continue research on such advanced missiles. Sikes asked Reich if the performance of contractors on the Three T's would be taken into account in selecting contractors for this new program. Reich said it would.

Sikes: "Do you believe that contractors who were associated with Typhon should be excluded from this competition because of poor performance on that program?"

Reich: "No, sir."

The admiral explained this position by contending that the Typhon really wasn't a flop. The prototype control system for the weapon is currently being readied aboard a surface ship, the USS Norton Sound.

"She will go to sea in July," Reich said, "and we believe that, contrary to much of the criticism . . . we are going to show in tests at sea . . . some very significant breakthroughs in the over-all technology of weapons system control."

Sikes criticized the Navy for awarding the contracts to develop the rocket part of the Typhon missile to General Dynamics Corp.'s Pomona, Calif., division "without competition" — a decision which Wakelin claimed was justified. The company had developed the Tartar rocket, he said, and Typhon originally was labeled a "super Tartar."

Sikes said, however, that in 1963 the Navy dropped General Dynamics as the prime contractor and transferred the major responsibility to the Bendix Corp.'s plant at Mishawaka, Mich. General Dynamics was retained as a major subcontractor. This was done apparently, Sikes said, to minimize the employment effects of the Navy's cancellation of a long-range version of the Typhon which Bendix had been building.

Other contractors, including Northern Ordnance, Inc., Minneapolis, and Hercules Powder's Allegheny Ballistic Laboratory in Cumberland, Md., were picked on a sole-source, non-competitive basis, Sikes said. The reason again, Wakelin said, was their connection with the Tartar program.

Westinghouse was the prime contractor of the radar system, which Sikes said the Navy originally estimated to cost 38.5 million dollars. This sum grew as top-heavy as the equipment itself.

For when the program was cancelled, Sikes said, the Navy reported the cost had risen to 77.8 million dollars—a 100 per cent increase.

West Marin's Rugged Shore And Green Hills

Much the same as Sir Francis Drake and his crew of the Golden Hinde must have found it, West Marin's shoreline stretches into the Pacific on a long sweep to rocky Point Reyes.

The point is at the upper left in this aerial view toward the north. The dark area to the right marks the pine forest along Inverness Ridge. High points of the ridge are Mount Vision in the distance, Point Reyes Hill and Mount Wittenberg.

Farther north is Double Point with tidal rocks off shore. Pelican Lake appears as a dark oval just east of Double Point.

The wide sweep of Drakes Bay shows here as a protective shelter that historians believe was the haven for Drake when he needed a sheltered spot to careen his ship. Drake is believed to have put his ship into the estuary, located about in the center of the arc of the bay in this picture.

Beyond the bay and across the land is the long line of Point Reyes Beach. All this area from the beginning of Drakes Bay to the far end of Point Reyes Beach will become part of the Point Reyes National Seashore.

Carroll Snyker Works Hard For His County

By FRANK FARRARA

Carroll A. Snyker is a man who finds it easier to "sell" Marin County than to sell potatoes in a grocery store.

As manager of the Marin Development Assn., his job is to attract commercial and industrial developments into the county.

He started on the long way around to this job about 28 years ago when he quit as a grocery clerk in his hometown of Helena, Mont.

"I just couldn't remember the price of potatoes," he said.

OPERATING IN a quiet, soft-spoken manner from his San Rafael office, Snyker is a far cry from the stereotype of a bragging, back-slapping local booster.

"There used to be a lot of gilding the lily, but it just doesn't pay any more," he said. "People nowadays are too smart. They find you out."

As half-salesman, half-public relations man, 55-year-old Snyker knows the advantages and disadvantages of his product . . . Marin County.

"The place is going to change," he says. "You can't erect a wall. No doubt the pace will accelerate."

THE GROWTH will be limited to some extent, he admits. "The toughest problem is land and its costs . . . a limiting factor, and the average cost of a single family home here is the seventh highest in the country. It isn't everybody who can afford it."

San Geronimo Valley, with its relatively inexpensive land, will be the county's next big boom area, as soon as the road over White's Hill is improved, he predicts.

Unlike some observers, Snyker does not see recreation as becoming the county's major industry.

"Boating and fishing and recreational activities are an economic asset, but there is not enough to make it Number 1."

The residents of Marin want the county as it is, on the aesthetic side, and this creates a higher standard of land uses, he says.

IN THIS atmosphere Snyker views as ideal the development of an insurance park.

Insurance companies now in San Francisco could move into Marin County, he suggests. "It would be cheaper for them than the high rents in the city, and the surroundings would be prettier."

On the other hand, heavy industry requiring smokestacks would be out of place, Snyker declares.

His enthusiasm mounts when he talks about the multi-million dollar Northgate Shopping Center, now developing around the Emporium department store.

SNYKER, who aided in the efforts to bring the regional shopping center to Marin, says the spadework was done after it was noted that a lot of shopping by Marinites was not being done in Marin.

"The Emporium and its satellites will capture a goodly portion of the shopping trade in Marin County plus customers from Sonoma, Napa and the whole North Bay area," he forecasts.

While the Northgate campaign was successful, Snyker admits to a few losing battles. "We tried for four years to get the state college here, and now it is at Cotati," he says.

Snyker says he gravitated into his work by happenstance. A graduate of St. Helena Grade School and Carroll College in Helena, Mont., he decided not to go into his father's printing and bookbinding business.

HE TOOK a turn at the grocery store job, and gave it up to head for San Francisco. "The summers in Montana were okay, but the winters were bad, and there wasn't much opportunity there," he explains.

While looking for a job in San Francisco, he heard of two openings, one at the Bank of America and one at the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

"I sort of flipped a coin and went to the chamber," he says. "I had a leaning toward things relative to public activity."

THUS BEGAN a twenty-four-and-a-half year career with the San Francisco chamber which ended when he became assistant manager of Allen's press clipping bureau in San Francisco.

When he left to take up his duties in Marin County, his co-workers took a dim view of the move.

"They told me I was nuts to come over here," he recalls. "I didn't think about that, but it wasn't easy."

Development agencies are "relatively new, an outgrowth of needs in some counties," he says. They foster development beyond what can be promoted by the community itself, he feels.

"THE JOB consists of both selling and providing information," Snyker says. "We give all the help we can."

When an industry gives Snyker a list of requirements necessary for locating in the county, he gives them a list of properties that come closest to the requirements.

"Then they make the selection," he says. "You have to inform them in advance of conditions, and you must be honest."

When he is not at his office or scurrying around to meetings, Snyker relaxes by gardening at home with his wife, Dorothy, whom he married Aug. 3, 1936, in Dunsmuir.

A FEW years ago he was instrumental in sponsoring activity for the teen-agers, but since his daughter, Mary, is now Mrs. James Petrika of Larkspur, that chore has gone by the boards.

Aside from membership in various professional organizations, Snyker has been active in civic projects ranging from serving as president of the Tamalpais-Drake Education Council to being a member of the Marin County Airport Advisory Committee and seeking donors for the Marin Blood Center.

If Conrad Hilton should want to build a Marin Hilton hotel, Snyker is probably the first man in the county he would approach. But to Independent-Journal reporters writing weather stories, Snyker is the man who has the rainfall figures for Ross. He maintained a gauge in his garden and attends it faithfully. After all, Marin's weather is a definite selling point for the county. And Carroll Snyker is not one to overlook such assets.

CHECKING PROGRESS of construction under way at the new Northgate Shopping Center at Terra Linda is Carroll Snyker, manager of the Marin Development Assn. Bill Galos, construction superintendent, briefs his visitor on the status of the work. Snyker is one of the men responsible for bringing the huge regional shopping center to Marin County.

IN HIS GARDEN, which provides him with his major hobby interest, Carroll Snyker also maintains this rainfall measuring gauge. It is to Snyker that the Independent-Journal and other sources turn for their Ross rainfall totals. (Independent-Journal photos)

34 Years Of Little Theater

Ross Valley Players Still Going Strong

By HELANE ANDERSON

When the stage curtain rises next Thursday night at the Marin Art and Garden Center on "The Tunnel of Love," it will signal the beginning of the Ross Valley Players' 35th year of continuous production.

This, the members believe, might well make the troupe the oldest continuous little theater unit in the nation.

SINCE 98 per cent of the casualties among such groups occur during their first year, clues for the Players' survival were sought from their first president, Eugene C. Lloyd of San Anselmo.

Actually, he headed the group for two years and was active for 18 more. His wife, Beth Lloyd, served the Players on and off stage for a quarter century.

Gene Lloyd does not in any sense regard the Players as his "baby." He was, in fact, a most reluctant guardian and, admittedly, an extremely harsh one.

His very sternness, however, was a factor in the group's survival.

MR. AND Mrs. Lloyd credit Mrs. Thomas Babcock and Mrs. George Mosle with providing the inspiration for the formation of an amateur theater in Ross. Rev. John C. Leffler, youthful pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, and his wife, Faith, were also early and enthusiastic supporters.

The Ross Community Center, adjacent to St. John's, was the Players' first home and one they occupied for nearly 10 years, despite the closeness of interurban trains that shook the stage and drowned out cues so completely that actors were sometimes literally shoved stageward.

Sometime in March, 1930, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, then residents of Shady Lane, received a card inviting them to an organizational meeting. Gene said he wasn't interested in amateur theatricals.

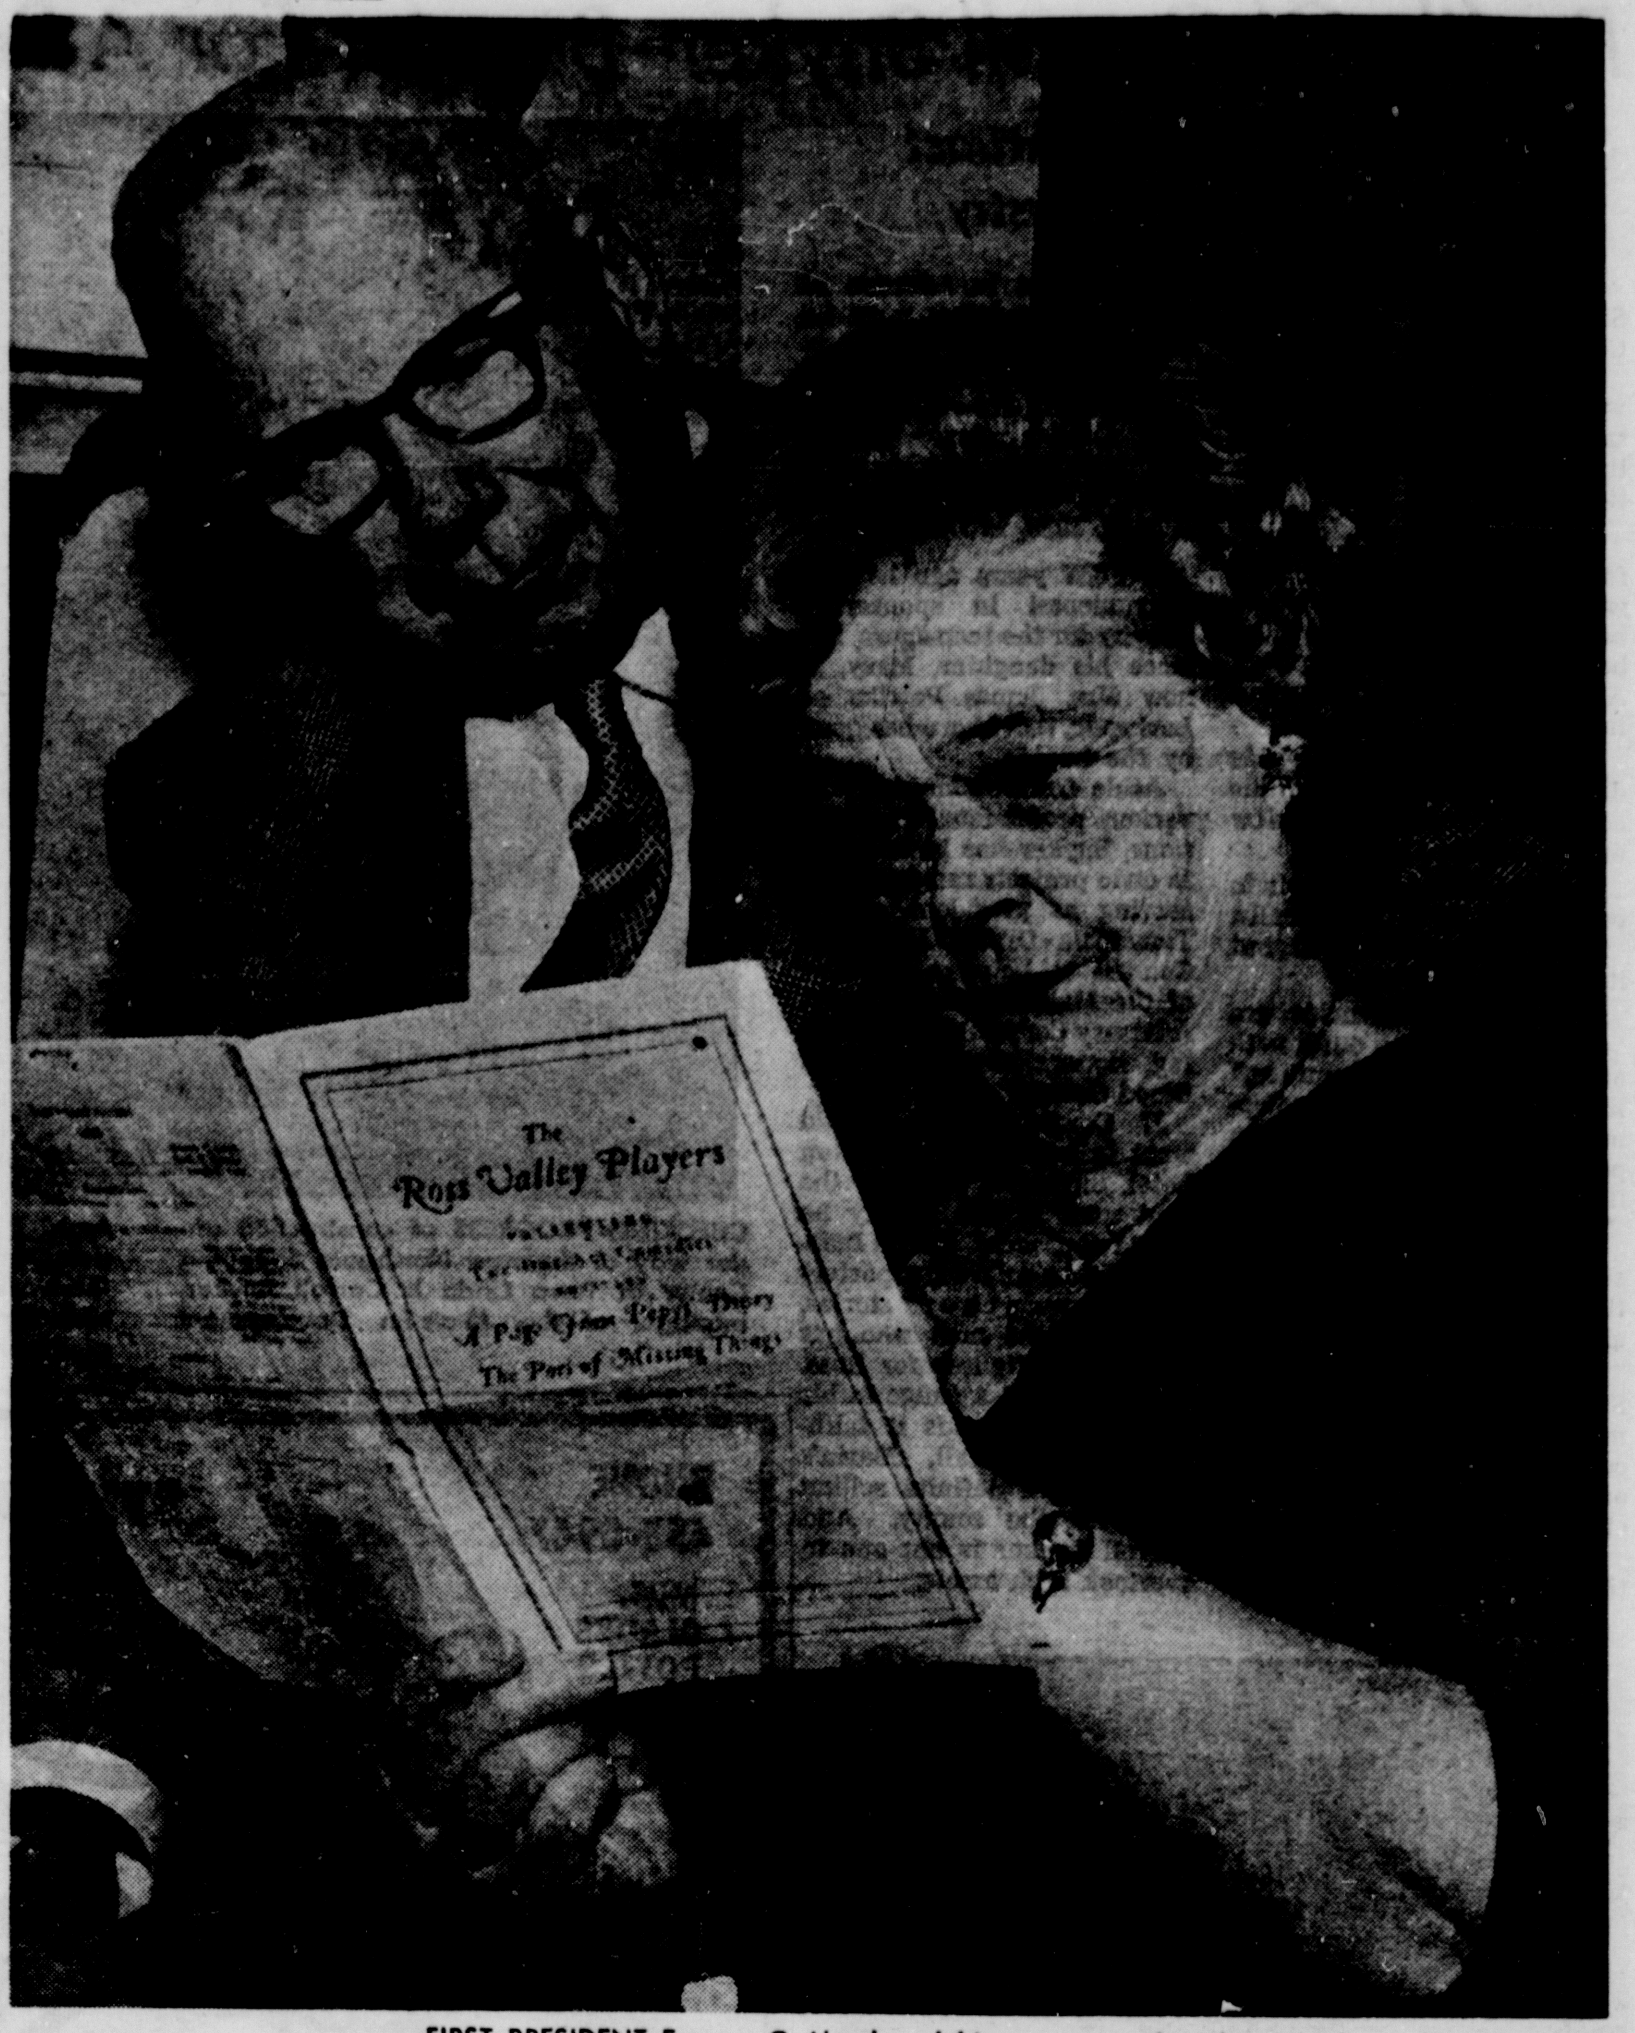

A FEW weeks later a printed card arrived informing them insufficient attendance at the original meeting had necessitated a second gathering. (They learned later A. P. Conklin had printed 25 of these cards on his small, home press.)

Again Gene Lloyd said he wasn't interested.

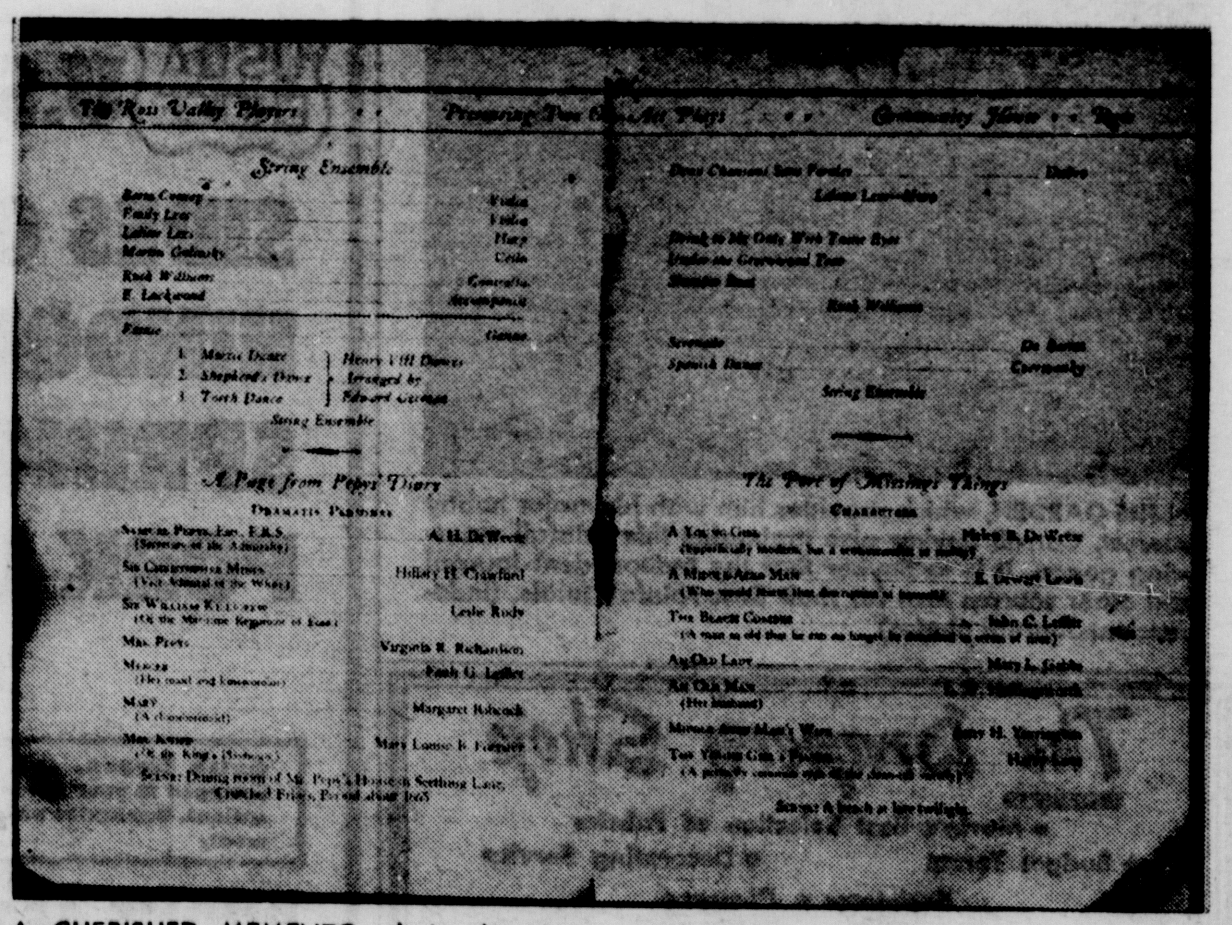

But when Beth, with feminine finesse, asked him if he would be good enough to escort her, he capitulated. At the Community House, he recalls, he took a backseat—and promptly went to sleep.

ONE AFTER the other, the half-dozen men present were nominated for president. Their declinations were accepted only after minute scrutiny by chairman Leffler.

A CHERISHED MEMENTO obviously torn from a scrapbook, this program is for the Ross Valley Players' first production—two one-act plays and selections by a string ensemble presented 34 years ago this month. Two errors add to its souvenir value: The dates on the cover, May 16th and 17th, should have been 15th and 16th. In the title of the second play, the word, "missing" appears as "Missings." The production, nevertheless, was a complete success.

Lloyd, too, declined. But his reason—"I'm just a TBM (Tired Business Man)" was rejected.

"During the argument," Lloyd recalls, "I said I might be interested if the group was also to be a social club. They said absolutely not—this was to be a little theater period."

This is flatly contradicted the widespread impression the Players were organized as "Marin's first social club."

RESPONSIBLE for Lloyd's interest in a social club was the "frosty" attitude of old-time Ross residents to newcomers.

"We had lived on Shady Lane for 10 years and knew scarcely anyone — not even our next-door neighbors," he recalls.

Enroute home, the Players' newly "elected" president fumed and snorted.

"A railroad job!" he complained. "Peanut politics!" he snorted.

LITTLE DID he then know the president's tasks would include shingling the Community House's back porch to keep the rain off actors who had to traverse it to get from one stage entrance to the other! He did avoid the job of rebuilding the men's dressing room, which was under the stage and frequently contained a half-foot of water.

Despite his initial resentment, Lloyd took a firm, unrelenting grip on the presidential reins. After three meetings, the name Ross Valley Players was agreed upon, and the organization's birth was made official by the levying of 15 cents per member annual dues. That was April 4, 1930.

Serving with President Lloyd, a shipping executive, were Joseph C. Gyle, retired business man, as treasurer and Alvah P. (Duke) Conklin, San Francisco insurance man, as secretary.

FOLLOWING Gyle's early resignation, Conklin became secretary-treasurer, a post he held during Lloyd's two terms as president.

These two businessmen kept the neophyte theater on an even keel. Frequent flare-ups of temperament were quickly and, according to Lloyd, sometimes roughly quenched.

Even the financial statement looked a business-like "black," even though the group actually was in the red for years. The secret was in posting flats, scenery and costumes as assets. These "assets" by the way, were laboriously carted to the Lloyds' barn for storage, since the Community House had no space.

THE ROSS Valley Players made their debut in mid-May, 34 years ago this month, in two one-act plays. A penciled correction on the printed program hints at the turmoil which accompanied that first production.

The dates, May 16 and 17, have been changed in pencil to May 15 and 16, which would have been a Thursday and Friday.

"Dramatic Personae" of "A Page from Pepys' Diary" are shown as A. H. DeWeese, Hillary H. Crawford, Leslie Rudy, Virginia R. Richardson, Faith G. Leffler, Margaret Babcock and Mary Louise B. Foerster.

A CHARTER member of the Ross Valley Players, Faith G. Leffler helped organize and sustain the group and appeared in "A Page from Pepys' Diary" on the debut program. Her husband, Rev. John C. Leffler, then pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, played a part in the other one-act play, "The Port of Missing Things."

The other play, "The Port of Missing Things," was, in fact, a popular comedy called "The Engagement Ring." The title change avoided payment of the royalty fee the group didn't possess.

Its cast was: Helen B. DeWeese, E. Dewart Lewis, John C. Leffler, Mary L. Gabbs, L. W. Hollingsworth, Amy H. Yerrington and Harry Luce.

ON THE back page of the program are listed the names of the charter members. Since 46 of the total of 71 names are couples, membership was 117 persons, if the listing is accurate.

Selections by a six-piece string ensemble preceded and interspersed the two plays. This was Lloyd's idea. Throughout his terms of office he insisted on including music on each program because "a little good music can cover up a lot of bad acting."

How was he to know how many big names of the theater—Cameron Prud-homme, Everett Glass, Bill Gwinn, for example—were to be alumni of the Players?

GEORGE E. Lask directed the production — without remuneration. A retired professional director residing in Ross, he was an acquaintance of Mrs. Melville Oppenheimer, RVP charter member.

The Lloyds vividly recall Lask's numerous clashes with his amateur actors and his almost daily threats to quit. The threats terminated when Lloyd told him: "All right! Quit!"

Tickets were sold for 75 cents to some 150 persons. The women came in floor length formals.

It is Lloyd's conviction many members of that first audience came to laugh at the amateurs. Instead, they were impressed.

THE PLAYERS established their reputation for outstanding stage sets during their first year. When, in September, the curtain rose on "Hay Fever," their initial three-act play, spontaneous applause held up the action.

Also originating during that first memorable year (and practiced for several subsequent ones) was the custom that gave the Players the reputation for being "Marin's first social club." Dances, picnics, barbecues and even a mardi gras were held after each play—to make up production deficits.

Beth Lloyd was not listed as an officer during her husband's tenure, nor did she start acting until several years later. That first year she merely shouldered the burdensome chore of making costumes and gathering props, and she continued to carry it for 25 years!

MOST OF the costumes she made unassisted, despite home responsibilities including three small children.

In 1934, appalled by the task of creating costumes for a cast of 85 for the first outdoor play, Beth lost sleep worrying—until her realistic husband "taught me a lesson in the division of labor and the efficiency of assembly line production. After that, I assigned tasks to others."

The outdoor stage used for numerous spectacular RVP productions was in the Woodland Theater on the Kent estate, now part of the Woodlands residential development.

PROPS AND furniture for stage sets, Mrs. Lloyd remembers with amusement, were obtained by the simple and direct method of borrowing.

"We'd borrow the Marvelous Marin Grocery's truck and go around the neighborhood asking to use the things we needed. Imagine driving up to somebody's door and asking: 'May we borrow your sofa?'! We were so seldom refused that I well remember how shocked we were when we asked one man that and he said: 'No. You can't have it. You got calsomine on the drapes you borrowed last time.'"

President Lloyd's contributions to the Players' survival, he feels, were these: Stern, impersonal handling of temperament; avoidance of becoming like a stock company by insisting every cast contain 85 per cent new actors; and, finally, the inclusion of high quality music by professional musicians.

IT WASN'T easy.

Even Gene Lloyd's "rough treatment" couldn't prevent what the Lloyds refer to as "the civil war." A woman who felt she should have big parts in every play pulled out, taking a few followers with her, to form The Arts Guild. After using the old Kentfield school for a short time, the Guild returned to the Community House—and disbanded shortly after a hassel over use of the Players' border lights.

In the late 1930s the Players moved to their present unique theater—the Barn on the Marin Art and Garden Center grounds.

KNOWN THEN as the Kittle barn, The Barn had long housed horses — and honey bees. Beth Lloyds well remembers the pungent odor of the honey that used to drip down into the make-up room from the bees' nest in the loft.

The greatest single factor in the Players' first-year survival, in Gene Lloyd's opinion, is this: A need existed for such an organization.

The area provided no group activities for young married couples, especially the newcomers. And, 1930 being a depression year, few could afford to go to San Francisco for their entertainment.

Though the depression is long since gone, this same type need of a growing Marin is still being met by the Players.

HOW MANY have made this comment: "I didn't know a soul here until I joined the Players. Then the whole county opened to me."

Now, as in the beginning, the Players welcome new faces—new hands to work backstage, new talent to walk the boards.

Newcomers seek the horizon-widening associations offered by the Players. The Players seek the fresh vitality brought by the newcomer.

Herein lies much of the secret of the Ross Valley Players' longevity—a survival that can safely be projected far beyond their upcoming 35th year.

Encouraging The Creativity In Children

That's The Primary Objective Of Art Council For San Rafael Schools

"The teacher must make certain that each child has a feeling of confidence that what he thinks and feels in art work is important."

The speaker was Norma Starankovic, herself a teacher at the Short School.

Her listeners were her fellow members of the San Rafael City Schools Art Council, composed of teachers from all of the 14 schools in the San Rafael system.

THE COUNCIL meets once every six weeks with art consultant Bruce Pinegar for in-service training sessions and the exchange of ideas such as those expressed by Mrs. Starankovic.

Or by Dorothy Wall of the MacPhail School, who pointed out: "Everyone is born with an instinct for creativity, and much depends upon how it is nurtured."

The suggestions and views of the teachers reflect their belief that much of the world's invention, science and mathematics is based upon individuality, imagination and a sense of creativity developed in the child's early school days.

Lisa Lazar of Short School puts it this way: "If in an art lesson a teacher receives 32 turkeys that are exactly the same, we have stifled creativity. The student must have a measure of choice so that all the turkeys are different."

ART COUNCIL members, therefore, urge their fellow teachers to present a problem or a demanding situation for the child to solve without a pattern. Otherwise, the result is conformity.

Nor do these teachers feel that art begins and ends with the daily art classes. Instead, they feel, it extends through the school day and may be tied in with any and every subject.

For example, Neil MacPhail, sixth grade teacher at Gallinas School, believes that all modern math features creative aspects and points out that art is being used these days as a means of testing understanding.

"A STUDENT who is articulate in expressing himself may well show an understanding of his reading by illustrating a scene from a book."

"Through art, a child becomes aware of nature."

"Art is everywhere."

"Creativity is integral to learning."

These are some of the attitudes of the teachers who make up the Art Council and strive to build better art programs in the San Rafael City Schools.

SCHOOL administrators feel the structure they have built up in the system is unique in the Bay Area.

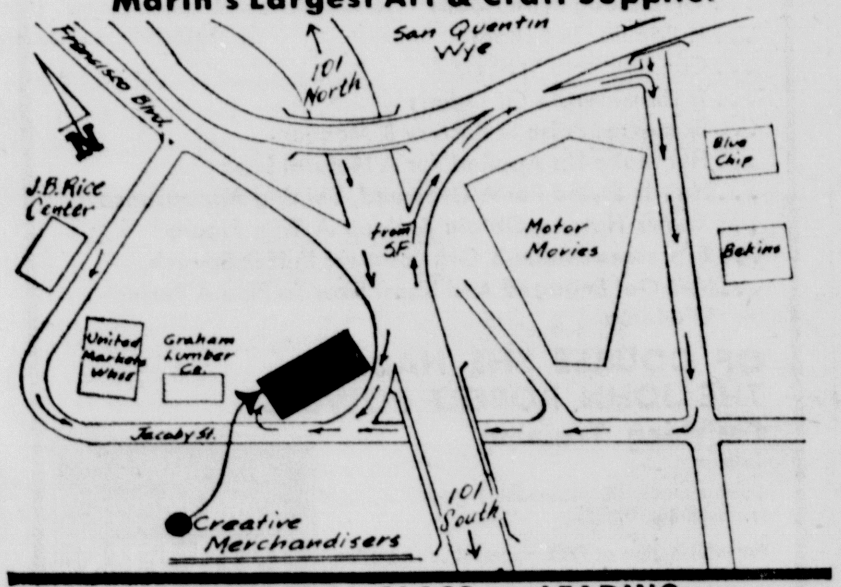

The results of that program will be on public display next week when the art work of some 400 students in the San Rafael City Schools, kindergarten through the eighth grade, will be presented during an art festival in the audi-

"HOW TO BE GOOD TO YOUR CLOTHES"

What is the safest way to keep your clothes well groomed? Good clothes are essential to good grooming. But have you ever wondered if it is safe to immerse your favorite dress or suit in cleaning solvent?

What is cleaning solvent anyway? It is actually any liquid used to remove soil by dissolving it, and this includes water.

A common myth is that drycleaning solvents are harsh. Just the opposite is true, according to the National Institute of Drycleaning. The drycleaning solvent used in America are chemically neutral. They dissolve oils; so they will remove skin oils from your hands, but you don't dryclean your hands. For clothing these solvents are the gentlest known cleaning agents. The institute regularly tests all solvents used in drycleaning and publishes a recommended list. Solvent makers strive to qualify for this list.

There are two types of solvent used by drycleaners today. All basic textile fibers can be successfully cleaned in them. Sometimes, however, a dye, finish or unusual combination of fibers or fabrics make regular washing or drycleaning impossible. A professional drycleaner in a modern plant has the skill and special equipment to clean these otherwise limited service textiles. As a result, there are very few garments which cannot be drycleaned.

torium of the Santa Venetia Junior High School. The festival opens Wednesday and continues through next Sunday.

The pieces on display will represent the sifting of some 6,000 examples of art work of school pupils by the selection committee from the Art Council, working under the direction of consultant Pinegar.

STANDARDS used in making the selections are based on the age of the child and include use of media, technique and originality.

The media used by the children are often unusual adaptations of common materials. Represented will be finger painting, watercolors, encaustic, glue, wet chalk, yarn, tempera, posters, soapwork, hot wax, etc. Among the sculpturing materials to be demonstrated will be salt and flour, wire, plaster of Paris, clay, wood, paper mache, toothpicks and vermiculite.

Drawings will be executed in charcoal, crayon, chalk, pastels, India ink and pencil.

OTHER approaches utilized for artistic expression by the elementary school boys and girls will include collages, mosaics, stitchery and applique with yarn on burlap, tissue paper in three dimensional forms, stenciling, sugar cubes (used in building replicas of the California missions), printing processes with leaves and native materials, potato and lineoleum block printing and sandcasting.

The display will open from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and from 1 to 4 p.m. on May 9 and 10.

And from the wide range of work to be shown, school patrons can render their own judgments astto whether the San Rafael City Schools are meeting the objectives set forth by the teachers when they assemble as the Art Council and exchange ideas and establish goals.

The Softball Season Is Here Again

Several Hundred Marinites Enjoy This Outlet For Competitive Spirits

By DON KEOWN

There was a time when softball was a major spectator sport in Marin County.

Frank Quinn, San Anselmo director of parks and recreation, remembers well when the San Rafael All-Stars took on the Harlem Globe Trotters in the 1940s. And the two teams drew a gate of approximately $2,000.

Those were the days when such teams as the San Rafael Merchants, Purity Stores and Brown Furniture Co., playing first as the Marin Softball League, later as the San Rafael Softball Assn., drew steady and enthusiastic crowds for games played under the lights at Albert Park and at the San Rafael High School field.

SOFTBALL IS no longer a spectator sport of such a scale in Marin.

But it has been enjoying a steady climb in popularity after its decline in the late 1940s and 1950s to its present status as a popular and firmly-established participant sport.

The nuclei of the sport in Marin County are the San Rafael Men's A and B softball leagues sponsored by the San Rafael Recreation Department. Nearly 300 men play with teams in those leagues.

Then there is the annual San Anselmo Invitational Tournament, sponsored by that city's recreation department. It does attract spectators—sometimes 300 to 400 for a big game — that are somewhat reminiscent of the sport's heyday in Marin.

SAN ANSELMO also has church and women's softball leagues.

Hamilton Air Force Base conducts two leagues for its personnel and the base team reached the Air Force finals in Florida last year.

And softball is an important outlet for the energies of the small fry at grammar schools throughout Marin County as well as a "fun game" in many parks and sandlots around the county.

Consistently the leader in Marin's current softball "era" is the Sohner Tree Service team. The Sohner-sponsored nine plays by far the busiest and most ambitious schedule among the Marin clubs. Last year the tree service men won 34 of 51 starts.

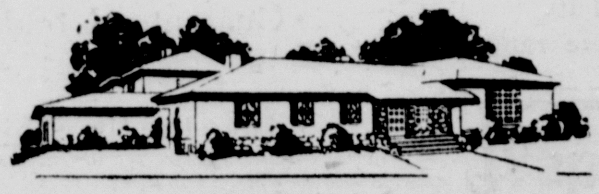

Scheduled to open the 1964 home season by hosting the strong Santa Rosa Athletic Club in a doubleheader next Thursday at 8 p.m. at Albert Park, the Sohner team expects to play approximately 60 games this season. Back in 1959 only nine games were played.

Sohner players range in ages from 24 to 38, averaging 29, a bit older than most of the rival Marin clubs. Included on the roster are some athletes who have had a fling at professional baseball. Several still play semi-pro baseball as well as softball.

THERE WAS a time when the baseball player shied away from softball, fearful that the differences in the two games would affect his timing with the bat. Younger athletes with professional baseball ambitions still make the distinction. But the semi-pro veteran is likely to take in both sports.

The Sohner roster includes teachers, an apartment house manager, water district employees, a life insurance salesman, car salesman, etc.

At the outset, Sohner Tree Service manager Jack Phillips was a catcher as well as one of the organizers of the team when it re-formed back in 1959. Now no Sohner employee is an active member of the club, but the firm continues its sponsorship.

Financial support of a softball team may range from $100 to $600 a season, depending upon the number of games played.

Expenses may include the umpires' pay, cost of the lights, balls and bats, uniforms, etc.

PLAYERS provide their own transportation.

Softball differs from its older cousin, baseball, in several respects. The playing field is smaller, with the bases closer together (60 feet apart) and the pitcher's mound closer to home plate (46 feet). The ball is larger (12 inches in circumference). And the pitcher hurls underhanded. Seven innings constitute a game. The bunt is employed more frequently. And softball players traditionally wear more colorful, even gaudy, uniforms than the rather standardized and drab apparel of the baseball players.

The basic difference is that softball is much more a "pitcher's game" than is baseball. The team with strong pitching is well on its way to success.

THUS THE key man on the Sohner roster is Jay Leather-wood, a 37-year-old veteran of the softball wars. He has been pitching softball since he was a sixth grader and plans to continue "as long as my arm holds out."

He figures he has now pitched between 1,100 and 1,200 games.

Unlike baseball hurlers, softball pitchers can work on consecutive nights. Additional mound strength, however, is a necessity for a team which undertakes an ambitious schedule such as the one planned by the Sohner aggregation, for doubleheaders and for relief if the starter runs into trouble.

Lou Perazzo, who preceded Leatherwood as "king of the hill" on the Sohner roster, still toils for the club part-time.

MANAGER Jess Munyon, who catches, has also brought in new pitching strength for the current season.

Highlight of the 1964 schedule for the tree service team is a scheduled mid-July trip to Reno for some games with Nevada's finest.

Even that trek could be overshadowed, however, if the Sohner men enjoy success in the tournament program. For this year, a California team can go all the way to the Amateur Softball Assn. world's championship without leaving the state.

The step-by-step program will begin in mid-July with a district meet in Santa Rosa to determine the Marin-Sonoma-Mendocino representative for the state tournament, to be held July 30, 31, and Aug. 1 through 16 in Hayward with a 16-team field.

The state titlewinner will then move on to the association's world championship tournament to be staged Sept. 12 through 25 in Sunnyvale.

IT WILL mark the first time the world tourney has been held in California since 1956 when Sacramento hosted the colorful event. The Sunnyside park seats 12,000 spectators, and the Clearwater, Fla. Bombers, perennial champions, will be on hand to defend their title.

Marin's number one enthusiast on behalf of the sport of softball is Keith Fraser of San Anselmo, a teacher and coach at Santa Rosa Junior High School and Munyon's predecessor as manager of the Sohner team. He was also instrumental in the 1959 reorganization of the Sohner club.

Why have several hundred Marinites chosen the rather vigorous sport of softball as one of their recreations?

"Because," Fraser answers simply, "it's a good, fast game that affords a great deal of enjoyment and can be played with considerably less expense than baseball."

"It is," he adds, "an ideal outlet for the competitive spirit that lies within all of us."

SOFTBALL, he says, is experiencing an especially strong resurgence in the Santa Rosa area, and the movement can be expected to be felt in Marin more and more in the next few years.

Biggest drawback in Marin, he says, is the scarcity of adequately lighted fields.

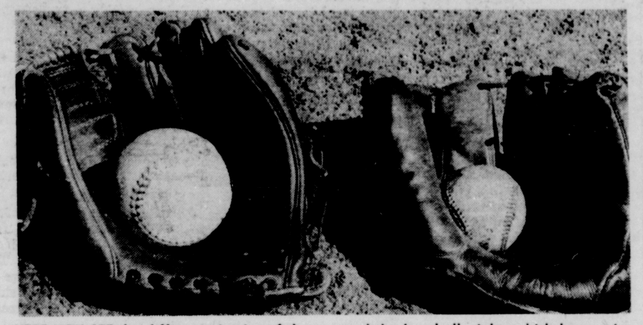

Even Albert Park, he feels, needs improved lighting. And the Albert Park diamond is not regularly available to the softball players until summer, after the Little League and Pony League campaigns have ended.

Thus, the San Rafael Recreation Department's league program does not get under way until mid-July. Until then, Sohner's and some of the other teams play "independent" ball against each other and teams from neighboring counties. Once league play begins, there will be games six nights a week with playoffs climaxing the competition.

THE BIG San Anselmo tournament will be held in mid-August. Hub City Recreation Director Quinn calls it one of his department's "most gratifying promotions in recent years" and says "competing teams have told us they would rather take part in our tournament than any other in the Bay Area."

Then ahead will lie the district and state tournaments—and, if luck and Jay Leatherwood's strong right arm hold out,—perhaps even the big world meet.

It's a long season that lies ahead. And the Sohner players and their fellow softball enthusiasts can hardly wait to get started.

HERE YOU SEE the difference in size of the softball, left, with its 12-inch circumference, and the baseball, right, which has a nine-and-a-quarter-inch circumference.

Artful Imposter

MAGNIFICENT MASQUERADE by Charles Keats, Funk and Wagnalls, 264 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

We are all fascinated by the successful imposter, the artful swindler, the deflater of assumptions of superiority, and (perhaps to a lesser degree) by the titan of business. Philip Musica, in the guise of Dr. F. Donald Coster, was all of these.

He was a tough delinquent from the neighborhood of Hell's Kitchen who learned to circumvent the law and at last became, in a completely phony personality, the head of America's greatest drug empire. His story is one that beggars belief and staggers the imagination — yet its proof is in voluminous court records.

The completeness with which the man from Mulberry Bend assumed a character of his own creation is perhaps best indicated in a pair of facts: F. Donald Coster became a 32nd degree Mason, but in his wallet after his suicide, police found a little leather case containing five religious medals and a silver crucifix. On the reverse of one of the medals were the words: "I am a Catholic. In case of accident notify a priest."

Despite the medals, he was entombed as a Methodist, and the name on the crypt is "F. Donald Coster."

In "Magnificent Masquerade," Charles Keats traces the tortuous trail that led from Mulberry Bend.

Philip Musica's first bid for wealth sent him to the Tombs for a swindle in imported human hair. He escaped a prison sentence then, however—as he would always.

As William Johnson, special investigator, he nearly railroaded an innocent man to the electric chair.

As Frank D. Costa, manufacturing druggist, he amassed a sizable fortune from sale of products containing very high percentage of alcohol to bootleg kings of the Prohibition years.

As Dr. F. Donald Coster, graduate of Heidelberg, he became president and virtual dictator of McKesson and Robbins.

He was a highly successful president. He steered McKesson and Robbins through the depression to unprecedented growth and success. But he must have a swindle going; it was in his nature. And this led at last to his unmasking, and the bullet with which he took his own life.

Keats' style is journalistic — which is not surprising, since he covered the suicide and subsequent court actions as a reporter for the Bridgeport (Conn.) Sunday Herald (he later became secretary of state of Connecticut). His account is painstaking yet dramatic—an absorbing book.

To those of us who were newspaper workers or readers in the late '30s, the book refreshes old memories and ties together the bits and pieces of the sensational exposure. To a later generation who never heard of F. Donald Coster or Philip Musica, it offers a genuine shocker.

Admirable Adventure

FOUR AGAINST EVEREST by Woodrow Wilson Sayre, Prentice-Hall, 259 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Richard Lyttle.

This is much more than a a mountain climbing book. Sayre's report on his expedition in April, May and June of 1962 is a gripping adventure extremely well written.

His style gains force through understatement. And Sayre achieves remarkable objectivity for one so deeply involved in the emotions and suffering of the ordeal.

He had three serious falls on the North Col and spent two nights without shelter on the slopes of Everest. He and his three companions returned to civilization in the early stages of starvation.

The expedition defied many of the conventions of mountain climbing, and Sayre is the first to admit that there was much luck involved in the success of this defiance. They climbed without porters, without oxygen, and they entered Tibet without permission of the Tibetan government.

Sayre still calls himself an amateur climber, even after this adventure. It is probably his view of the adventure as an amateur that gives this book such broad interest, making it more than just another mountain climbing journal.

There are some fine pictures, particularly the colored ones, that the Sayre party brought back from the mountain.

It is a worthy book about an admirable adventure.

Chennault's Flyers

HUNGRY TIGER by Frank J. Cameron, McGraw-Hill, 277 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Fighting for survival in the tough, competitive world of commercial aviation can be as rough and as vicious as wartime combat, as revealed in Cameron's story of the Flying Tiger Cargo Line.

A group of flyers, who earned the nickname "Flying Tigers," fighting under Maj. Gen. Claire Lee Chennault in the China-Burma Theater early in World War II, found the going rough when they entered commercial combat at the close of the war.

Operating on a shoe string, they nursed along a growing business in air cargo, only to run into fierce opposition from major airlines and rebuffs from controlling govenrment agencies.

Ironically, it was a government contract to haul troops and equipment to the Korean front that carried the line through one of its roughest final crises.

While unfolding what is essentially a history of a business enterprise, the author manages to convey the color, excitement and spirit of the "Flying Tigers" that carried over from the war to business.

There is a warmth too in his episodes about the airlifting of refugees from Hungary and orphans from Korea. Above all, Cameron presents an objective record, relating the company's mistakes and failures along with its successes.

Routine Effort

L.B.J., THE MAN FROM JOHNSON CITY by Clarke Newlon, Dodd, Mead & Co., 185 pages, $3.75. Reviewed by Ellen Dietschy.

The stress on speed necessary to write and publish one of the first of many books which can be expected about President Lyndon Baines Johnson must be the cause of this comparatively routine compilation of information about the 36th President of the United States.

The biography traces Johnson's political career from Southwest State Teachers College in San Marcos, Tex., where he was active in campus politics from behind-the-scenes, to his successful succession to leadership of the U. S. after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The author frequently quotes old friends and classmates of Texas' former director of the National Youth Administration, many of whom are little-known to the reader. Their statements are seldom sufficiently profound to add substantial merit to the subject matter.

Newlon, who established a public relations firm in Washington, D. C., following several years of newspaper reporting and who authored "1001 Questions Answered About Space," seems to be more at home with missiles and rockets than with collecting and editing information about the life of a world leader and presenting the story effectively.

Space And Time

MARTIAN TIME-SLIP by Philip K. Dick, Ballantine Books, 220 pages, 50 cents. Reviewed by Alan Cunningham.

Space travel is coupled with a series of unexpected jumps in time in this novel of the future by an award-winning science fiction writer. But the time-factor does not involve the usual "Alley Oop" style machine. Instead, it stems from bizarre talents which lurk in a mentally-ill child's tortured mind. After forcing the reader at times to question his own senses—or ask whether the book has been put together incorrectly —the author suddenly brings forth a hard-to-swallow "happy" ending of the weirdest variety.

Reading Ernest Hemingway's "A Moveable Feast" is like chewing on a fresh mint leaf.

As the mint cleanses the tastebuds, so Hemingway refreshes and reinvigorates the mind.

The book, completed by Hemingway in 1960, consists of a series of sketches in which Hemingway recorded his recollections of the Paris he knew so well in the 1920s.

It was a young, alert, enthusiastic and idealistic Hemingway. And he saw things and people with a perception and an understanding that his great writing talent translates into delightful reading.

Famous people parade through the pages of the book. There are Gertrude Stein, Scott Fitzgerald, Ezra Pound, Ford Madox Ford, Sylvia Beach, Evan Shipman. There are Hemingway's then wife Hadley and their young son, and Fitzgerald's Zelda. And there are the little people of Paris — waiters, fishermen, etc.

You meet them in their homes, at the race track, in cafes and bars, walking along the Seine, on vacation in the Alps, throughout a fascinating city.

All are presented with compassion and understanding. And, most of all, with humor and affection.

None of the bravado so often found in Hemingway fiction appears here. The observer here is a sensitive and very human person, blessed with an ability to see and feel deeply, and to record his observations and reactions with rare skill.

One suggestion: The reader might also find it interesting to review Morley Callaghan's splendid "That Summer in Paris," about these same people and places in the year 1929.

Men As Social Symbols

By DON KEOWN

Idealists are sometimes prone to substitute symbols for ideas. And very often those symbols do not measure up to the ideas they represent.

Pacifists and ban-the-bomb groups have apparently committed just such a blunder in their adoption of Maj. Claude Eatherly as a standard- bearer.

In his book, "The Hiroshima Pilot," William Bradford Huie demolishes the Eatherly legend with a totality that borders on the brutal.

The myth would have you believe that Eatherly, depending upon whose version you accept, either piloted the B-29 that dropped the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki or led and directed the pilots and planes that did. That after the Hiroshima bombing, he flew back through the radioactive cloud to view the devastation. That he returned to the States after a great combat record to a hero's welcome, receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross.

But the myth continues, the wholesale slaughter at Hiroshima began to haunt Eatherly. And to bring upon him the punishment his sense of guilt demanded, he began a series of bizarre crimes. Finally, the government to end its embarrassment, placed him in a mental hospital as a political prisoner — "an American Dreyfus."

What Huie learned by actually going to the records and by talking to those who knew Eatherly best was:

Eatherly's role at Hiroshima consisted of flying a rather routine weather clearance mission over that city in advance of the bombing, and he took no part at all in the attack on Nagasaki. He returned to this country with only a very limited overseas combat record. There was no hero's welcome —the public was not even aware of his relatively minor part at Hiroshima —and he received the Air Medal, not the DFC.

Even at the time he was supposedly repenting Hiroshima, Eatherly was taking part in a crackpot plot to bomb Havana that was thwarted.

Apparently, Huie indicates, statements of examining psychiatrists, exaggerated magazine and newspaper stories and especially a fantastically inaccurate movie script all might have planted in Eatherly's mind the idea of blaming his illogical crimes upon a sense of guilt for Hiroshima. Immature and hurt because he had not gained wartime glory, he was exhilarated by the international attention now focused upon him. As for being a captive in the Veterans Hospital, he was in and out of that institution frequently, usually committing himself voluntarily.

Conflicting directly with the guilt theory is Huie's discovery that Eatherly actually maneuvered to escape the consequences of his robberies and burglaries.

It is, as Huie says, amazing that others did not search the record before they wrote their misleading pap about this unfortunate man. It is distasteful to have the truth emerge at this stage, for there is no real indication as to just how much of Eatherly's role was calculated and how much could be attributed to his confused mental processes. One is embarrassed for Huie when he tells an agitated Eatherly who has just read his manuscript that he will not be injured by it.

But for idealists, the lesson is there. Better their championing a man than the cynics' automatic practice of scorning him. But both would do well to investigate before committing themselves. Or lacking the opportunity to do that, stick to reasoning and ideas where generally the idealistic are on sound enough ground.

ANOTHER man who became a symbol in an earlier era was Jack Johnson, first Negro heavyweight boxing champion of the world. Johnson is the subject of an excellent biography, "Black Champion," by Finis Farr.

The still far from rare opinion that "the Negro is all right in his place" was far more prevalent in the early 1900s. And John Arthur Johnson was one Negro who refused to stay put in the niche the white man had set aside for him.

He flaunted Caucasian vanity and prejudice, first by winning the boxing crown, and then by defending it successfully against the white idol Jim Jeffries. He married, not one, but three white women. He refused to play the humble "Uncle Tom" role, taunting his foes in the ring, boasting outside it, driving fast cars and collecting tickets for speeding. As a symbol, he became a rallying point for Negro pride. Blood was spilled in racial strife following his fights.

Farr treats Johnson with sympathy. He does not paint him as a saint, which he certainly was not. But Farr does make it clear that Johnson was, no matter how mighty his fists inside the ring, an underdog facing hopeless odds in his bigger battle with a prejudiced society.

Farr also makes apparent his admiration for Johnson's boxing skill. He is not alone. Authority Nat Fleisher has named Johnson the greatest of them all.

It is a book certain to fascinate the sports buff. But it is a book of considerably broader significance in these days when racial hatred continues to leave its evil imprint upon our land.

THIS COVER DESIGN by Antonio Frasconi is from "Selected Poems of Herman Melville," a Doubleday Anchor original paperback edited by Hennig Cohen. The book is part of Anchor's American Civilization series.

Sleuths & Suspense

OUT OF THE BLUE by Frank Archer, Crime Club, 177 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Lawyer John Mallory's small son had vanished 15 years ago. Now the Mallorys were receiving mysterious mail including a photograph of a tough-looking teen-ager who, it was hinted, was the missing son.

And then Mallory learns the youth's life is in danger. He sets out to save his son —if indeed, it is his son. But first he must find him. And discover the reason for the twisted, vengeance-motivated plot against him.

Frank Archer has come up with an imaginative and compelling plot in his "Out of the Blue." He fails to realize its full potential, giving away his secrets a bit too easily. But it is still an interesting and entertaining suspense novel.

REMEMBERING

The brook will flow on endlessly, and, alas, I am remembering.
As it flows unceasingly your memory blots out everything.

The highest trees upon the hill remember me as I walk by;
and though the breeze is silent, still
I remember your sigh.

I can see the sun behind a tree.
As it sets I remember more,
and the tears I held come quietly to drop upon the lonely shore.

This brook must hold the tears of others who came here for solitude, and the memories that this spot bestirs have caused my heart to brood.

My tears are such that would fill the sea, because you've said goodbye.
My joy, if you came back to me,
could not be contained in the sky.

OUR CANYON

This is the year of the deer
In our canyon here.
Each sound that seems near Brings twinges of fear
That there go our labors of endless hours—
The bright, green leaves, the blossoms so sheer . . .
Yes, gone! Down the beautiful gullets of velvety deer
Are our deerly-beloved flowers.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

We have had several reports from listeners concerning their KPEN stereo reception since the station went to VERTI POWER. A few of those that reported to us claim that their stereo signal and reception has improved; however, most of those from whom we have heard claim that their reception of KPEN has been degraded. Some of these listeners state that the signal is now unlistenable. Practically all of these listeners, who are now receiving a poorer signal, are in difficult reception areas. It is hard to tell from the above reports if we are hearing only from those who have poorer reception, and are not hearing from those who have improved reception. VERTI POWER went into effect the latter part of March.

The past few months, our industry, from the manufacturer's level on down, has been dealing with the knotty problem of discounting. The component industry has its share of stores that sell boxes with no back-up or service, nor any qualified sound technicians, nor any customer demonstration facilities. These stores sell at discount prices, but leave the customer to solve his own problems. A few of the larger and more widely known component firms are working out stringent pricing controls.

Some believe that if the industry is not kept from running wild, the audio Hi-Fi specialists with their elaborate investments in displays, demonstrations, and sound rooms, together with their highly qualified installation experts and quality service departments, will leave the scene. This will leave the manufacturers with their wares in the discount houses. It is hard to conceive that such a highly specialized market can exist without specialists.

Here at Catania Sound, we have always been of the opinion, that we should use all the time our clients need to expose them to the right type of equipment to give them the best possible sound for their budget dollar; To use all our skills and specialized knowledge and experience to guide the client properly; To maintain a high quality and experienced service department to keep our client's home music systems working at their best. Our advice is that if you want a properly balanced component home music system, with components that have been checked out and adjusted and aligned to perform as specified, then deal with a specialist that can back up his sales with service.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The Everest Record Co. was recently reorganized and is now headquartered in Hollywood.

This label made hi-fi news about three years ago with a fine series of classical albums recorded with the 35-millimeter film technique for highest fidelity. Now, in addition to the distribution of Everest releases and the production of new releases, this concern has taken over two other smaller classical labels, Concertdisc and Esoteric-Counterpart.

Today we'll look over four unusual Esoteric releases which are once again available through any record store and which deserve revival without question:

Baroque Music of Frescobaldi, Rosenmuller, and Couperin—The Harpsichord Quartet (Flute/Oboe/Cello/Harpsichord) — Esoteric — Counterpoint CPT-517:

A very well-arranged Baroque concert very similar to what one might have heard at San Francisco's Spaghetti Factory recitals. The "Five Canzoni" of Frescobaldi are among the oldest examples of instrumental composition extant. The Rosenmuller "Sonata No. 2" is a late 17th Century work boasting a grand total of three slow movements. The Couperin composition, "The Apothesis of Corelli," is the highlight of the album.

Before each of its seven programatic sections, a narrator describes in French Corelli's journey to Parnassus.

Aldo Parisot, Cello, Plays Kodaly: Sonata for Cello; Bach: Suite for Cello in c—Esoteric-Counterpoint CPT-569;

The Kodaly is the main interest here.

This was the first lp performance of the singular piece, and remains for me the best. The entire instrument is used to its fullest in this amazingly difficult and exciting work. It is full of brilliant arpeggios, trills, harmonics, and unusual rhythms and modes.

Music Written for Harp, Volume 4—Nicanor Zabaleta, harp—Esoteric ES-542:

The anthology of solo harp music recorded by this noted harpist around 1956 won critical acclaim throughout the country. Ten short works are heard on this lp, ranging from that versatile composer Anon. to the English modern Parish-Alvars.

I would guess that not more than one or two of these interesting works is recorded anywhere else. A collection and performance of unerring taste.

Erik Satie's Symphonic Drama "Socrate" — Soloists, Paris Philharmonic Orchestra, Rene Leibowitz—Esoteric ES-510:

A major item among the half-dozen recordings of the music of this French innovator and member of Les Six. The text of this vocal/orchestral work is based on Plato's "Dialogues." The five male characters, including Socrates, are all sung by female voices. Very unusual.

Unfortunately, no translations of the French text.

Easy To Use Shellac Is Still Popular

Easy to apply and fast drying, shellac has maintained its popularity over the years both as a final finishing material or as a sealer.

Because shellac is a clear finish, the result obtained with it depends to some degree on the smoothness of the surface to which it is applied. Unlike some of the pigmented coatings, clear finishes tend to magnify rather than hide defects.

The first rule in the use of shellac, therefore, is to prepare the surface thoroughly, which generally means to sand it until it is absolutely smooth to the touch.

Shellac should be thinned with denatured alcohol before using. There are various recommended combinations for different purposes, but we have found that a 50-50 mixture does the job in nearly all cases.

The important thing is not to make the mistake of applying the shellac as it comes from the container. It usually is applied by brush and is put on with a flowing motion, but sometimes — especially with the initial coats—can be spread on with a clean, lintless cloth.

There is no special knack to its application and even a beginner can get the hang of it the first time he handles it.

Like all clear finishes, shellac is best applied in several thin coats rather than one or two thick coats.

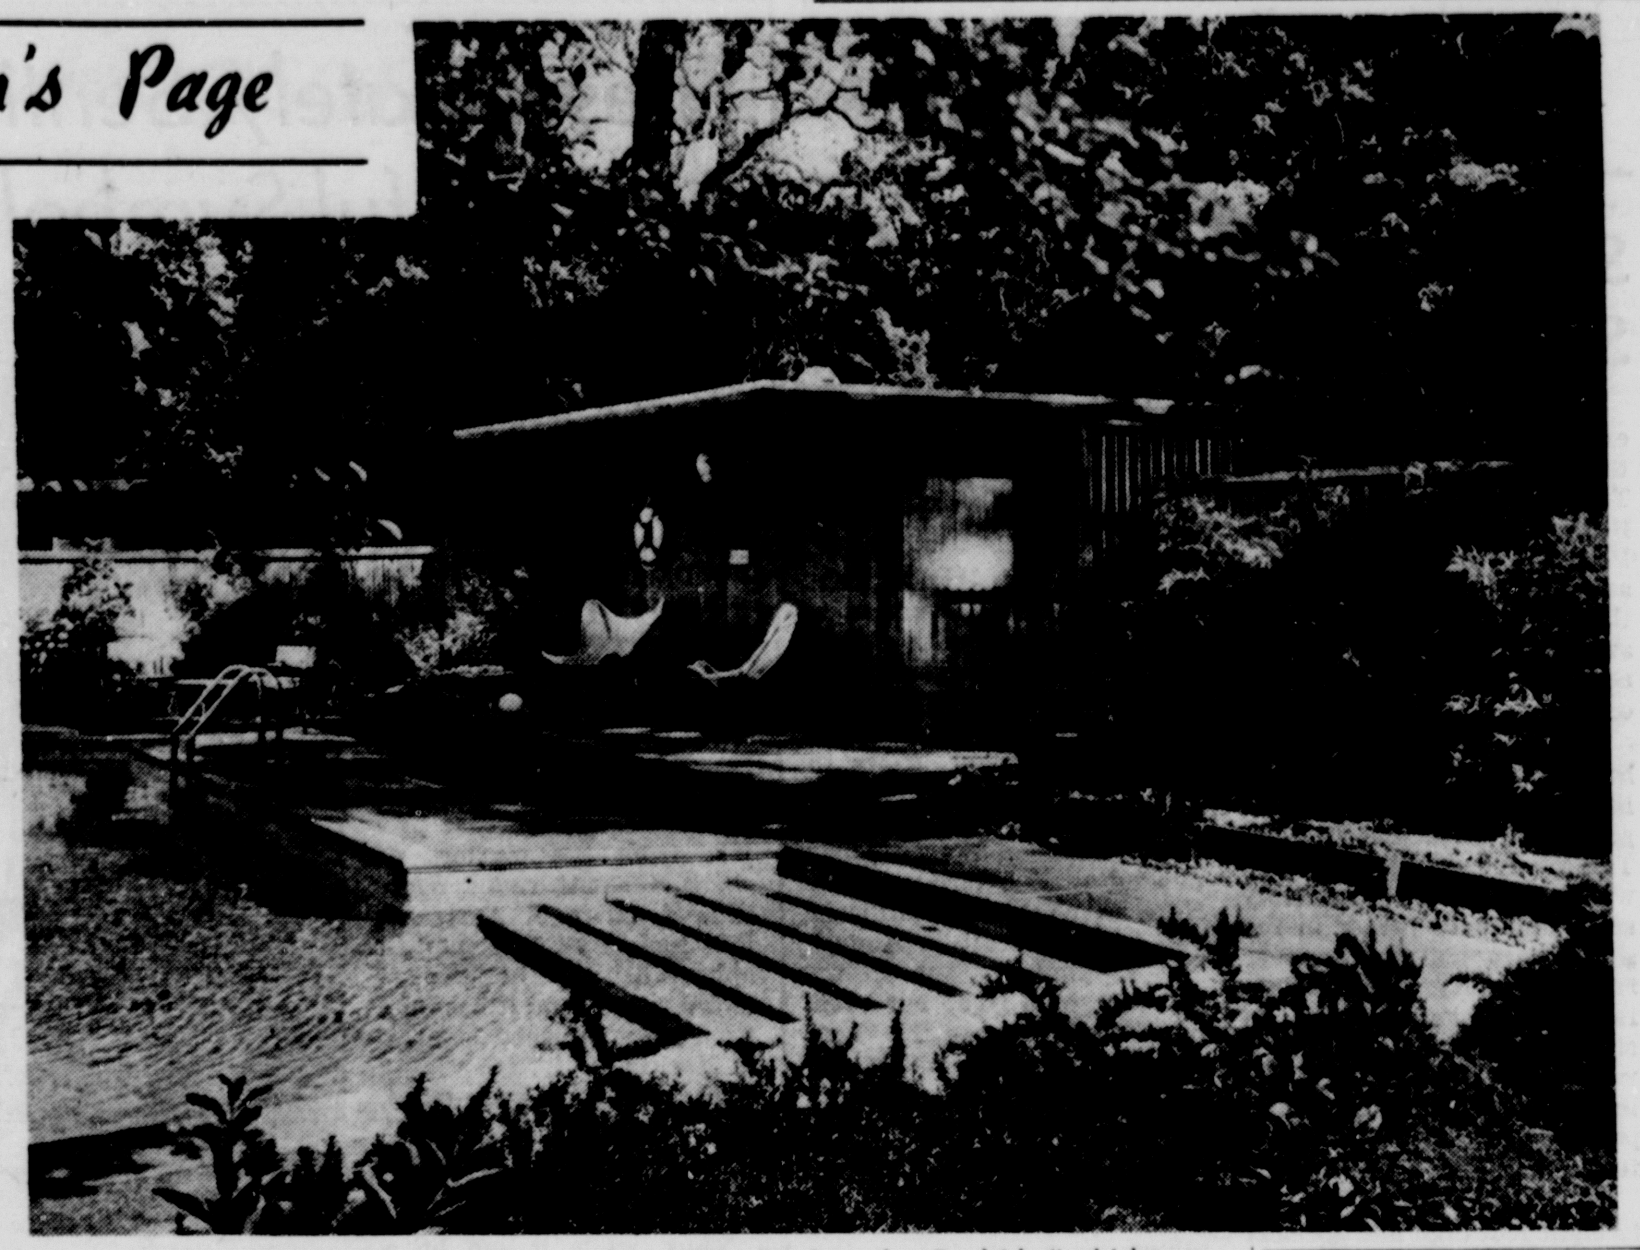

There are two kinds of shellac, orange and white. The white actually is what we generally know as clear and might be described as less orange than the orange type. Don't forget that — again like all clear finishes — shellac tends to darken wood slightly, so try it out on a piece of scrap wood to learn the effect.

Shellac is a natural, fast-drying finish, but will not fit into that category if it is applied during humid conditions. It should be used during dry weather and is not recommended for exterior work, although it occasionally is used as an undercoat in outdoor work where the final finish is resistant to the elements. As a general rule, though, shellac should not be used where it will be in contact with rain.

A second coat of shellac can be applied after an interval of a few hours. We have found, however, that it is best to wait a day or two between the next-to-the-last and the final coats.

Shellac deteriorates with age. Don't buy it in large quantities.

If you use some and have some left over, be sure the container is made air-tight. And if you have it around more than six months, consider the possibility that it may not be as good as when you purchased it. Whether you still want to use it depends on how important the project is. If an especially beautiful finish is vital, buy a new container.

THIS REDWOOD POOL STRUCTURE was designed by landscape architect John Carmack to house poolside dressing rooms and to conceal the pump and heater for the pool. The roof was extended for additional shaded seating space. Some Suggested Exotics To Spice Up Your Landscaping

If you like your names exotic as well as your plants, there is nothing quite like the Trinidad or Brazilian Flame Bush and its cousin the Pink Powder Puff Bush. These are as tropical, bright, exotic as their names imply and as such are particularly useful as accent plants in groups of three or alone.

The Trinidad Flame Bush has very lacy, almost fern-like, foliage that is bright green and attractive all year. The flowers are of a greenish white and it is the vividly scarlet stamens rather in the shape of a ball that appear from February through late fall that make this such a sight to behold. It is as though you cut the tips off the brushes on a Bottlebrush and pasted them all over some fern.

This beauty gets from six to eight feet high and spreads five or six feet. As you might suspect, it comes from Brazil and is great for a hot, dry place, particularly a gentle slope. Set it off against deep green but don't try to fight its brilliance by planting a brilliant ground cover beneath.

The Pink Powder Puff Bush is much the same but with large "puffs" formed by the clusters of bright pink staments. The open and willowy habit permits this to be trained into an espalier—trained flat against a wall—where it will give an exotic touch indeed to an enclosed patio (but use the sunny wall)!

Another possibility both for exotica and training flat against a wall espalier-style, is the Natal Plum. This is quite different as its evergreen foliage is a dark, glossy green.

THE NATAL Plum looks quite like a small version of the camellia but with darker green foliage and flowers of a pure, pure almost glistening white with Jasmine-like fragrance. The plant grows to five or six feet and produces edible berries sometime between July and September depending on where you live. Here in Northern California you will get fruit in August and September. The spring flowers are a treat but even more of a treat are the "berries," which are a handsome scarlet, about one to one-and-a-half inches long.

They have a good flavor, a tart plum taste and therefore make distinctive jams and jellies.

This combination of virtues—thorns, beautiful foliage, flowers and fruit—makes the Natal Plum a plant of many uses, not the least of which would be a child and animal-proof hedge. Don't worry, children learn to treat this shrub with respect the first time out so you don't have trouble.

It can be trimmed to make a hedge about five feet tall and two to two-and-a-half feet high. Or it can be used as a specimen plant, although it is probably best used in groups or as a foil against red brick walls or fences—or white ones.

BEING A South African native, this can take hot and dry places but it also will do well in part shade. For a really exotic effect, try some bright, low annuals in front of a hedge of Natal Plum.

Too frequently the gardenia is passed over by the Marin gardener as being too delicate or too difficult. This is most unfortunate.

If ever a plant deserved a place among us, it's the gardenia—yes, the same exotic plant that produces your corsage flowers.

The trouble most people have with them, possibly, is the assumption that they're delicate and ought to be put in the shade or at least part shade. Some gardenias want sun. All the sun and heat they can get. Just ask your nurseryman which varieties thrive in open sunny locations, and which should be planted in part shade.

ONE OF THE major requirements is humus—plenty of humus in the soil and good drainage. Then give it plenty of moisture (it can't stand water standing around its feet) and you have no problems.

These Stately Sentinels Serve As Colorful Symbols Of State

It might be stretching things just a bit to say that a palm tree is a necessity for the true California landscape.

But certainly, this stately sentinel has become the symbol of our inviting climate and geography. For many tourists, California without palms simply would not be California.

And many residents are similarly devoted to the tree.

A popular choice with many is the Cordyline australis, pictured here, with its yucca-like flowers that project from the clusters of sharp, dynamic leaves. While it is a native of Australia, it is typically Californian in appearance and in its likes and dislikes. And it has long been an established favorite in Marin County.

To place it in your mind, the Cordyline australis is the palm often encountered in nightclub and similar settings.

Thus, while it can be a major landscaping tree as in the photo, it can also be controlled with ease so that it is perfectly at home in the small garden or patio.

The flowers are a creamy white in color and fragrant. The green foliage adds a further touch of color.

Some other palms with large followings in California: The stately Queen Palm, better known to the south but also to be seen here in Northern California; the smaller Lady Palm, ideal for pool or patio setting; the Mexican Fan Palm and the California Fan Palm, two natives of our own desert country that grow large and high; and the Canary Island Date Palm, massive and suitable only to large estates with its 30 to 50-foot spread; the small and hardy Blue Cocos of Pindo, and finally the slightly taller Windmill Palm.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin Gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- For quick color accents, now is the time to consider bedding plants; dwarf dahlias, marigolds, zinnias, asters, petunias, stocks, snapdragons and ageratum.
- Soon on the scene, if not already, are roses in bloom in cans. Now is the time to select the varieties suited to your garden. Your local nursery has a wide selection, ready for transplanting.
- For your camellias mulch with two or three inches of leaf mold or peat moss. This insures that the ground will remain cool and moist during warmer summer days.
- When you decide to set out your new chrysanthemum plants, pinch them back and continue this method on the new growth until July. Pinching and proper fertilization insure sturdy, full plants.
- You'll miss the enjoyment of fresh vegetables if you don't start tomato and pepper plants now.

Lots Of Reasons For The Seasoning

It is all too easy for herbs and the lore thereof to become a hobby.

There are so many fascinating sayings, so much history and literature bound up with each herb it is a temptation to forget that the very sound reason for growing these garden subjects is seasoning.

Rosemary's pine-like leaves with their clean, delicious aroma certainly recommend themselves to every good cook. They do something for a roast that nothing else can when used judiciously; when chopped in a pot of red beans they make a gourmet dish of this humble food.

IN THE garden they are worth planting for their needle-like foliage, twisted trunk and delightful masses of pale light-blue flowers. They can be used to make a pleasant, informal hedge and one form makes a good groundcover.

Rosemary in the olden days was believed essential at wedding breakfasts and as a protection against evils of unknown quality at deaths. Thus Herrick wrote: "Grow for two ends, It matters not at all, Be't for my bridal or my burial."

Certainly one of the most aromatic and easy-to-grow seasonings (and most herbs are notoriously easy to grow) is Sweet Basil. Just set the plants out and forget them—except you must keep this plant pinched so it doesn't go to seed. You'll want to pinch off leaves anyway because, when washed and chopped fine and sprinkled over fresh sliced tomatoes, the leaves help create one of the taste treats of this or any other age.

SWEET BASIL had the distinction in 1962 of having an All-America winner called Dark Opal. This variety combines the wonderful seasoning properties of the green Sweet Basil with colorful, purplish leaves that make decorative garden plants.

Sweet Basil goes well in scrambled eggs, in potato salad and similar concoctions. Like most of the herbs, it wants very light soil that lets the water run through quickly and plenty of sun and heat.

An old European proverb has it: "Why should a man die if he has Sage in his garden?"

THIS IS not the Purple Sage that cowboys keep riding through, nor is it that brilliant annual Sage with scarlet flowers. This is the seasoning kind of Sage with rough, grey-green leaves and a loose sort of growing habit that is great if you have a good, hot, dry bank to cover or a tough spot in the rock garden.

The purple flowers are not the reason you grow this. Seasoning and leaf color are the soundest reasons. By pinching the plant from time it's young you can keep it shaped in a low mound. Its leaves have that wonderfully pungent odor that makes it so desirable when cooking roasts and fowl, or when chopped fine and sprinkled over cold meats.

There are so many possibilities in the seasoning group it is only possible to touch a few. Every nurseyman has a complete selection of herbs growing in pots ready for you to take home. Keep them growing in pots or plant them in a special herb garden.

Marjoram is quite handsome as a plant and has fine, rounding leaves with a flavor somewhat like Sweet Basil but milder. It is used the same way in cooking. Marjoram, with its sort of miniature rose leaves, makes compact little mounds useful on dry banks as accent plants among any of the Sedums or iceplant groundcovers. Try surrounding one with clusters of Hen-and-Chickens (succulents), a delightful combination.

THYME WAS a famous remedy for melancholy as well as seasoning for roasts and fowl and the stuffing thereof. It is a tough plant indeed and looks very much like a small version of Marjoram. There is an excellent groundcover form and several colorful variants, one with variegated white and one variegated gold foliage.

School Teachers, Their Charges And A Special, Mutual Problem

FIFTH GRADERS in Brooklyn's PS 16 confer with teacher Pegi Gorelick on how to handle a classroom crisis in this scene from "School Teacher," "DuPont Show of the Week" documentary to be seen tomorrow night at 10 o'clock on KRON-TV.

TV Cameras Go Inside Classrooms

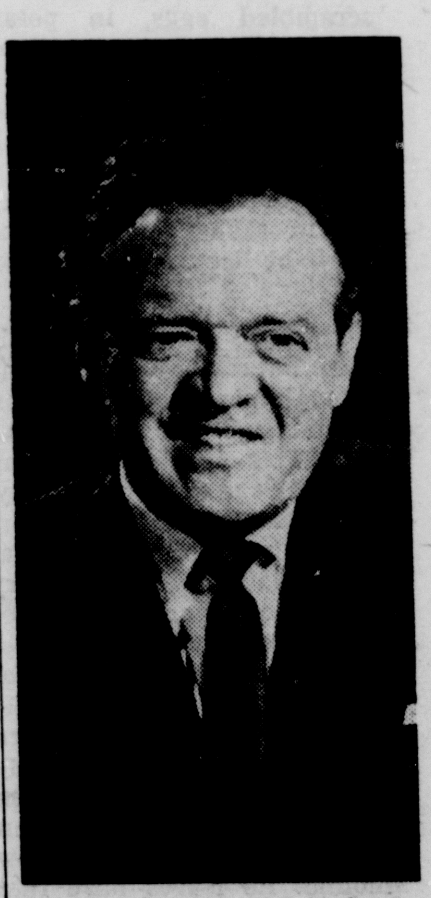

The real-life story of a dedicated group of teachers facing the challenge of educating the culturally deprived child will be examined in "Incident on Wilson Street," a "Du Pont Show of the week" program tomorrow night at 10 o'clock on KRON-TV.

Bill Jersey, producer, took his cameras to P.S. 16 in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, N.Y., located in a crowded neighborhood where the task of the teacher is a particularly challenging one. The focus is on nine fifth-graders as they go about their classroom work and also in their many experiences in the all-day neighborhood school program (ADNS), where their regular classroom work is augmented and enriched.

In ADNS, pupils are given the opportunity to work creatively in small groups with a teacher.

Midway through the filming of the experiences of the pupils and their two teachers —19-year old Sheryl Serper, in her first year of teaching, and 25-year-old Pegi Gorelick, who has been teaching for six years—a startling incident occurred which changed the entire focus of attention.

One of the students scratched and pushed teacher Sheryl Serper, and the remainder of this real-life story is devoted to the emotional and personal adjustments to the incident by both teacher and pupils. The classroom hostilities and tensions, and the eventual success achieved in bringing a meaningful and positive classroom result from the incident, are pictured.

HOST OF the "Bell Telephone Hour" on KRON-TV Tuesday at 10 p.m. will be veteran actor Van Heflin. He will read a specially-written narrative, "Concord Bridge," in honor of Armed Forces Day.

The TV Log For The Week

A GUEST on the "Ed Sullivan Show" tomorrow night on KPIX-TV will be singer Patti Page.

MARIN COUNTY BOATING SECTION

A SPECIAL SECTION OF THE MARIN MAGAZINE

SAILS dotted San Francisco Bay on the opening day of the 1964 yachting season. Boating, both motored and sailing, grows increasingly popular with the passing of each year. And nowhere is this more true than in our own Bay Area. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

10 Million Boats By 1973

Fantastic Growth Of Sport's Popularity Sure To Continue

An estimated 7,700,000 pleasure craft ranging from rowboats to luxury yachts cruised this country's 134,500 miles of navigable tidal coastline and 115,000 square miles of navigable inland waters last year.

What will the picture be in 10 years?

"If the trend toward the adoption of boating as a family participant sport continues, there will be almost 10 million boats using American waters for recreational purposes by 1973," the National Assn. of Engine and Boat Manufacturers, Inc., says in a recent report on "The Growth of Boating."

The 10 million figure, if realized, will be exactly double the number of recreational craft in use in 1953.

The NAEBM attributes this tremendous growth of boating to these factors:

The creation of navigable water in inland areas by power and conservation projects.

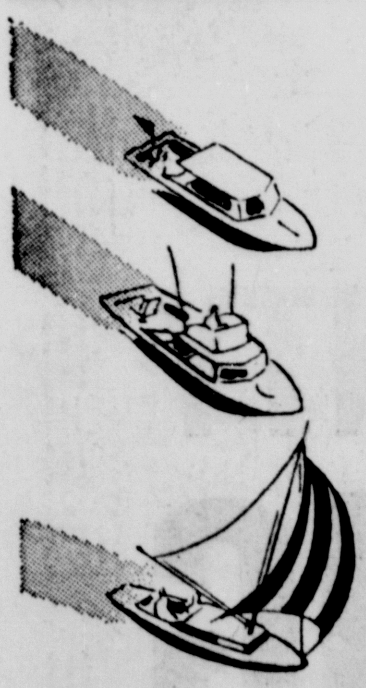

Availability of quality stock boats and motors in quantity, in a wide variety of types and price ranges.

The family acceptance of boating as a sport for all members to participate in together.

A boat can be financed as easily as an automobile.

Crowded highways are annoying more and more "Sunday drivers" to the point where they are becoming "Sunday sailors."

The adventure and romance associated with boats and the sea.

What's New In Boating In '64

INBOARDS

Nineteen hundred and sixty-four is an "inboard year," what with more boat builders turning out lines of cruisers and runabouts in the expanding use of stern drive, jet propulsion and inboard-outboard applications of the marine engine.

Numerous new inboard runabouts have been introduced with more heretofore strictly outboard builders entering the field for the first time and those who formerly limited themselves to runabouts entering the cruiser field. This widespread trend has created an unlimited number of modernly constructed craft to choose from for those in the market for a new boat this year.

Extensive use of wood—solid planking, lapstrake, carvel and plywood-construction is noticeable, along with fiberglass in hulls, cabin tops and trim. Philippine and African mahogany, along with teak, oak and cedar are high on the choice of woods. Aluminum houseboats, runabouts and inboards are on the increase, and there also is the steel hull and fold and play boats made of rubberized fabric.

Prices will suit any would-be buyer's purse, provided his eyes aren't bigger than his pocketbook. A 10-foot aluminum boat that can be powered by a small outboard motor can be purchased for $69.50, and at the other end of the scale, $31,225 will buy a 43-foot double cabin inboard cruiser.

CRUISERS

Smaller, more compact cruisers are the trend this year. While there are stock models of more than 40 feet in the 1964 lines, many builders are featuring cabin craft of lesser length and are putting into them many of the refinements that previously were found only in larger craft.

All electric galleys, showers and hot and cold running water are commonplace in cruisers in the 30 foot range along with bright interior designs, carpeting, draperies and vinyl covered bulkheads. On the larger yachts the deep freezer in the galley has been joined by a device that takes the last drudgery out of cruising—an electric dishwasher.

Spaciousness and comfort are stressed in cabin layouts and appointments along with construction features, speed and cruising range. Costs of inboard cabin cruisers depend not only upon length and materials used, but also in the choice of power plant, whether single or twin screw. A single engine naturally is less expensive than dual power. Even when a single engine is installed, prices for

A 'Must' List For Cruising

Indispensables You Should Have On Board

Cruising to strange and distant areas is one of the most enjoyable parts of pleasure boating, but it can be distasteful and sometimes even dangerous if you don't take along the proper equipment.

First on the list, of course, should be the U.S. Coast Guard - required equipment such as lifesaving devices and fire extinguishers. These are a must at all times — an approved lifesaving device for each person aboard and fire extinguishers as dictated by the type and size of your boat.

FOR A carefree cruise you might add some of the following:

Tools, spare motor parts such as sparkplugs, coils, condensers, distributor points.

A basic first aid kit and a first aid manual which tells what to do in case of an emergency.

Extra lines for use with a spare anchor, for dock lines, spring lines and general use.

Flares for emergency use. These should be packed in watertight containers.

Extra bulbs for running lights, cabin lights, flash lights and spotlights.

A compass and charts of the area to be visited, if such are available. It is not only dangerous but foolhardy to venture into strange waters without some knowledge of depths and types of bottoms.

THERE ARE other items that might be added for safety and comfort, but the above are mighty handy to have aboard on a cruise.

Dos And Don'ts For Those Who Want To Crew On Yachts

Know Your Boating Etiquette If You Want Another Invite

So you want to crew on a sailboat?

Here are some "dos and don'ts."

Don't ask: "How much does a boat like that cost?"

DON'T GO aboard without an invitation from the skipper. If you are invited aboard, thank the skipper and leave your street shoes on the dock.

Do ask questions about the boat. Every skipper loves his boat, and loves telling you about her. Find out which line is used to raise which sail, i.e., which is the "main" halyard and which is the "jib" halyard. Then if someone asks you to "drop the jib," you will not drop the mainsail by mistake—a mistake that could be catastrophic.

Don't walk on sails.

Don't smoke near dacron sails.

Don't get your feet entangled in lines lying on deck—there is a lot of power in a sail full of wind.

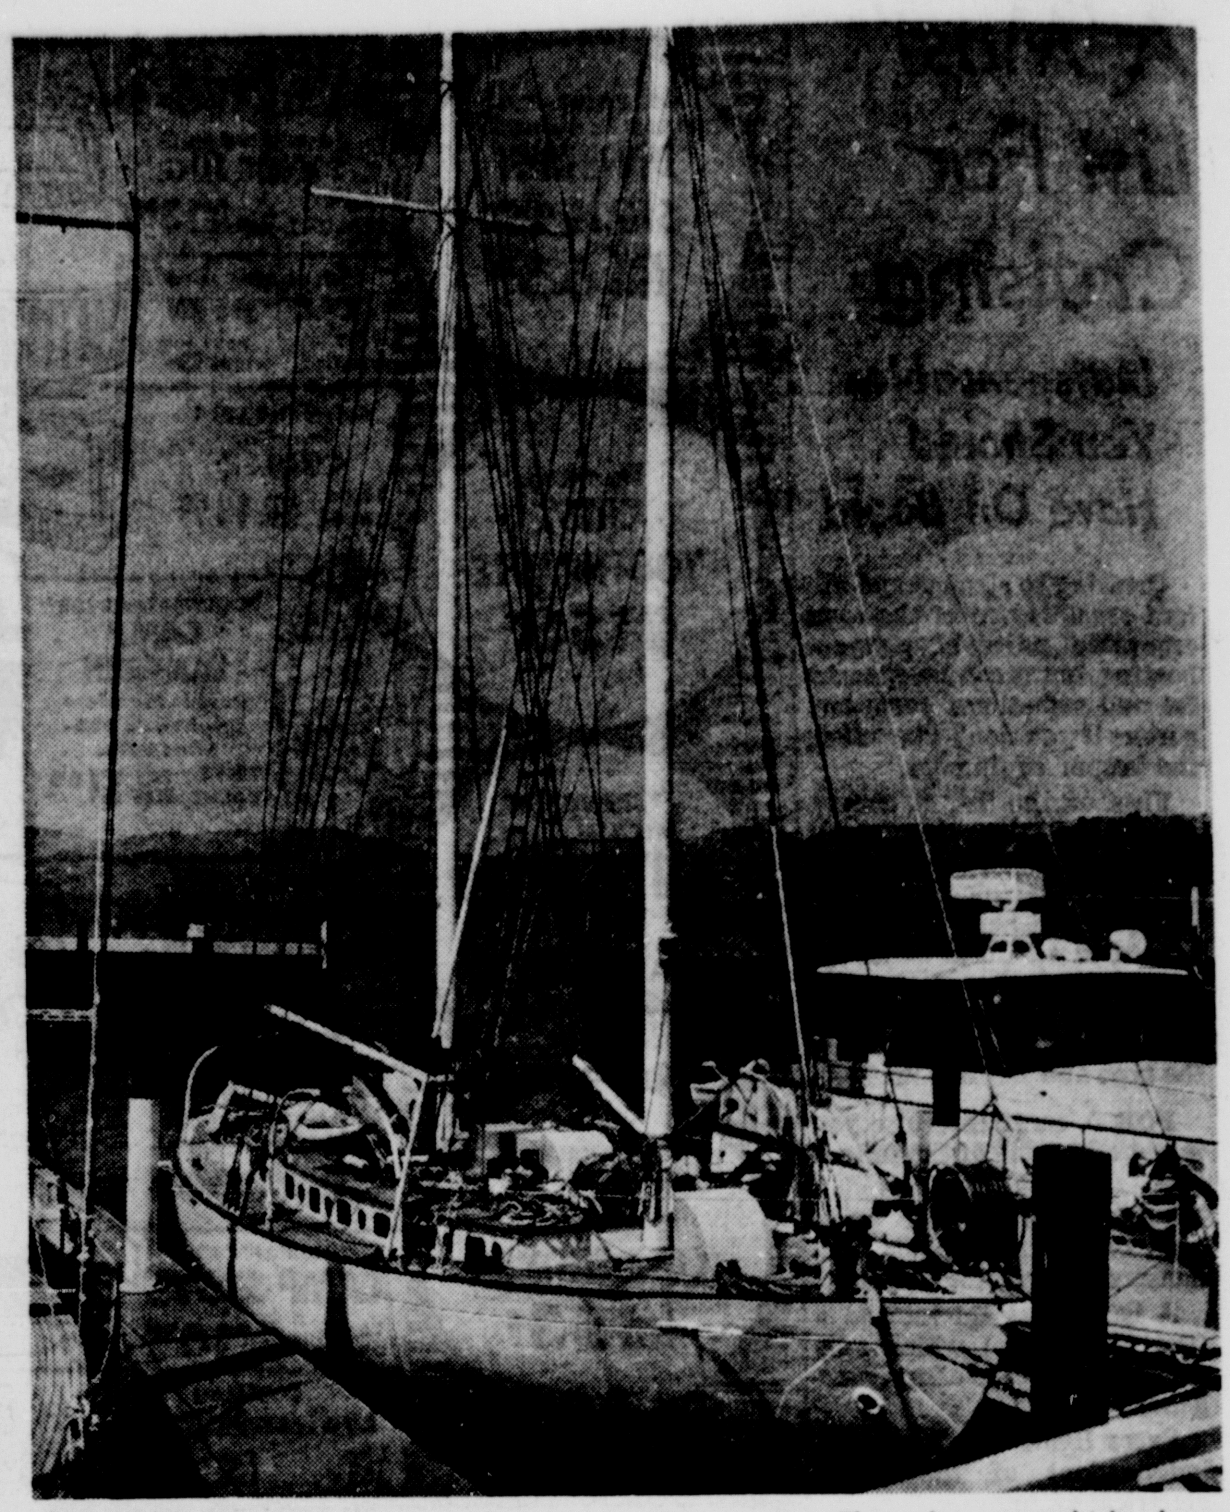

DO BE ready to "fend off" when in close quarters, i.e., harbors. Use a boathook if necessary, but be sure to apply it to docks or pilings, never to other boats.

Don't "converse" with the skipper when he is maneuvering "her" in or out of a harbor. At this time, he has lots of things on his mind. It's a good idea to keep low on deck so the skipper can see ahead of the boat.

Do contribute to "securing her" after sailing. This means helping to clean up, stow sails, etc. Forget that you are cold, hungry and soaking wet; pitch in and help the skipper. Don't forget that he, too, is cold and hungry.

DO THANK the skipper for having invited you aboard and out for a sail. Offer to help him with the maintenance of his boat.

Do get a book on sailing so the next time you go out for a sail, you will be more valuable as a crew. Every skipper needs one.

Be Practical In Choosing Togs

You'll have to admit it, gals, whether a woman has just accepted an invitation to a dinner dance or to go boating, she's sure to ask or at least ponder that question which has plagued womanhood since the beginning of time, "What should I wear?"

Even if you're a confirmed landlubber, the chances are pretty good the sooner or later you will be invited to go boating. So to help you decide what to wear, a few words of advice on proper boating attire:

Starting at the bottom and working up, choose your shoes with care, Wear soft soled shoes — sneakers are ideal. Shoes with hard soles are more slippery on smooth boat surfaces. Besides that, they can scratch the boat finish. Of course, shoes with heels are always taboo.

BERMUDA shorts or peddle pushers are quite popular with boating women. Jamaica shorts, although cooler when ashore, leave more skin area exposed to the sun which can get pretty hot in an open boat.

Culottes, which combine dressiness with practicibility, are also very fashionable this season.

Loose fitting overblouses are cooler than cotton knit tops, although both are popular. If you haven't become accustomed to the sun, avoid sleeveless tops. Boating is almost always a casual affair and anything goes as far as prints are concerned.

Don't forget a headgear of some sort as here again, old Sol can be a problem. Boaters are subjected to a double blast from the sun; they get the direct rays plus those reflected off the glittering water. To keep your hair from drying out, wear something on your head. Straws are fashionable but a head scarf is probably more practical. It will also help hold your hair in place when you are riding in a fast-moving boat.

SUNGLASSES are a must. To be on the safe side, take along some sun tan lotion. Apply it often and liberally.

One more very important tip: Take along a sweater or a light jacket. The temperature over water is several degrees cooler than that over land, especially in the evening.

When shopping for boating clothes, consider style but be more concerned with practicality. Remember that basic pieces are always in good taste.

Mariner Has Own 'Lingo'

Here Is What Those Nautical Terms Mean

THIS 50-FOOT BEAUTY, berthed at the San Francisco Yacht Club at Tiburon, is owned by Bulington Carlisle of San Francisco. Built by Steven Brothers of Stockton, she is powered by twin Chrysler engines of 275 horsepower each, sleeps 10 and cruises at about 14 knots. (Independent-Journal photo)

Boating, like any other sport, has its own unique vocabulary.

Just as it would be difficult to become a proficient golfer if you didn't know the differernce between a mashie and a putter, or a tennis player without being able to differentiate between ad in and ad out, so the pleasure boatman must learn a new language or remain forever a landlubber.

One of the most frequently abused words is "knot." It is a measure of speed equal to one nautical mile per hour. A boat does not progress at so many knots per hour, instead speed is expressed in terms of knots only.

All boatmen should learn nautical words referring to various positions in reference to their boat's movement.

FOR EXAMPLE, any objects located to the right of the boat are to the "starboard," while those to the left are to "port." If an object is located at right angles to the keel line of a boat amidships, it is referred to as "abeam." "Dead ahead" is the correct way to refer to an object located in line with the direction of the craft's bow. The "bow," of course, is the front of the boat; the "stern" is the back.

The "lee" or "leeward" side of the boat is the protected side. The "windward" side refers to the side exposed to the direction from which the wind blows.

A tricky reference is involved in the phrase "lee shore." This is a shore exposed to the wind located to leeward of the boat. Another word for windward side is "weather side" which also means the unprotected side.

Just as motorists become familiar with such words as hood, fenders, frame and dashboard, the boatman should learn to refer correctly to various parts of his boat.

THE "KEEL" or the principal fore and aft strength member of a boat is well known to even the newest boatman. Many boats, particularly those of wood construction, have additional fore and aft strength members where the bottom and the sides of the hull meet. These are referred to as "chines." A boat of a design which has sides and bottom joined at or nearly at right angles is referred to as a "hard-chined" boat.

Those hulls in which the joining of bottom and sides is rounded is referred to as "soft" or "round chined." Where no members are used, and it is difficult to determine where the actual juncture of side and bottom is located, as is the case with most molded plywood and fiberglass hulls, the section where the turn of the boat's hull occurs at the waterline is called the "chine line."

This same location is also known as "bilge line," and the area within the boat below the turn of the boat's hull is referred to as the "bilges." Water collecting here is known as "bilge water."

The structural member which joins the sides and bottom at the stern is referred to as the "transom."

THE DISTANCE from waterline to the top of the boat's side is termed "freeboard." The strength members to which the tops of the boat sides are secured are called "sheers." The sheer is also used to designate the sweep or lines of the top of the boat. The distance from water to sheer line at the bow is often higher than at the stern. In referring to a boat's freeboard, three measurements may be given, freeboard forward, or at the bow, freeboard amidships, and freeboard aft.

The "beam" of a hull is the breadth of the boat. Unless otherwise qualified, beam indicates extreme beam, the broadest of the hull. The "draft" of a hull is the depth of water required to float the hull. A hull that requires 2½ feet to float is referred to as "drawing" 2½ feet. A boat's draft should not be confused with its depth which is the measurement vertically inside the hull from a point even with the sheer line to the bottom of the hull.

"Hatches" are openings in decks, and the openings are closed with "hatch covers," though these covers are often referred to simply as "hatches."

Women's Influence Strongly Felt In The Boating Trends

Designers And Manufacturers Strive To Please The Ladies

The influence of women in pleasure boating is reflected more and more each year in boat design, marine products and accessories, and in attitudes of marine dealers.

As one leading figure in the industry wrote recently:

"It would have taken a bold man to have predicted, even as recently as 10 years ago, that by 1964 the boating industry would be giving as much attention to color coordination as to hull contour.

"THIS BY no means indicates that today's naval architect is not concerned with the operational aspects of boats. It reveals, rather, that the tremendous increase in the number of women who have taken to boating has had its influence on every aspect of what traditionally has been a man's sport."

This trend has created a whole new field of experts whose primary function is to make boating exteriors and interiors more appealing to the female eye.

One of these is Betty Jennings, a design consultant for U. S. Plywood Corp., who has devoted considerable time to a study of decorating boat interiors. Her ideas apply not only to new boats but to older ones which are being refurbished.

Miss Jennings suggests that white and pastel tints are most suitable for boat decor, but adds that care must be taken that white is not used in areas where glare could result. Cool colors of the sea itself—greens and blues—should predominate to combat the reflected light from the water, she says.

MISS JENNINGS points to the growing use of hardwood plywood paneling but says that with too many boat builders their use of this material has been limited to Philippine mahogany. She recommends lighter colors for paneling such as teak and blond Korina plywood, especially on smaller boats.

"Fabrics should be selected in common-sense fashion suited to the versatile nature of boat interiors," says Miss Jennings. "The cabin of the average craft is a multi-purpose interior—for dining, living and sleeping—and this versatility should be kept in mind throughout the whole decoration scheme."

BRING ALONG plenty of food when boating with youngsters. They can develop appeties after being on the water all day. Even if your boat is suitable for eating aboard, the kids probably will enjoy it more if meals are served picnic style on shore.

Some Help In Keeping Kids Occupied While You're Afloat

"Boys will be boys," according to an old English proverb.

But any parent blessed with a little girl will agree that "kids will be kids" would be more appropriate. Whether they wear trousers or skirts, all youngsters seem to have a knack of getting into things if they are not kept occupied.

With this in mind, the Evinrude Motors people offer a few words of advice on keeping the kids happy when boating.

Short, fast-moving outings are no problem. Most youngsters like to be on or near the water, and satisfying them while taking a quick spin in the boat, water skiing or catching fish is easy. But let the action slow down and you're in trouble, for small fry soon tire of anything routine. They have to be doing something different or going somewhere all the time.

TAKE CRUISING, for example. If you are going to be running for more than an hour, better find something for the kids to do. Most youngsters enjoy games of one kind or another. If their favorite game is such that it can be played aboard a moving boat, be sure to take it along. Otherwise appropriate games can be bought or invented by imaginative parents.

Something as simple as "Let's see how many boats we can spot" will keep small tykes interested for some time. But be ready with other ideas when the interest wears off.

Coloring books and crayons will keep them busy for awhile. You might also encourage them to try freehand drawings of the scenery or other objects of interest. Older children may enjoy studying nature with the aid of binoculars and books to identify birds, trees and wildlife native to the area.

THE CRUISE will probably be more memorable if the youngsters are assigned certain duties and given some responsibilities. These need not be big tasks—only enough to make them feel like a member of the crew. Keeping the lines coiled, the boat clean, and the equipment in place, are a few examples.

Make frequent stops when young skippers are aboard. Keep your itinerary flexible and don't be in a hurry. Give them plenty of opportunities to get out of the boat, stretch their legs and burn up some of their seemingly endless energy. While you are stopped, let them take a swim, romp on the shore or drop a fishing line from the bank.

Even though your boat may be large enough for eating aboard, the youngsters usually have more fun going ashore for meals. Before lunch time, announce that you are looking for a spot to put in. Let them do the picking, if possible.

THE KIDS will jump at the opportunity to drive the boat. They can learn quite a bit about boat handling during a full day of cruising. Even the small fry can be given a turn at the wheel, if an experienced driver is sitting alongside. In this case, keep the speed down and avoid crowded areas.

Be sure to bring along a hefty supply of snacks. Young appetites are tremendous, particularly when out-of-doors. Fresh drinking water should be aboard the boat at all times.

Boating can be a barrel of fun for the youngsters, or it can get pretty boring. How well you plan the outing will make the big difference.

an identical cruiser will vary, depending upon the make selected and the horsepower.

Other price factors are the interior appointments and equipment that comes with the craft. There's a difference between partially and fully equipped boats with most of the required running gear delivered aboard. Here are some "round" figures for inboard cruisers, all single screw except where noted:

18 to 24 feet—Around $5,000. 26 feet—Around $6,000. 28 feet—$8,500 to $10,000. 30 to 33 feet—$10,500 to $16,800. 35 to 37 feet—$20,000. 38 feet—$40,000 (twin power)

RUNABOUTS

Inboard runabouts are "bursting out all over" this year with the widespread application of the marine engine for stern and outdrive power. Prices again depend upon the type of construction, appointments, equipment and selection of the inboard engine.

Some builders offer hulls for inboard installations without the engine and these usually are in the 16 foot range. Runabouts are built upwards to over 20 feet in length, with shelter cabins or as day cruisers, with bunks and space for ice chest or toilet.

Smooth lines, roomy cockpits, bucket seats, sun lounges and dazzling dashboards are featured in the more plush models, even carpeting. There are speedsters, sportsters, utilities, ski towers, off-shore fishing boats and family runabouts—something to please every taste.

The inboard-outboard engine and stern drives under the floorboards or the stern seat are adding cockpit space in many of the new 1964 inboard runabouts.

OUTBOARDS

Outboard boats for 1964 come in any length or material that the heart may desire, from 10 to 20 feet, either in open or cabin models and built of wood planks, plywood, fiberglass, aluminum and even rubberized fabric.

Several new lines are being introduced and there are a multitude of models to choose from.

Outboard runabouts pretty much follow their inboard counterparts in design, appointments and standard equipment and some are built for dual use either with a motor or inboard engine of recommended horsepower When used with outboard motors, however, the cockpit area increases.

A variety of designs meet a wide range of uses in the outboard boat field. Fishing and water skiing get the first call but there are barge-like types, models of oldtime packets and whalers, round bottoms and catamarans.

Outboard cruisers come with complete living accommodations or with shelter cabins for day or overnight use.

SAILBOATS

The estimated 150 "popular" one-design sailboat classes in this country are increasing in number this year. Not only have American designers been busy at their drafting boards but the influx of European imports is rising.

Sailboats start out with most anything that can support a few yards of cotton or nylon cloth spread to the breeze, such as the tiny "surfboards" that became so popular a few years back. From these miniature six or seven-footers that hoist "diaper" sails, some 60 square feet or so in area, you can go on up to auxiliary cruising craft that flare out in excess of 550 square feet of canvas.

Design capabilities of the sail boat builders seem inexhaustible. There are fin keels twin keels, single keels, triple hulls, twin hulls, round bottoms, double bottoms, deep V bottoms, and of course, the weighted or lead keel.

A sailboat may be a plastic surfboard carried knocked down on the top of the car, or a luxurious six sleeper with ample living appointments, including standup head, complete galley, hanging lockers and vanity, even, built of mahogany or fiber glass.

There are sailboats built of rubberized fabric and aluminum in addition, and some have two point hulls in the catamaran column.

The cruising auxiliary, with extra inboard power, and in the 25 to 32 foot range, is a popular number with a host of builders this year.

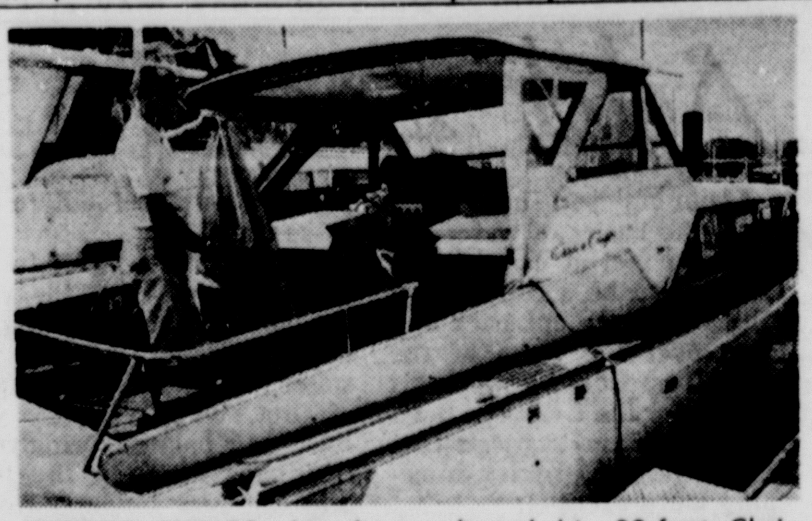

SMALL CRAFT

Ice boats, row boats, pedal boats, prams, dinghies, canoes, kayaks, foldboats, midget inboards, cartoppers—you name it—the small fry of the boating world far outnumbers any other classification of recreational craft.

They are fashioned of wood, rubber, fiberglass, rubberized cloth aluminum and other metals. The smaller windjammer versions bend to the breeze with the tiniest of sails and miniature hydroplanes, only five and a half feet in length, have a 25 horsepower motor and a reputed speed of 20 miles an hour.

Other small craft rely on footpower and their fun boats for kids, and models adaptable to the camper, skiier and the old fashioned fisherman.

ENGINES

Even a casual survey of inboard and outboard boat power reflects that 1964 marine engines are in abundance in a wider horsepower range than ever before.

Inboard buffs can expect to find many new engines of 1963 units offered in new versions in both gasoline and diesel units. At least two brand new diesel lines by manufacturers never before in the marine propulsion business have been brought out.

Makers of inboard engines and outboard motor manufacturers, have kept on with the perennial battle to bring down dimensions and reduce weight to horsepower ratios of established models. The modified 1963 engines would be the place to look for greater compactness and wider applications.

This is a normal situation in the engine business because it takes development over a period of time to bring any engine up to a certain perfection commensurate with its potential.

In both inboards and outboards, the new engine or motor buyer will find more built-in accessories, such as alternators, fresh-water cooling systems, smoother shifting mechanisms, and more ingenious engineering improvements, including more efficient fuel injection, much better internal castings and wider use of lightweight alloys.

The inboard-outboard power package, which has gained such great popularity in a short period of time, was given a boost late in 1963 when at least four major manufacturers announced the widening of their stern-drive lines. Power tilt, power steering and power shifting are becoming commonplace on the I-O packages.

Add Zest To Your Water Skiing Fun

Assuming you have mastered the basics of water skiing—you feel at ease on the skis, can make a run without falling and can cut back and forth over the wake of the boat—Tom Dorwin, water ski adviser for the Evinrude Boating Foundation, suggests that it may be time to try something more exciting.

How about the single or slalom ski?

USING ONLY one ski is a little tricky and learning will no doubt take a bit of practice, but the added fun and feeling of accomplishment make it well worth the effort. Although specially designed slalom skis are available, and recommended, you can save yourself some money by converting one of the skis you now have to a slalom ski. This involves buying and installing an extra toe piece and a deeper fin.

If you are in the market for new skis, you may want to consider a pair with one already set up for slalom use.

In any case the easiest way to learn is to start out with skis on both feet. On a calm and straight stretch of water, get the feel of the single ski by placing all your weight on one ski and lifting the other one slightly. Try this with both feet and decide which feels most natural. That will be the one you will want to use.

THE NEXT STEP—and it's a bit tricky—is to drop one ski. This is done by slowly edging your foot out of the binding of the ski to be dropped. Lift your heel out first and then quickly snap your toes up and out to release the ski.

Don't be in a hurry to get the loose foot into the rear toe binding. Having it free, or even dragging it over the water will help stabilize you at first. When you feel you have your balance, bring your foot back and slip the toes into the rear binding. Keeping the rear foot flat on the ski and applying weight on the turns will give you more control.

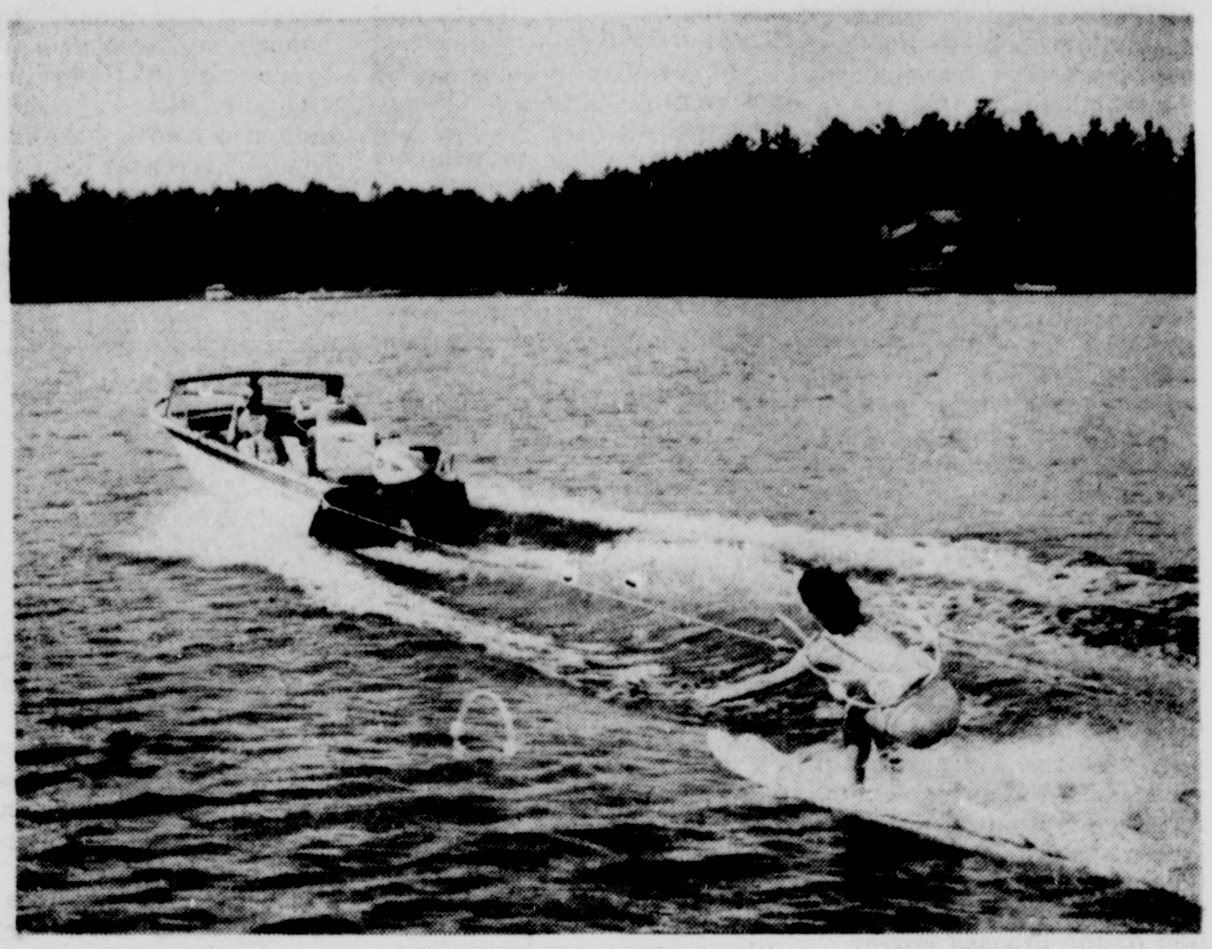

From this point on it is strictly a matter of practice.

If you are not ready for the slalom ski, there are other things you can do to make your skiing more fun. Games can be purchased or inexpensively made at home.

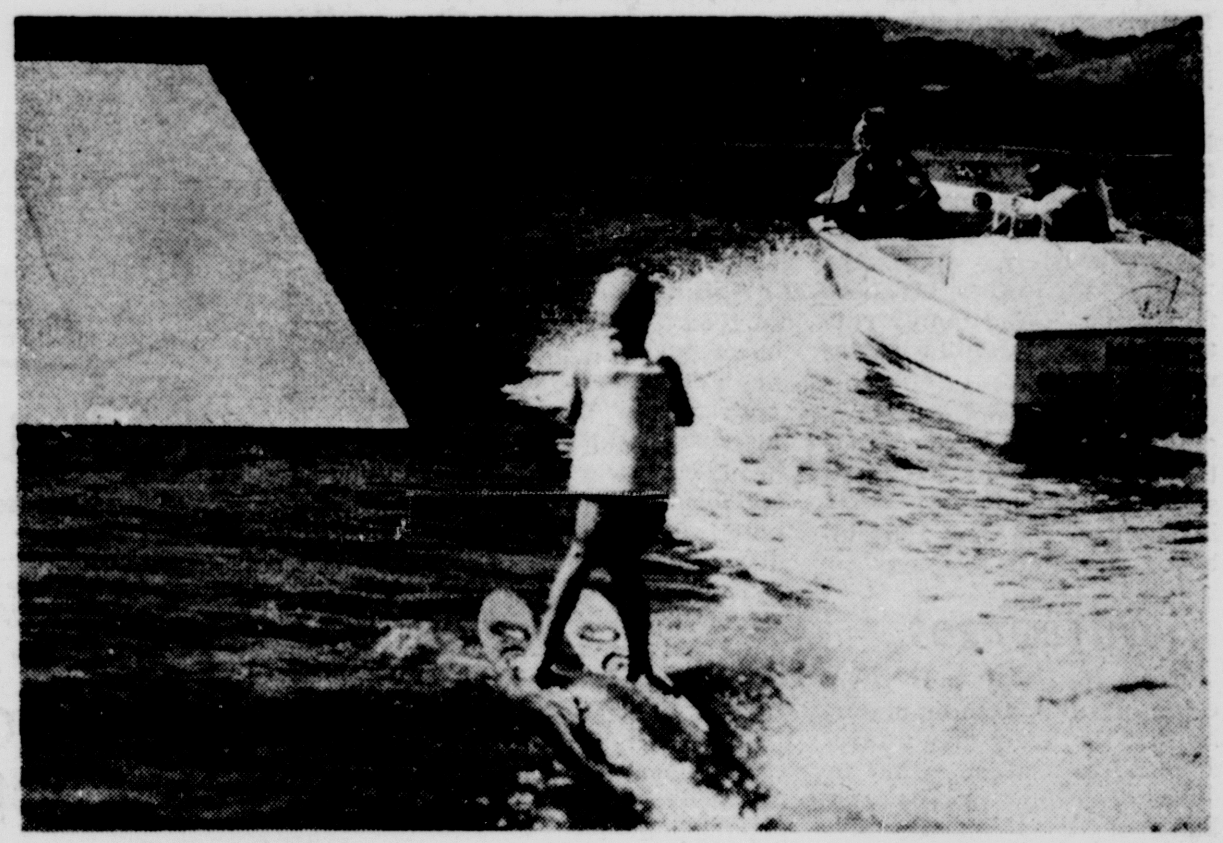

ONE POPULAR water skiing game consists of a set of plastic hoops with floats attached to allow them to stand vertically in the water. The hoops are spread out over a course and the skier must retrieve them as he passes. They can be set at various angles depending on the skill of the skier.

Ordinary toy balloons attached to lines anchored with a rock can be used to set up an obstacle course. These too can be staggered to present a challenge to the skier.

Othe tricks like holding the tow bar between the legs are easily learned, but on this subject Dorwin offers a few words of advice. Never take a chance by putting a leg into the tow line yoke. And, of course, never put the yoke around your neck. Use common sense and stick to tricks that are safe and within your capabilities.

THERE IS MORE to water skiing than just hanging on for the ride. Although most skiers are content to retain their amateur standings, they can have a lot of fun by learning some of the more advanced feats such as using only one ski. Various games are also designed for the skier who is looking for something a little different.

THE YOUNGEST competitive student at Master's Water Ski School at Mira Monte Marina, Novato, is 8-year-old Marcy Wineman, daughter of school director Bee Wineman and marina operator Bob Wineman. Here Marcy is preparing to take her first jump on the school ramp. In the boat are her mother and Wally Pallack, the school's chief instructor. The only water ski school in California affiliated and rated Class A by the American Water Ski Assn., Master's is geared primarily for the teaching of water skiers interested in competition, but welcomes all skiers and would-be skiers.

Tips On Driving With A Trailer

Here are a few tips from the Outboard Boating Club of America on driving with a boat trailer in tow:

Swing wide when passing and make sure that the road ahead is clear of oncoming vehicles. At crossings, make extra wide turns to clear high curbs after signaling to warn other drivers. Use an outside rear view mirror, since the boat's bulk may make inside types impractical. Give yourself plenty of room to make a smooth stop, enough to make up for the added momentum caused by the weight of a loaded trailer.

In backing, remember to turn your steering wheel opposite to the direction you want the rear of the trailer to go.

Camera, Boats Go Together

Boating is tops for the amateur photographer.

If you're a camera buff, there are dozens of wonderful subjects to be shot whenever you go afloat. Although photography on the water involves some complications not encountered ashore, you can be assured of good pictures if you are aware of a few simple rules.

The use of a small, light camera, with a neck strap to avoid losing it overboard, is recommended by the marine photography people. If possible, take two cameras along. Then you'll always have one ready to catch spur-of-the-moment shots that allow no time for reloading.

To protect your cameras from the water, keep them in thick, waterproof, plastic bags when they are not in use. Protect your film from water and bright light by keeping it in an air-tight container. Heat from the sun can cause film to fog in your camera, so stow your gear in the shade whenever possible.

A GOOD exposure meter filters and a sunshade can help you get the most from seagoing photography. Water reflects much more light than land, so you're liable to overexpose unless you check your exposure with a meter.

With black and white film, a yellow (K-2) filter will darken blue sky and bring out clouds. For dramatic, moody effects use a red (230A) filter. The filters will also protect your lens from spray. A sunshade also helps keep spray out of the lens.

Avoid shooting into chop and wind. It's a sure way to get your camera soaked with spray. When spray does get on your camera, wipe it off as soon as possible with fresh water to prevent rust and corrosion.

TO GET GOOD results when shooting from a moving boat, use the fastest shutter speed possible. Never shoot a fast moving boat at less than 1/250th of a second.

If your shutter speed is limited, the experts say you can stop fast action by using a couple of tricks to reduce a boat's relative speed. The speed of the subject boat is highest if it passes you at right angles and you are standing still.

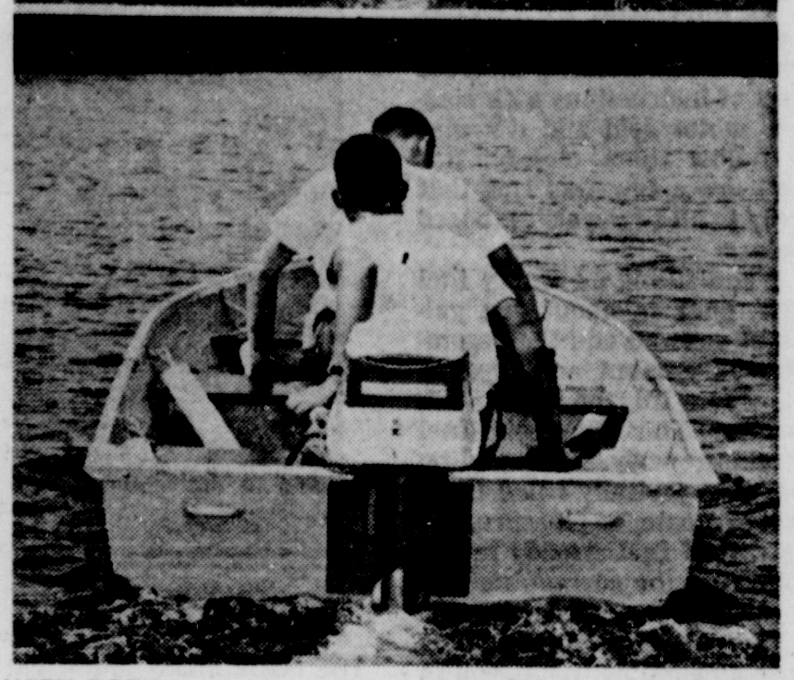

Here are three ways, while shooting, that you can reduce the speed of the other boat: shoot at a reduced angle as the boat approaches you; pan with the moving boat and shoot as it passes close to you. (This will stop the motion of the boat and give movement in the background). Shoot from a boat moving at or near the same speed as the boat you are shooting. This gives excellent results because it stops the boat and the distant background, too, and gives you motion in the water.

WHEN SHOOTING from a running power boat, don't rest the camera against any part of the boat. Vibration from the engine will blur your photos. Your best bet is to hold the camera against your cheek. This helps steady the camera and also keeps your eye centered in the view finder.

When reloading aboard a boat, go into a cabin or under the canopy, if possible. Otherwise, shade the film from the direct sun with your body.

That's all there is to it. Observance of these simple rules will protect your valuable photograph equipment and help you get good pictures every time out.

WITH BOTH passengers sitting toward the same side (top photo), the boat leans to starboard. This reduces handling ease and cuts down on performance. When the load is more evenly distributed (bottom photo), the boat is trimmed and full performance is restored.

Mix The Fuel Properly

Check the oil?

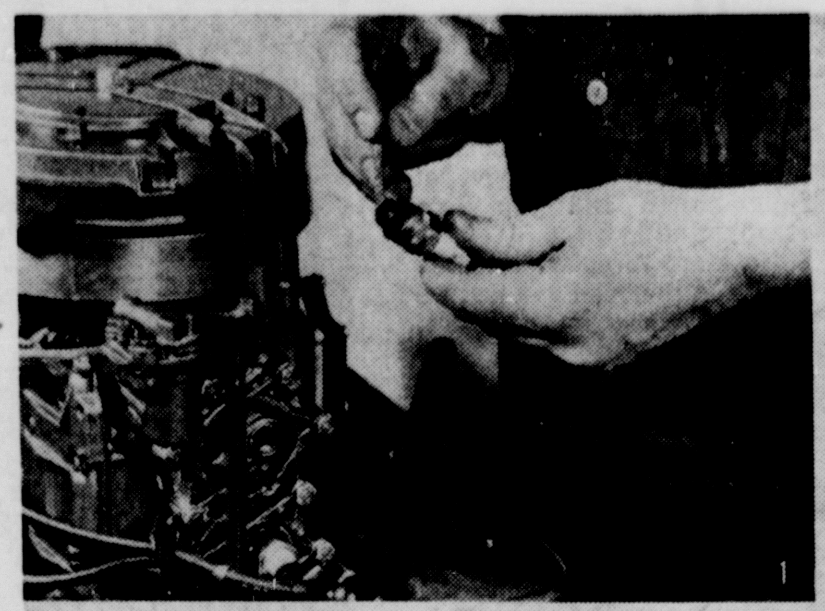

Not with your two-cycle outboard. Instead of having a crankcase that has to be filled, changed and checked frequently, the powerhead of a two-cycle engine automatically lubricated by the oil mixed with the gasoline.

It's important, however, that this mixture be correct. Every manufacturer includes a set of instructions with each new motor sold and it's wise to follow them closely. But here are a few fuel tips that apply to all two-cycle outboard motors:

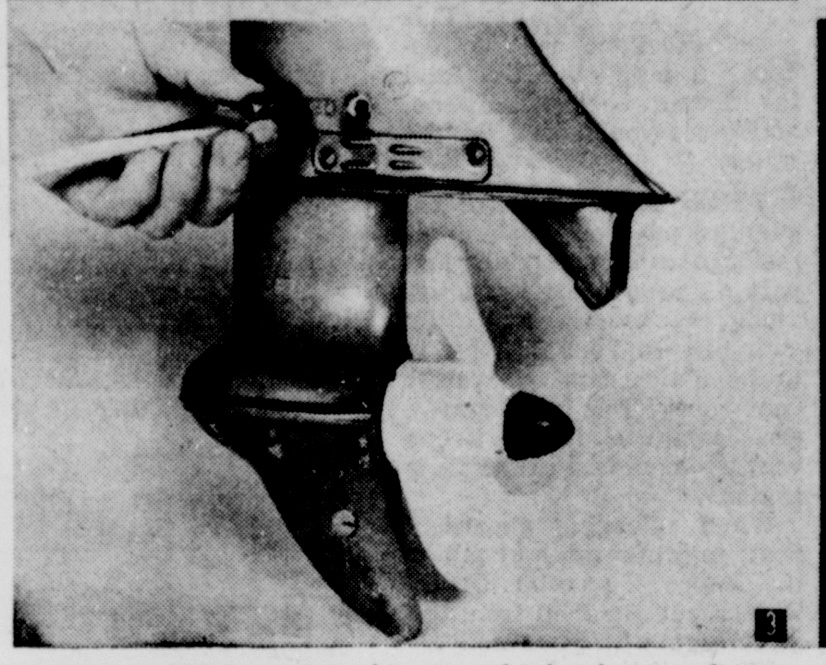

When filling an empty fuel tank, pour in about one gallon of gas and add the recommended amount and type of oil. Then fill the tank with gasoline. This allows the fuel to mix properly. When adding fuel to a partially filled tank, first estimate, or measure, the amount of fuel already in the tank. Add the correct amount of oil and then put in the gas.

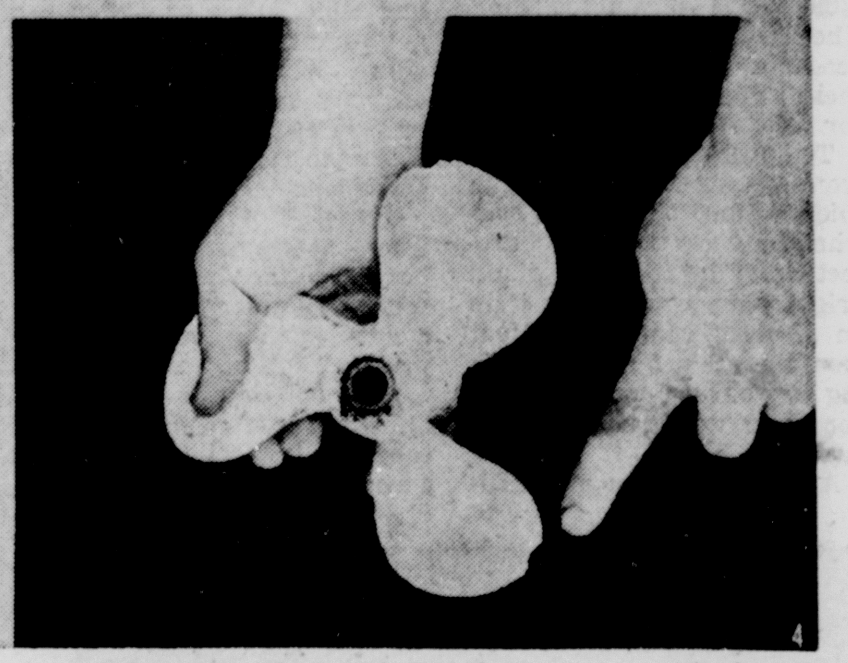

Your estimate should be as close as possible, for if you're skimpy with the oil, the engine will not be lubricated properly. On the other hand if you put in too much oil, the engine will smoke and the spark plugs will foul causing poor engine performance.

Trying to save fuel from one year to another is false economy. Fuel left over at the end of the season should be thrown out. Old gasoline is often contaminated with varnishes and has lost its ability to vaporize properly. If used, hard starting and a clogged fuel system can result.

THE FOUR MOST important things to check when readying an outboard motor for the new season are the ignition system, fuel system, lower unit and propeller. In photo 1, check sparkplugs carefully. Even if new ones are used, the gap should be checked before they are installed.

Don't forget the fuel tank (2). If gum or varnish deposits have formed inside, the tank should be cleaned thoroughly before using. Then (3) check the level of the lower unit lubricant. If it was not changed when last stored, it should be changed now. Finally (4), a badly nicked or bent propeller should be replaced or repaired.

Big Outboards—Here To Stay

There'll Always Be Demand For The Powerful Engines

A lot of persons predict that the larger horsepower outboard engines will pass from the scene in another decade, giving way to the inboard-outboard arrangement that has become increasingly popular in recent years.

Not so, say the men who make them.

If anything, they say, the high-horsepower outboard engines will become even more popular as the industry adds more and more refinements, especially those aimed at cutting down on fuel consumption.

THE AMOUNT of gas-oil mix consumed by the big outboards in the past has been dismaying to many owners and probably has been a big factor in boosting inboard-outboard sales. But several manufacturers have taken a step toward licking this problem in their 1964 models.

Two of these are Johnson and Evinrude, both of which have cut their gas-to-oil ration from 24 to 1 to 50 to 1. This means that instead of one quart of oil to each six gallons of gasoline the mixture will be one quart to each 12½ gallons which, over a full season of boating, would represent a considerable savings.

The 50 to 1 ratio applies to all engines in the two lines which range upward from 3 horsepower to 90. The latter engine is a new maximum horsepower for both companies. Their previous maximum was 75.

TOM KALBFUS, sales director for Johnson, says that his company has spent at least three years in developing the new formula.

"Johnson engineers poured 561,000 gallons of gasoline and 12,000 gallons of oil into engine operation equal to three-and-a-half million boat-test miles in arriving at the new ratio," he says.

KALBFUS SAID tests with the 50:1 mix in the 90-horsepower engine showed it increased sparkplug life 57 per cent and reduced pre-ignition tendency 88 per cent.

"The reduced pre-ignition in turn increased five-fold the life of pistons and bearings," he adds.

"These improvements definitely will reduce engine servicing costs, and may possibly double the lifespan of the high-horsepower outboard."

THE NEW 50 to 1 mix requires no special oil, Kalbfus claims, and any type of gasoline may be used from marine grade through regular automotive gas.

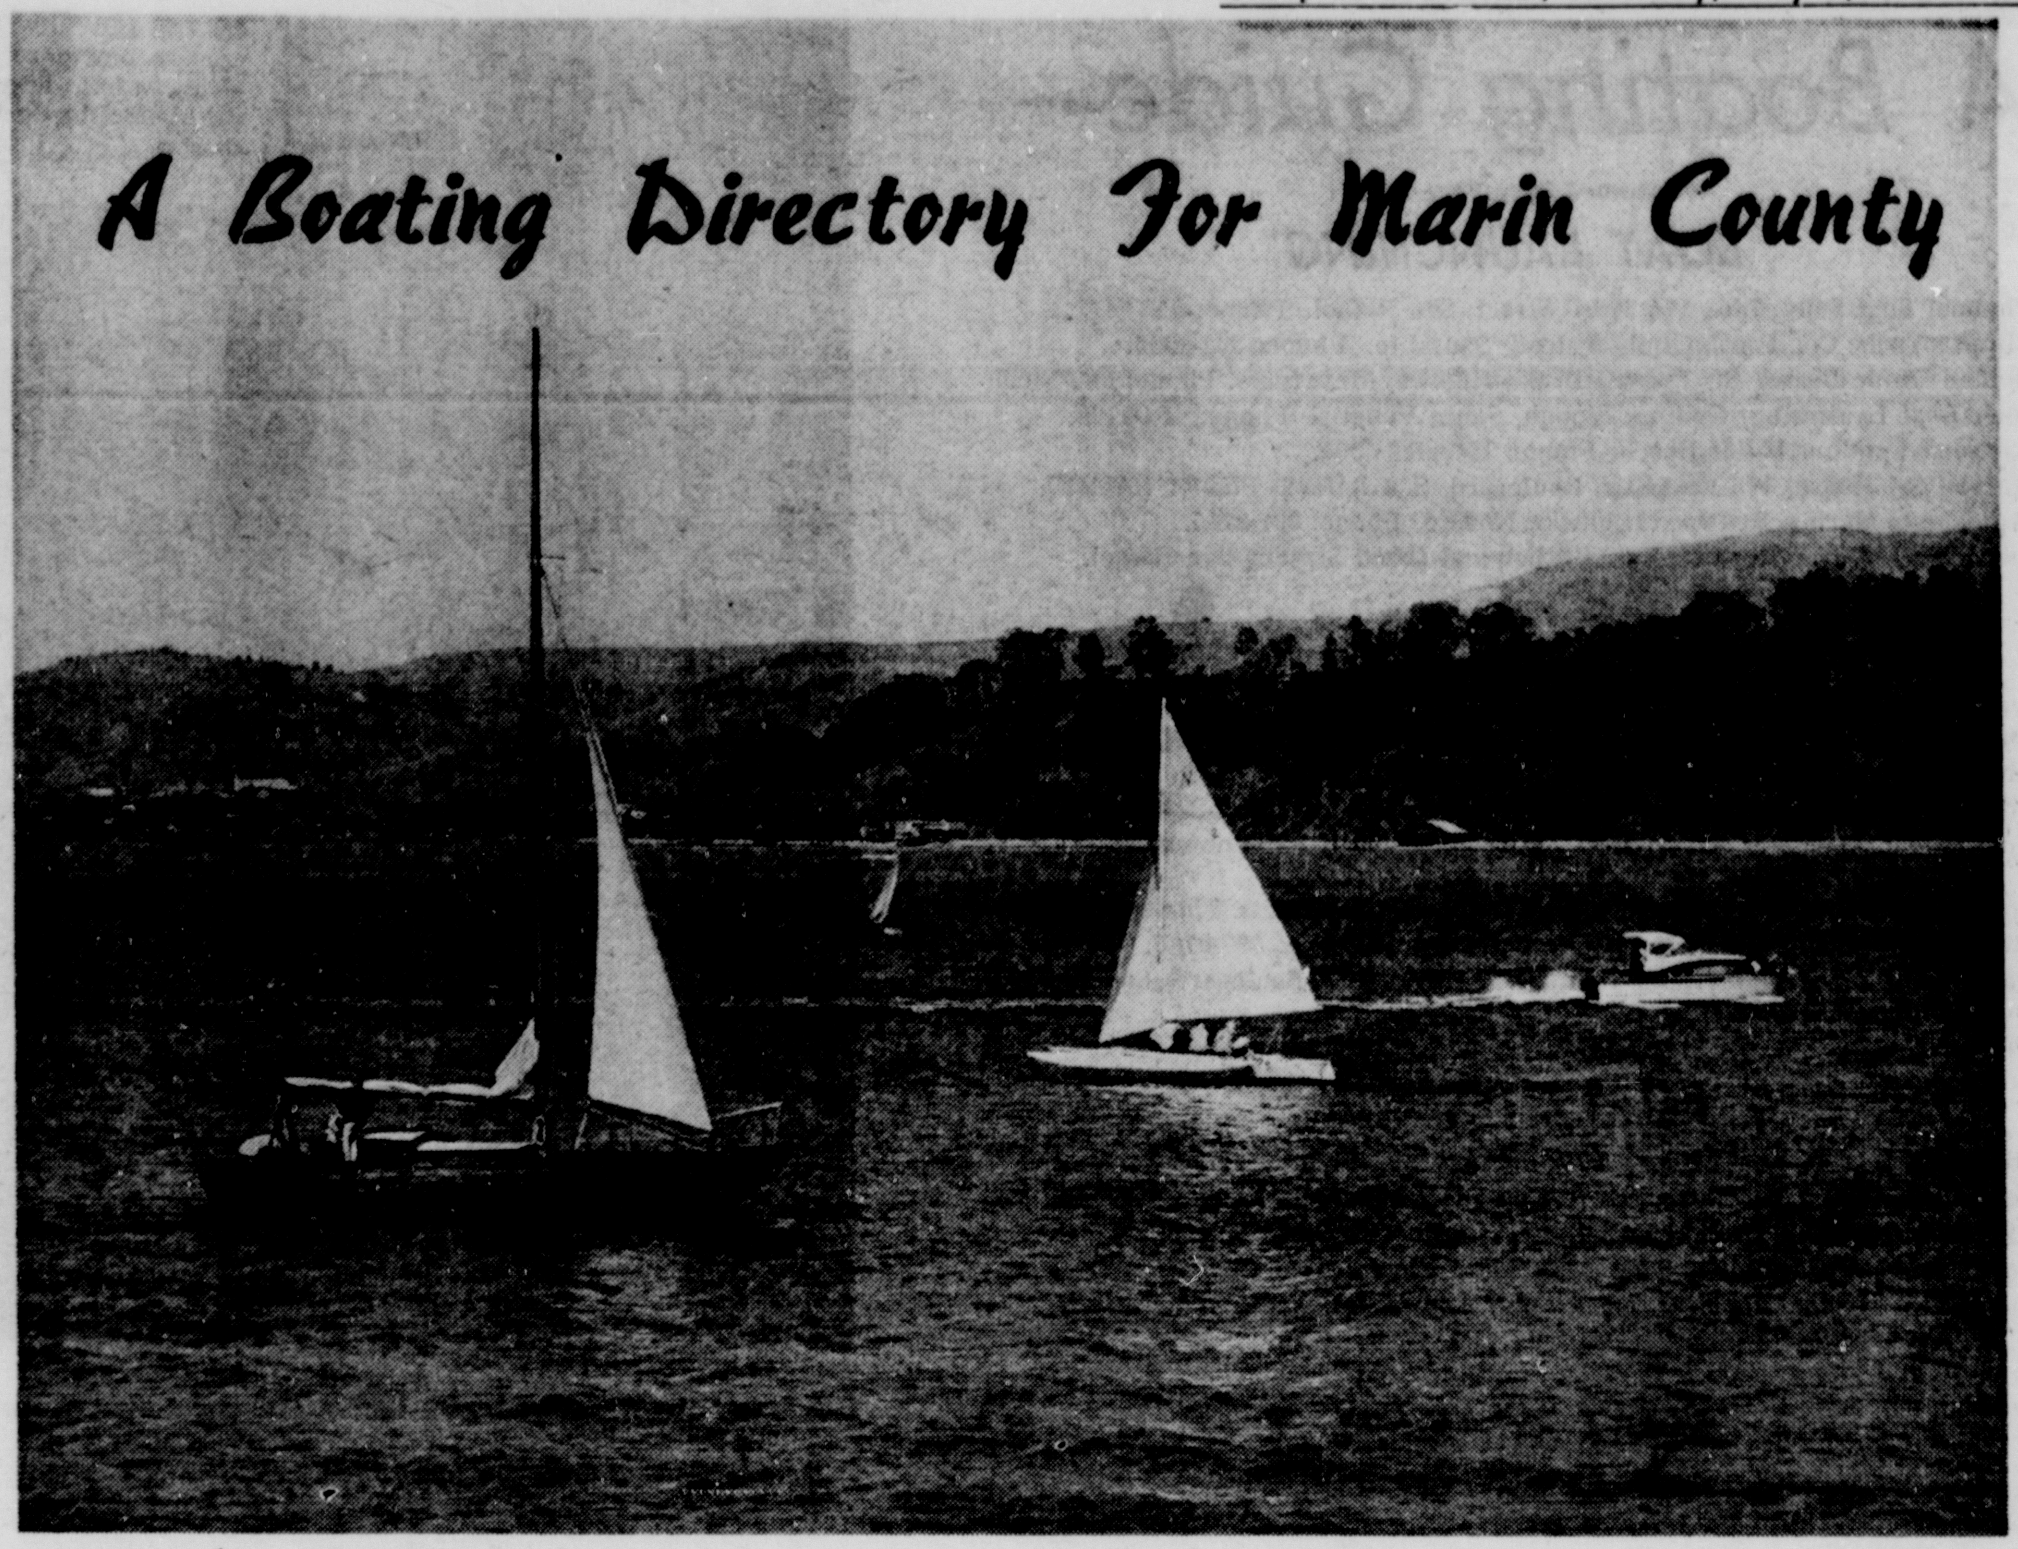

Will Johnson increase its maximum horsepower in the future to catch up with Kiekhaefer Corp., whose 100-horsepower motor, introduced in 1962, now leads the field in horsepower?

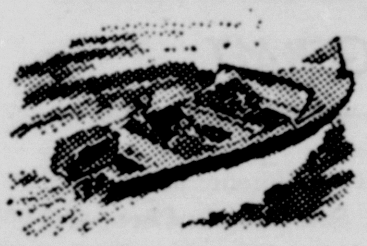

Kalbfus declines to say, but he did indicate that Johnson engineers have in the works other improvements designed to maintain interest in high-horsepower outboard engines as the propulsion units for runabouts and smaller cruisers.

Today's Boatman Relies Heavily On Electronics

New Devices Add To Pleasure And Safety While On The Water

A large slice of the estimated 2.6 billion dollars which America's pleasure boaters will spend in 1964 will go for electronic navigation or communication equipment.

It is a far cry from a decade ago when only the largest of motor cruisers and sailing vessels among pleasure boats carried such equipment.

In 1954 there were two chief factors against smaller boats being equipped with ship-to-shore radiotelephones, radio direction finders, depth finders, etc.—price and size.

FOR EXAMPLE, 10 years ago a reliable depth finder cost about $600, and even if a smaller boat owner could afford one it would be difficult to find space aboard to put it. Now, with the advent of the transistor and other developments in electronics, a satisfactory depth finder is available for about $100. The size has been cut down to where it can be installed easily on the smallest runabout.

A new all-transistor, ship-to-shore radiotelephone is another good example of these new electronic wonders.

Weighing only eight pounds instead of the usual 20 to 30 and measuring less than one-third cubic foot in size, the new radio can be installed easily even in a relatively modest outboard craft.

THE NEW unit, manufactured by Raytheon Company, operates on either outboard or inboard 12-volt systems or from a separate battery. Because it has no tubes, it requires no warm-up time and hence is ready for instant use in any emergency.

Two-way conversations can be carried on at ranges up to 50 miles or more. The unit includes six channels to call the Coast Guard, other boats and ships, shore stations, and, through shoreside maine telephone operators, anyone who has a telephone.

Among the 19 high performance transistors in the new unit is one used in space applications but recently made available for non-government use.

DEPTH finders also are a great improvement over those of other years.

Some, such as Columbian Hydrosonics Aqua-Probe take up little more room than a good-sized alarm clock and also operate off a 12-volt system or separate battery.

Depth finders not only determine depth of bottom but the type—mud, sand or rock. They also are so sensitive that they detect fish and, after some experience in using the instrument, it is possible to make reasonable estimates as to size and type of fish involved.

A BOARDING LADDER makes it easy to get into a large boat from deep water. The portable ladder is hung over the side of the boat when some one wants to come aboard. It folds for easy storage when not in use.

RULES OF THE ROAD

Some Basics Of Good Boating For Every Skipper To Know

Having a thorough knowledge of what you are doing always makes doing it more fun. This applies to just about everything, including recreational boating.

It's more fun when cruising, for example, if you are familiar with the rules of the waterways, buoyage systems and locking procedures. Water skiing is more fun when both skier and driver understand and use recognized hand signals.

And here's a case where experience is not necessarily the best teacher; it's better to learn as much as you can beforehand.

SOME THINGS are pretty basic and should be common knowledge among all boatmen, whether they own eight-foot prams or 30-foot cruisers. In "Outboard Boating Skills," a booklet published by the Evinrude Boating Foundation, outboard authority, Everett B. Morris, lists the following eight basic rules of the water road.

Are you familiar with them?

1. Meeting — When two boats approach head on, each should steer to the right or starboard side of the other boat.

2. Overtaking — When one boat is overtaking another, the one doing the overtaking must stay clear of the one being overtaken. The boat being overtaken has the right of way.

3. Crossing — When two boats approach at a 90 degree angle, the one to the right of the other has the right of way. This is the same thing that applies when driving an automobile.

4. Leaving slips and piers—Boats leaving slips or piers for open water have no rights until they are entirely clear. They must proceed slowly and with caution.

5. Sailboats — Sailboats always have the right of way over power boats except in a rare situation where they are overtaking boats under power.

6. Fishing boats—Whether anchored or underway with nets, lines or trawls out, fishing boats have the right of way. Take it easy when passing a fishing party.

7. Tows—Under certain circumstances, power boats have the right of way over tugs with barges in tow. In practice, however, it is only good sense to yield the right of way since a small outboard is much easier to maneuver than a string of barges.

8. Boats in distress—If you are involved in a mishap or come across one on the water, it is your duty to render all possible assistance. A good boatman is always ready and willing to offer a tow or lend fuel to a fellow sportsman in need.

THESE ARE the eight basic written rules of the nautical road.

There are many other unwritten rules that come under the heading of just plain common sense. When in doubt as to what to do in a particular situation, put yourself in the place of the other boatmen who will be affected by your actions and then act accordingly.

You won't go wrong.

NO WONDER even the fishermen are becoming more tolerant of the water skiers. With a goodwill "ambassador" like this, skiing can't help but win friends. Besides, skiers and fishermen are becoming increasingly aware of each other's problems and taking added precautions not to intrude upon each other's pastimes. The lass is holding a slalom ski, used by advanced skiers who operate on only one slat.

Boating Buffet For 8

The buffet, once the province of the patio, has gone afloat as a delightful weekend ritual for many young sophisticates.

The growing popularity of boating has brought with it a flair for entertaining on the water. These young couples combine the fun of boating with a zest for dining al fresco.

As many of their contemporaries, each couple prefers a boat suited to their particular needs. Two of the youngsters skipper an outboard cruiser; two prefer a pontoon "float boat"; and two—who invariably go boating with friends — are owners of a sporty runabout. The three boats, rafted together, add up to a congenial setting for late afternoon buffets.

The menu on this occasion is planned around steak tartar and cold baked Cornish hen. Food is prepared ashore, kept fresh in aluminum foil and served on paper plates. Soft drinks for wine punch are brought aboard in portable ice chests. Bongos, guitar and a battered trumpet make for background music. The medley: Song, laughter and "bon appetite."

Cook vegetables separately according to directions; drain. Marinate each vegetable in ⅓ cup French dressing several hours; drain. Cut peppers in halves, crosswise; remove seeds. Fill red pepper halves with mixed vegetables; fill green pepper halves with corn; arrange on salad greens or serving platter. Garnish with marinated asparagus, scallions, celery sticks, cucumber slices, radishes, cherry tomatoes, parsley. Yield: 8 servings.

WINE PUNCH WITH STRAWBERRIES

1 bottle dry white wine, chilled
28 ounces lemon-lime soda, chilled
1 box fresh or frozen whole strawberries, thawed
1 lemon, sliced
1 lime, sliced

Pour wine and soda over ice in punch bowl. Add strawberries. Float lime and lemon slices on top of punch. Yield: About two quarts.

BUFFET FOR EIGHT afloat includes steak tartar, cold baked Cornish hen, wild rice ring served with game sauce, vegetable salads in peppers, party rye and dinner rolls. Bowl cut from watermelon is filled with fruit. Wine punch is served with strawberries.

Keep Family Meals Simple When Afloat

If the boat you own isn't a yacht, there's no need for Tiffany service when you're eating afloat.

If you're among the thousands of boat owners whose craft is in the outboard league —up to 20 or so feet in length —keep your meals simple. The simpler the better.

Here are some pointers:

Prepare your meals at home and bring them aboard wrapped in foil or wax paper.

Cold cuts, salads and fruits add up to pleasant eating on the water. Beverages and food can be kept chilled on the hottest days when they're brought aboard in portable ice chests.

Make use of paper cups and plates. They stow easily, don't rattle when the boat is under way and they can be brought ashore and be readily disposed of after each meal.

If your boat is an open cockpit type with ample space, a bridge table frequently makes a good accessory for dining afloat.

You'll find it advisable, however, to seek a protected cove, or sheltered anchorage, when you're about to dine. A boat in the water is constantly in motion. You can achieve the greatest stability, during dinner hour, by anchoring to a firm bottom. Frequently a second anchor, tied from the stern, will keep you from swinging in wind or current, both deterrents to quiet enjoyment of a meal.

ONLY JAM on the menu is this musical conclave. Youthful musicians turn buffet into a fiesta afloat. They're aboard a pontoon "float boat" ideal for leisurely lake cruising.

A Good Pair Of Binoculars Can Serve The Boater Well

Although you won't find them mentioned on many lists of suggested equipment, binoculars are highly recommend for outboard boatmen.

For one thing, they allow the skipper to clearly distinguish buoys and familiar land marks, even at great distances. Besides that, they make boating more fun.

If you're thinking about buying binoculars, a few words of advice:

BINOCULARS come in different and various price ranges and it's a good idea to learn as much as you can before buying them.

Binoculars, good enough for average use, can be purchased for about $25. But like any other precision equipment, the high end of the price scale is almost unlimited. The more you pay, the better quality you can expect to get.

Binoculars fitted with prisms are recommended. They have greater magnification power and field of view and are less bulky.:

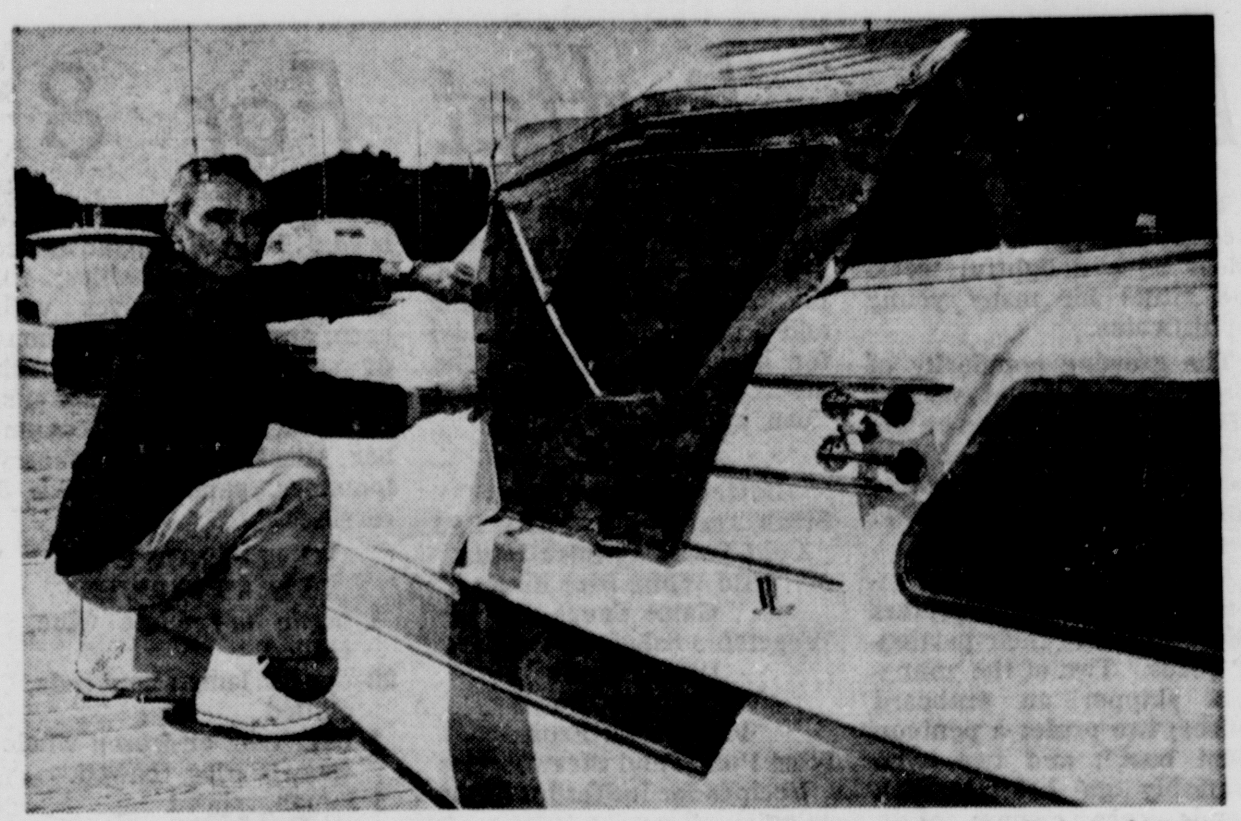

When selecting binoculars, you should be concerned with two numbers; the magnification power and the diameter of the objective lens. These numbers are expressed as 7 x 35, for example. In this case, the binocular magnifies seven times and has an objective lens 35 mm. in diameter. For all-purpose use, choose binoculars which have a six to eight magnification factor. Those that magnify less than six times are not powerful enough in many situations. Those over eight are too hard to hold steady.

MANY PEOPLE have the mistaken impression that the second number refers to the field of view. Actually, it indicates the relative light efficiency or, translated into everyday language, the ability of the user to distinguish objects more clearly in poor light. Binoculars with a 50 mm. lens, for example, are much better for night use than those with a 30 mm. lens. The disadvantage is that they are bulkier.

For average daylight use, either a 6 x 30 or 7 x 35 binocular is a good choice.

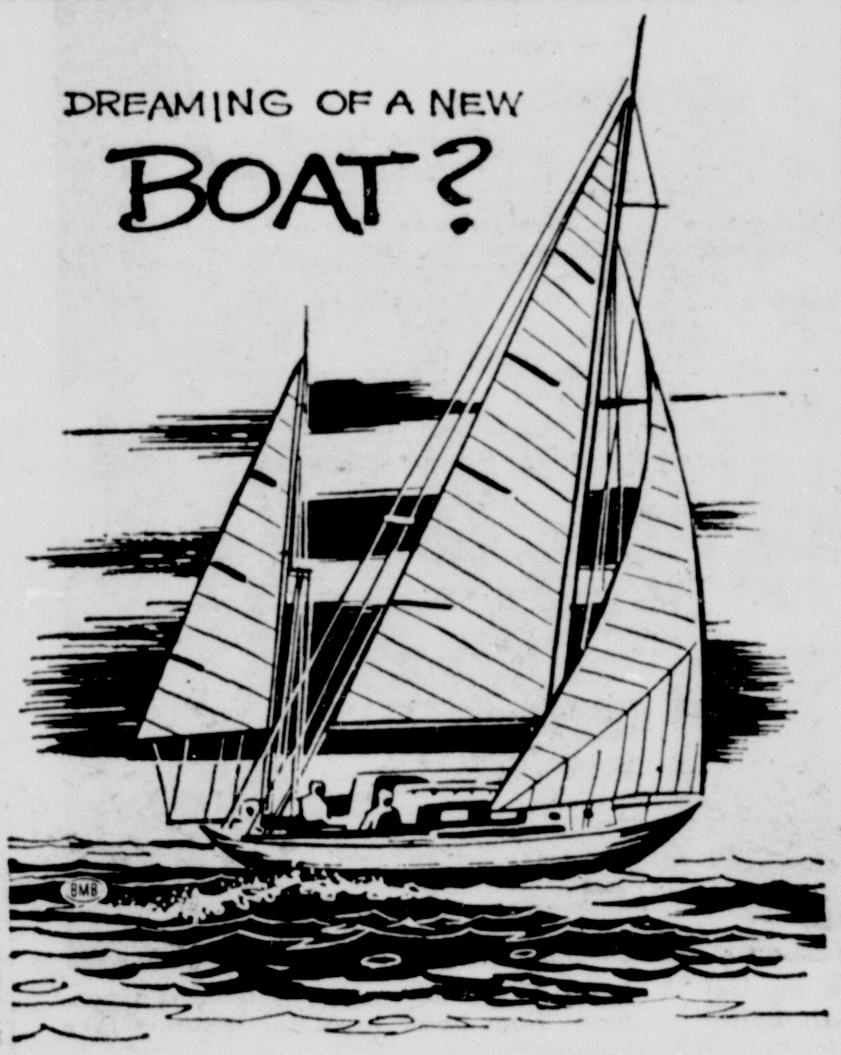

Lens coating is another thing to look for when selecting binoculars. This coating, which appears as a purplish tint, will reduce reflection, increase brightness and make distant objects easier to distinguish.

For better boating and more fun carry good binoculars but choose them with care. Binoculars at bargain prices are not always the bargains they appear to be.

THE KEEN INTEREST in boating in Marin County has given rise to a number of specialized businesses to serve the boating needs. One such is Haney & Whitt of San Rafael, a "trim shop" dealing in boating upholstery and canvas and their installation. Here Mick Haney of the firm is seen at work on the double flaps of his own outboard cruiser.

MARINE PROFILE

The average boat owner seems busier than an aardvark on an ant farm.

When he's not out with his boat, he might well be found playing golf, tinkering with his car or bowling.

THIS WAS discovered in a series of market research studies by the Outboard Boating Club of America. The studies were undertaken to find out who bought boating equipment and why.

In the course of the research work, many other facts about the boat buyer's personality came to light.

Mr. Average Boater is strictly a doer.

According to the surveys, the boat owner is more likely to be playing baseball than watching it on TV. In fact, he does more of just about everything than the man without a boat. The reports showed that he hunted, fished, swam, golfed and bowled more often than his boatless cousin. In addition, he found time to do more gardening, picnicking, pleasure driving and working around the house than his counterpart without a boat.

AT FIRST glance, you might think the boater was a bundle of nervous energy who must be doing something at every moment.

Not so, say the researchers. The boater can do his relaxing during periods of sedentary activity, such as cruising or fishing.

Researchers were quick to point out that taking up boating doesn't make the man suddenly take up other sports, too. Rather, boating appeals, in general, to people who like participant sports. This seems to be a reflection of the boater's personality — well-rounded, outgoing and fun-loving, but unsatisfied with only one form of recreation.

How does the non-boater spend his leisure time? The studies indicate that a good bit of it is probably spent watching TV.

ENJOY THE SUN, but don't try to get too much of it at one time. To prevent burning, and at the same time get a better-looking tan, it's a good idea to apply sunburn lotion to the exposed parts of your body.

Skill In Docking Takes Practice

Watching a skilled helmsman maneuver his boat alongside a pier or into a narrow slip is an interesting experience.

Although it looks simple or even automatic, you can be sure it takes some practice. If jockeying your outboard in close quarters is a problem, here are a few tips that should make it easier.

WHEN YOU want to come alongside a pier, it's best to make your approach it about a 45 degree angle. Keep a light hand on the throttle and when within 10 yards of the pier, cut your speed to an idle.

Coast the last several feet in neutral and just before the bow has a chance to nudge the pier, cramp the steering toward the pier and shift into reverse. This will swing the stern around and bring the boat parallel with the pier.

If a stiff breeze is blowing or a current is moving the water, try to make your approach into the wind or current, whichever is stronger. This will brake your forward motion and give you more control over the boat.

IF YOU must approach with the wind or current, make allowances for the extra push it will give the boat. In some cases be ready to shift gears quickly to control the motion of the boat.

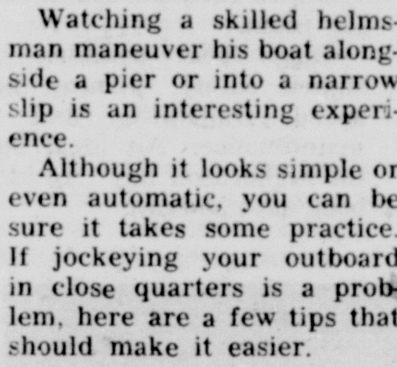

Remember, your standard shift outboard will shift easiest at idling speed. With the newer automatic push-button type, the throttle can be set at higher speeds and the boat maneuvered by simply pushing the buttons.

A couple of fenders placed between the boat and the pier will keep the hull from being scratched. Have the fenders attached and ready to flip over the side of the boat as you approach.

When leaving a pier, it's important to remember that your boat does not steer like a car. The stern will respond first when the steering wheel is turned. This being the case, never attempt to turn out sharply when the boat is snug against a pier. This can cause the stern to either swing into or under the pier.

IT'S BEST to shove the boat away and, when it is clear, shift into forward gear and proceed. If a wind or current is pushing against the boat, turn the wheel away from the pier, shift into reverse and back up until the boat is free.

A New Boat For Richardson Bay— It's A Flying Scott

CLIPPER YACHT Harbor partners Cliff Petersen and Shirley Morgan step the mast of their fibreglass Flying Scott. An ingenious tabernacle arrangement actually makes this a one man job, but two heads are always better than one . . . especially on a boat.

"If such an ideal body of water were in Southern California, there would be kids racing sailboats on it every day," asserts Shirley Morgan, whose Clipper Yacht Harbor fronts on Richardson Bay.

And, about that body of water, he continues, "We had so much fun on the Bay when we were kids, I want to see it used more."

The "we" includes his partner, Cliff Petersen.

Being unable to move Richardson Bay to the southland to give it more use, Morgan is trying other strategy. He is introducing the Flying Scott to the Bay.

Already a success on Tomales Bay, where there are some 14 such planing hull boats, it appears ideal for the Sausalito area.

IN THE DAYS of the Richardson Bay Yacht Club, Richardson Bay was a popular ground for small boat sailors. Today it serves as nothing much more than a passage from Sausalito to San Francisco Bay and beyond, with but an occasional race held there.

Morgan hopes to change all that by starting a class of Flying Scotts especially for Richardson Bay competition.

Why choose this particular boat? Morgan gives a variety of reasons.

The price is right. Slightly over $2,000. Maintenance is practically nil—quite an item on any boat. This one is of molded Fibreglass reinforced plastic with the color molded in. The spars are aluminum, the rigging stainless steel.

SAFETY? The Flying Scott is designed to have a positive righting moment even when she is on her side.

Add to this chair high seats which are watertight with the deck and in effect give an additional 12 inches of freeboard; built in flotation materials, several hundred pounds of reserve buoyancy, and the sum total is about as much safety as any boat can haul.

The outstanding reason for considering the Flying Scott as the forerunner of Richardson Bay's rebirth as a racing arena, however, is the performance of the 19-foot speedster.

First of all, it is a planing hull. It is generally agreed that the most exciting moment in sailing is when the hull lifts itself and literally skims over the water. This is planing, and while many boats will do it briefly at some time, the Scott is designed to plane easily and consistently.

The actual sensation of planing is known only to those who have experienced it and it cannot be described, according to Morgan. "There is nothing like it." And, once experienced, "you never get it out of your system," he says.

ALTHOUGH excellent for racing, the Flying Scott is a "fun" boat, suitable for the whole family. Another good reason for its introduction.

It is a stable boat, doesn't require a big crew, and yet is roomy enough for larger parties with adequate seating and leg room.

Large boat comfort, designed safety, planing hull speed, trailability, and no maintenance. An ideal boat for Richardson Bay? An ideal boat, says Morgan.

Be Sure To Keep Log

Small craft operators should not look on log keeping as an affectation or as a record that is of value only to the owners of large luxury cruisers.

An accurate log is invaluable to any boat owner. There are many instances when reference to a log may save a boat from destruction or help an operator and his passengers out of a dangerous situation.

Most marine dealers stock a selection of log books, but any sturdily bound ledger or note book will serve.

LOG KEEPING will have greater value if your boat equipment includes tachometer, water speedometer, stop watch and a compass.

The real worth of the log will be more apparent when you have an opportunity to evaluate the data after a number of cruises. In general, you cannot record too much information, though we suggest that you stick to a routine format.

Data that should be included for every cruise are time and point of departure, destination, gallons of fuel at start, number of gallons taken on and amount of fuel left at the end of the cruise. If your operation is on a waterway with navigational aids we suggest that you record the time you pass various buoys, ranges and otner land and water marks plus the indicated water speed, elapsed time, and engine revolutions per minute between various points.

IN ADDITION you should record your compass course between each logged aid. Wind, current and conditions of the water will be an important part of your logged record.

You may wonder how any of this data can be of value. Let's look first to the recorded information on fuel. From your log you will know how many gallons of fuel you consumed for a cruise of a certain number of hours or from a point of departure to your destination. This will serve as a guide to minimum fuel consumption expectancy and fuel cost for a similar trip at the same approximate speed. Based on a series of cruises you can calculate how many gallons of fuel per hour your engine will consume at various r.p.m and indicated speed.

Data on wind and water conditions should be referred to since a trip under calm water conditions will be performed in shorter time with less consumption of fuel than the same trip taken heading into a strong wind or fighting rough water.

WITH NO wind your compass reading will differ from the course required if your boat encounters wind on either beam or a strong cross current. Logging the same cruise many times over will add to your store of piloting information so that at night or in fog you can adapt your course and speed to existing conditions.

Your log will serve as a record of the number of hours of running time on your engine. This will forewarn you of need for engine tuneup, major overhaul, oil change, plug change or other maintenance needs.

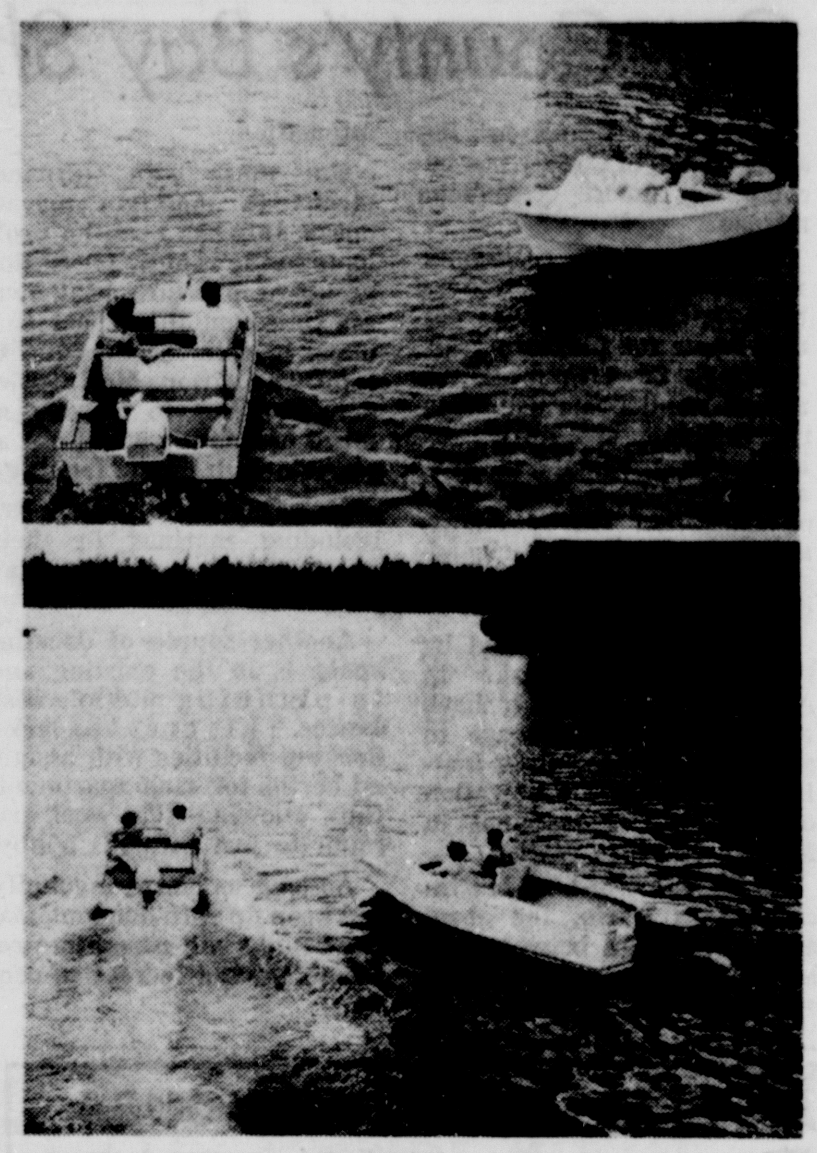

You may learn that your water speedometer is wholly accurate. More likely you will find it inaccurate by several miles an hour in certain speed ranges and a lesser amount in other ranges. From this you will learn that in using your speedometer as an aid in piloting you must compensate for its known errors.

DON'T ANALYZE the data and then rely on memory to serve you at a later date. Make up complete fuel consumption, speed-r.p.m. charts and keep these as a part of your log or post them near the helm.

With known accurate boat speed, a knowledge of the effect of wind, water conditions and current on your particular boat, you can determine in advance how long it will take you to go from point to point.

A knowledge of the length of time it takes to run between two aids to navigation will serve as a warning should you stray off course in heavy weather. The data also will provide the means to check on the condition of your tachometer, compass, or water speedometer should any of the three malfunction.

Three handy formulas can be applied to logged data to determine elapsed time, distance or speed. "Elapsed time" is figured by multiplying 3,600 (i.e., seconds in an hour) by distance and dividing by speed. Distance equals elapsed time in seconds multiplied by speed and divided by 3,600. Speed equals 3,600 times distance divided by elapsed time in seconds.

BOATS ENTERING a channel from the shore (top right) must yield the right-of-way to oncoming craft. They should proceed with caution until into the flow of traffic (bottom).

The Trailer Deserves Proper Care

There are some 3,200,000 boat trailers whizzing along the nation's highways today, sturdy vehicles that enable everything from light fishing craft to big cabin boats to cruise the highways as well as the waterways.

Proper care of your boat trailer will keep it rolling along for years, say engineering committees of the Outboard Boating Club of America.

If at all possible, avoid submerging your trailer's hubs when loading or launching a boat.

IF THE HUBS are submerged, be sure to repack the wheel bearings with grease as soon as convenient. Water dilutes the effectiveness of the lubricant and (especially salt water) rusts and pits the bearings.

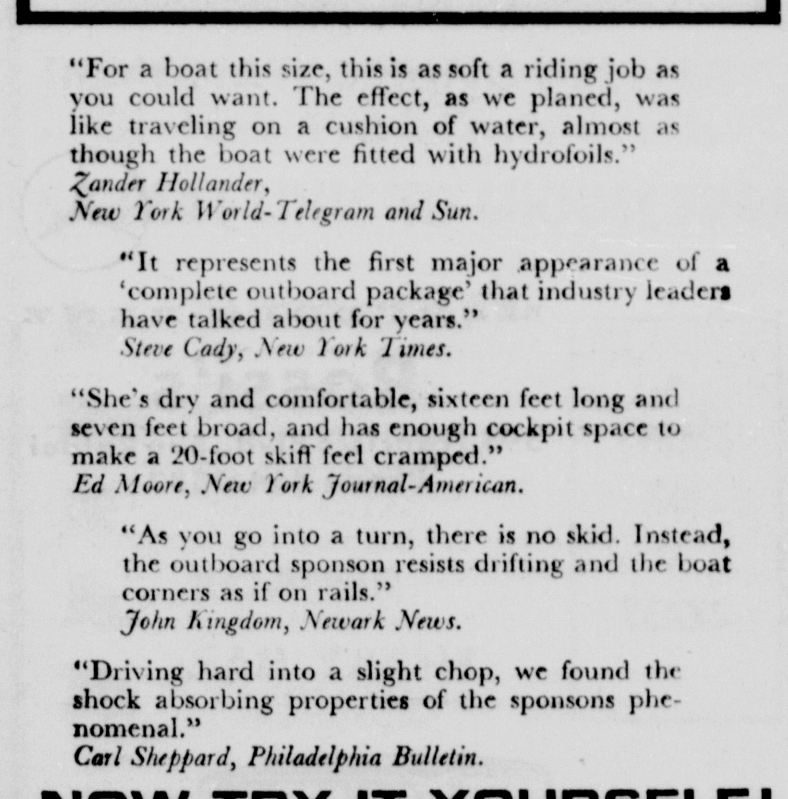

Don't make the mistake of installing a grease fitting on your hubs so you can repack the bearings with a pressure grease gun; the pressure from the gun will blow out the grease seal, which has the important job of keeping the grease in and water and dirt out. It also keeps grease off the trailer brake linings—and grease on your intake linings means trouble!

Submerging your hubs may also affect the brakes adversely—be sure to try a few test stops if your hubs have been in the water.

SOME OTHER tips on trailer care:

Make sure the hitch is tight;

Evenly distribute luggage or equipment carried aboard the trailered boat, and secure the outboard motor tightly on the transom.

EVINRUDE!

"For a boat this size, this is as soft a riding job as you could want. The effect, as we planed, was like traveling on a cushion of water, almost as though the boat were fitted with hydrofoils."
Zander Hollander, New York World-Telegram and Sun.

"It represents the first major appearance of a 'complete outboard package' that industry leaders have talked about for years."
Steve Cady, New York Times.

"She's dry and comfortable, sixteen feet long and seven feet broad, and has enough cockpit space to make a 20-foot skiff feel cramped."
Ed Moore, New York Journal-American.

"As you go into a turn, there is no skid. Instead, the outboard sponson resists drifting and the boat corners as if on rails."
John Kingdom, Newark News.

"Driving hard into a slight chop, we found the shock absorbing properties of the sponsons phenomenal."

Our County's Bay Shoreline Is Continuous Marina

The San Francisco Bay shore of Marin County has become an almost continuous marina.

Looked upon as a summer retreat by earlier generations, it has become the natural home for pleasure craft. Although the larger percentage of small boats using Marin facilities are owned by local Marin boaters, a measurable group, a recent State of California survey shows, are still owned by week-enders from less generously endowed localities.

The tidal wave created by the recent earthquake in Alaska, was reported to have caused extensive damage to small craf at one Marin marina. This is just an indication of the vast investment in Marin's pleasure craft.

As the value of land has increased in Marin, the economic contention between the home builder and the boat owners for the shore line has intensified.

For those with sufficient means to maintain private docks, this has been no problem. To the rapidly increasing group of pleasure boat owners to whom their boat is a major investment, the squeeze is on. The various Marin cities are planning to absorb as much of this increased use as possible with public facilities.

Many Marin developers are including marinas in their single-family residential plans.

Another source of docking space is in the existing and in-planning multiple residences. This creates large docking facilities with assigned berths for each apartment; thus allowing the week-end sailor to live with his hobby.

As long as Marin ingenuity can keep up with demand, Marin County will remain a preferred aquatic recreation center.

READY FOR A DAY on the Bay is this merry group at San Rafael's "400" apartments. Built out over San Rafael Canal, this is one answer to combining docking space and living space. Docking space for craft up to 100 feet can be seen center background and berths for smaller craft are in the foreground. (Photos by Ken Molino)

SAN RAFAEL CANAL as viewed from the living room of an apartment in the "400." Docking space for pleasure boats is just below this balcony. The mildness of the Marin climate makes the above relation between living and recreation to be desired virtually the entire year.

Know Your Rope— Or Is It A Line?

When it's in a coil it's called rope. When it's cut into lengths for use aboard a boat, it becomes line.

But don't let this confuse you. The important thing is that you know your ropes and how to use your lines.

Good lines are a must for every boatman. Even the skipper of an eight foot fishing pram must rely on his lines when anchoring. The water skier is towed with a line. And lines, of course, are very important to outboard cruising enthusiasts.

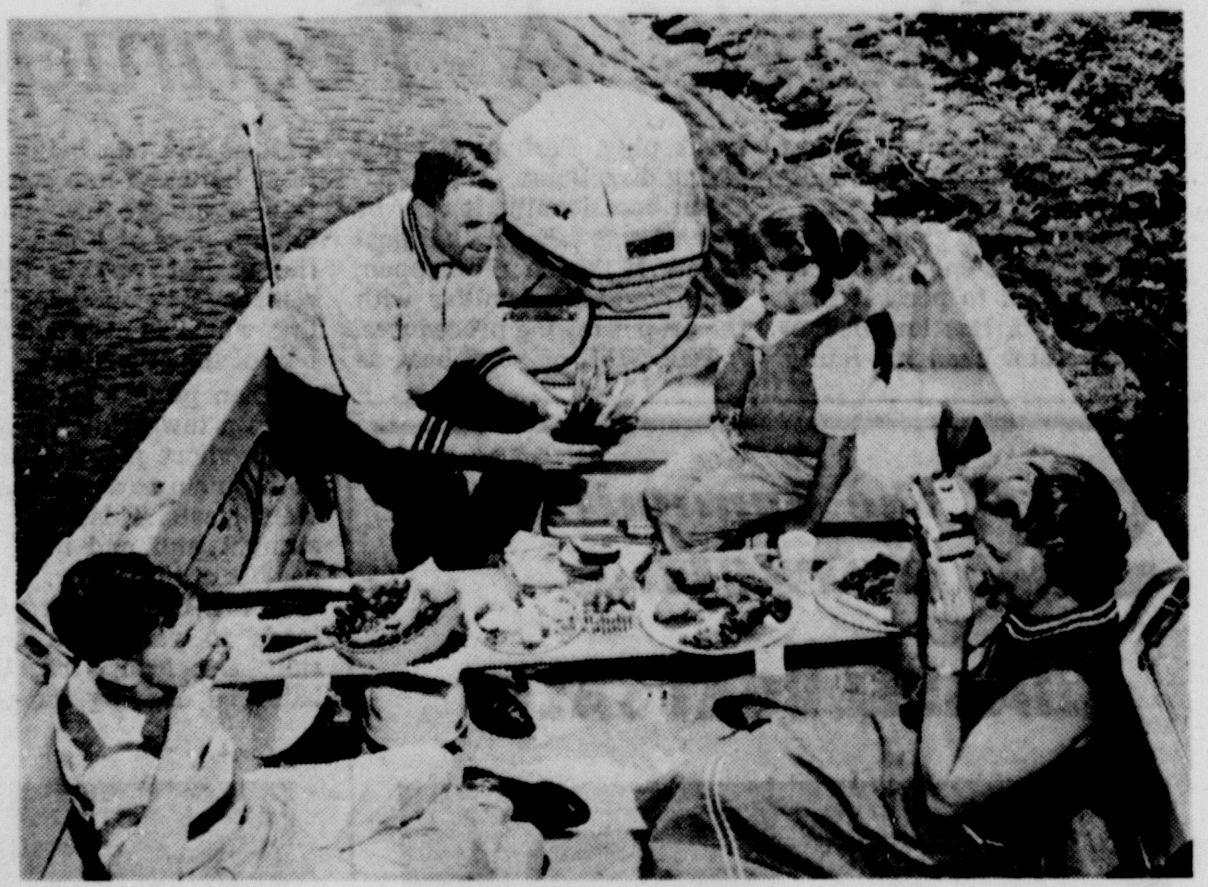

BOATMEN can choose from four basic types of rope: Manila, nylon, Dacron and polyethylene. But before buying rope, it's a good idea to understand the difference.

Manila rope, the old standby, has some advantages. It's the most economical to buy and is easy to handle. However, it is susceptible to rot and is not as strong as some of the synthetic ropes.

Nylon rope, while being stronger than Manila, is more expensive. It is also quite elastic which can be good or bad depending upon the use. Its elasticity makes it desirable for mooring and anchor lines but not satisfactory for water ski tow lines.

Dacron, like nylon, can be stored wet. It is stronger than Manila but not as strong as nylon. It does not have the elasticity of nylon.

POLYETHYLENE is the water skier's favorite. It floats, is quite inexpensive, is not elastic and is stronger than Manila rope.

WHEN IS A PAIR of water skis not a pair of water skis? When they are turned upside down, placed across the boat and used as a picnic table. A little ingenuity pays off for this boating family who like to spread out a taste-tempting meal in the boat after a few hours of outdoor fun.

There A Multitude Of Small Fry In The Boat Family

A small boat cruising around a harbor may be just a boat to some persons, but the Mercury outboard people point out it isn't so — each usually has a name to describe it. Among them:

SKIFF — This is another word to describe the common rowboat. It is fairly long in comparison to its beam, has a sharp prow, and usually is built with a flat bottom for greater stability.

JOHN BOAT—This is also a long, narrow craft which rates as a popular car-top boat. Among its chief design characteristics are low, freeboard, shallow draft and squared bow. It is designed to ride smoothly through small riffles, and is used primarily on rivers and areas that are well protected. It is definitely not a rough water boat.

DINGHY — Often called a "dink," this little craft makes a good beginner's boat for children. Though similar in design to the skiff, the dinghy is short (from seven to 12 feet) and light, and has a wide beam for its size. The term "dinghy" came into use in India and originally referred to the little utility craft carried aboard larger ships.

PRAM — A flat-bottomed boat similar in size to a dinghy. The difference is that the pram has a square bow.

RUNABOUT—Usually 14 to 19 feet in length, runabouts are outfitted for outboard or stern-drive power and have a forward deck and controls. An outboard of similar size, but with little or no foredeck, is often termed a "utility."

Marin Power Unit Teaches Fundamentals Of Boating

The United States Power Squadrons is an association of boating enthusiasts dedicated to the promotion of high standards in navigation and seamanship.

To accomplish that objective, the associated squadrons last year conducted basic piloting courses in 300 cities for more than 60,000 student-boatsmen.

An even more ambitious program is planned for the current year.

Basic piloting students learn seamanship, the rules of the road, small boat handling, the equipment required by law and its use, government regulations, aid to navigation, buoys and lights, variation and deviation affecting a compass, chart symbols, course plotting and safety afloat, during their studies.

The Marin Power Squadron is currently conducting two piloting classes at College of Marin in Kentfield and will graduate 100 students from those classes.

New classes will be offered free when the fall semester begins at the college next autumn. Information can be obtained from Jim Corbet, the squadron's public relations officer.

Sailboaters and power boatmen alike are eligible to take and certain to benefit from the course.

There's A Technique To Towing

Be Sure You Know How To Help Disabled Boat

A good boatman will always lend a hand to another boatman in distress.

Sometimes it's giving a man with dry tanks enough fuel to make it back to port. It may be helping a less knowledgeable operator change a faulty spark plug. Perhaps it's just giving directions.

But occasionally, it may be necessary to take another boat in tow. If this should happen, you should be familiar with the proper towing procedures.

THE SIZE of your boat as well as the one being towed must be taken into consideration. If you are towing a small fishing boat at a slow speed, the easiest way is to have someone in your boat hold a line which is attached to the bow of the other boat.

When pulling larger boats, make a tow bridle by attaching a short piece of line to both transom eyebolts or stern cleats. This will exert a straight pull and make your boat easier to steer.

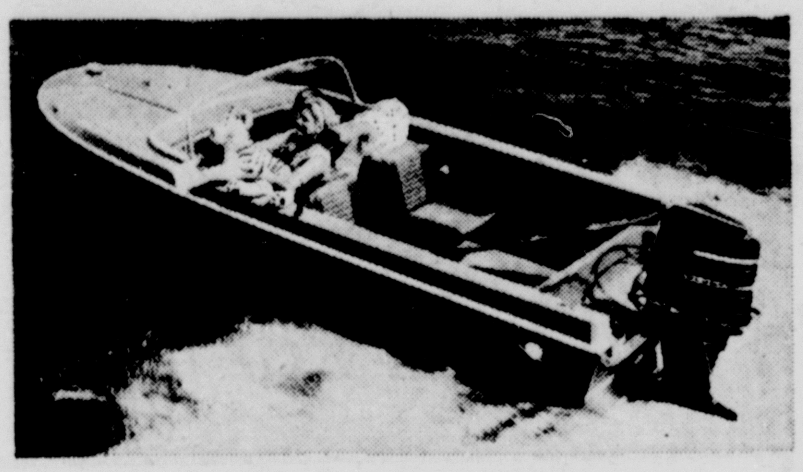

If the boat being towed tends to yaw from side to side, the load should be balanced. Moving the weight toward the stern will usually help. Otherwise, a heavy line trailed behind the boat will help to stabilize it.

UNLESS FOR some good reason you are in a hurry to get off the water, tow at a slow rate of speed. Take extra care when towing in a narrow channel or crowded area where other boats are moored, especially if a stiff wind or current is present. Since the boat being towed has no power, it is difficult for the driver to maneuver in such areas.

Give a tow whenever necessary, but remember to do it right and to take it easy. The skipper of the boat you have towed is sure to appreciate it and may some day be able to return the favor.

Take Motor Along

If you own an outboard motor sufficiently portable to carry in the trunk of your car, it will pay to take it along on vacation. According to figures from the Mercury outboard people, you'll have to pay $5 to $15 per day for the privilege of renting a fishing motor — when you can find one. Boats, on the other hand, are plentiful and normally rent for $2 to $5 per day.

BOAT LAW BOOKLETS AVAILABLE

California's boating laws affecting the registration, equipment, and operation of vessels, are now available in booklet form at no charge to boating organizations, Lachlan M. Richards, chief of the Division of Small Craft Harbors, announced today.

The new pamphlet, which includes all changes made by the 1963 legislature and subsequent regulations of the California Small Craft Harbors Commission, is currently being mailed to instructors of boating classes, members of the marine industry, governmental agencies and others who have a need for the legal text.

Richards pointed out that the division pamphlet, "ABC's of California Boating Law," which presents boating law in non-technical language, has been printed in sufficient numbers to provide every boater with a copy.

Copies of these publications can be obtained by writing the Division of Small Craft Harbors, State Building No. 1, Sacramento.

ALONG Marin's picturesque shorelines, you'll see boats of all kinds and all sizes, powerboats alongside sailboats, large yachts beside tiny craft. Regardless of their method of movement through the water, or their size or luxury, they are all pleasure craft indicative of the part which enjoyment of boating plays in life in marvelous Marin. Boat Owner Plays Role Of Philanthropist Unknowingly

American boat owners have joined the ranks of the philanthropists with a vengeance.

Their contributions on an annual basis puts them in the same class with the Fords, Rockefellers, DuPonts and the other fabulous "givers" of our history.

NO ONE has yet figured out the exact annual "take" for this kind of charity, but Outboard Boating Club of America estimates place it somewhere in the neighborhood of a whopping $46,483,469 that the nation's boat owners are giving away because they don't bother to claim their state and federal marine fuel tax refunds.

But in the case of the boat owners, the beneficiaries are not universities, hospitals, foundations and other good causes. The recipients are the state and federal highway funds where all unclaimed gasoline taxes end up as highway-building dollars.

Federal gasoline tax dollars available for marine fuel refunds are estimated at 17 million dollars, or two cents for every gallon of gas sold as marine fuel. State marine fuel taxes available for refund are estimated at $34,648,298.

BUT HERE'S the rub!

Boat owners claim only about 10 per cent of the funds available for refund, probably because of the red tape and the small amounts of money involved in each individual case, according to studies by states such as California, Missouri, Idaho and Michigan.

Check Your Propeller

A bent or nicked propeller will set up vibrations and may in time result in serious damage to the operating parts of your outboard motor. Losses in power and speed are other effects of a damaged propeller. Engineers suggest that you have your propeller checked periodically to be sure all blades are properly pitched.
